20 LOSE LIVES DURING WEEK-END

Eleven Persons Are Killed in Car Accidents in Canada

By The Canadian Press

Canada's first holiday weekend of the summer brought sudden death to 20 persons, 11 of them in automobile accidents as the populace flocked to the countryside to visit, bathe and picnic. Fifteen of the fatalities occurred in Ontario.

The tremendous flow of traffic on Canadian highways, mainly due to the fact Dominion Day fell on Saturday, was accelerated today as a holiday to take a four-day weekend.

There were three double-fatality ties, two in Ontario and one in Quebec: Mrs. James Rastorr, 76, of Hopkins Township, and Glenn Adams, 23, of Chatham, Ont. were killed when a truck driven by Bert Ashton of Chatham crashed into the rear of a parked car near Walkerburg, Ont. last night.

Police spotters failed to find a single violation. Crowds thronged the parks and gathered in front of beer gardens chanting "we want beer."

WOULD WARN DANZIG SENATE AGAINST MOVE

French Political Circles Favor Direct Statement Against Any Action

TO STAGE PLAN

General Maurice Gamelin Confers With Premier Daladier

Paris, July 3—(AP)—French political circles suggested today that France, Great Britain and Poland make a direct statement to the Nazi-dominated Danzig Senate warning against any move by the body to transfer the Free City to Germany.

French newspapers emphasized the suggestion as a sequel to French warning to Germany Saturday against any Danzig-Nazi aggression from you ready to help Poland if Germany forced her hand.

Independent newspaper Paris-Midi said the earlier admonition "implied a plan of having the Danzig Senate demand the Free City's union with Germany this weekend."

General Maurice Gamelin, Commander-in-chief of the French armed forces, conferred with Premier Edouard Daladier for an hour yesterday upon his return from an inspection of French defences on the Italian frontier. The commander-in-chief told the premier he was "more than satisfied with the defence line facing Italy."

BED THREW WOMAN OUT OF WINDOW

Seattle, July 3 (AP)—Mrs. Eleanor Bradley's bed threw her out of the window. The 22-year-old housewife was kneeling on the bed to close a window. Tricky springs upset her balance. She landed in the street below the window but was only bruised.

Traffic is at Highest For Dominion Day Fetes

Ribbons of traffic unrolled across Canada over the weekend as Canadians kept the Dominion Day holiday by lake, stream and shore, derided by thousands of vehicles from the United States, traffic in several provinces reached near-record proportions. In many centres the holiday was observed today.

Schoolchildren forgotten, youngsters piled in beside the grownups everything from the sleek limousine to the aged jalopy and highway officials from coast to coast were kept busy earning the money.

For those that remained near the cities, sports events and patriotic celebrations held the spotlight. Many a stout caber was tossed at the Scottish games in Winnipeg. More than 5,000 persons turned out for a sports and one meet at Edmonton where most of the racing honors went to a woman, Mrs. T. B. King. Mrs. King rode five horses, winning with two and placing second on a third.

Old Fort Erie Dedicated

At Fort Erie, Ont., an international gathering of 1,500 saw old Fort Erie dedicated. Members of the Ontario Cabinet figured in the ceremonies marking the opening of the 1812 stronghold as a national historic site.

Holiday-makers across most of the country were fortunate in drawing blue skies and bright sunshine. The Maritimes alone were seriously affected by rain. Sports meets scheduled in the three seaboard provinces were washed out.

At Sydney Mines, N.S., the downpour held off long enough to let trotting devotees complete their first harness meet of the season, but another meet at Truro, N.S., was curtailed by rain.

Scenes of Gatherings

Quebec and Ontario roads were streams of traffic with Americans, beginning a long Fourth of July holiday, joining Canadians in heading for the woodland playgrounds. Malartic, Que., was a mecca for miners from many northern points. Some 2,000 persons flocked to the town to watch the men vie in an annual meet that included drilling, mucking and athletic events.

Crowds from both sides of the border converged on Woodstock, Ont., for the annual Caledonian games. More than 9,000 persons turned out to shatter all previous attendance records.

CHURCHILL MAY ENTER CABINET, LONDON HEARS

Polish Newspapers Indicate Slight Relaxation of Weekend Anxiety

POLES LOOK TO BRITAIN

Danzig Takes Measures to Mobilize Its Works for Defence of State

London, July 3—(CP)— Prime Minister Chamberlain, described in usually well-informed quarters as "seriously considering" reinforcing the cabinet by the inclusion of Winston Churchill, went to Buckingham Palace today for a noon audience with the King.

It was not known whether the audience was for the purpose of informing the King of an approaching cabinet reconstruction or to give him a general outline of the weekend alarms over Danzig—or both.

Official circles said Great Britain would make clear to Germany this week her agreement with Poland and France that any attempt to bring Danzig into the Reich would be resisted by force.

It was understood the Prime Minister was considering inviting Mr. Churchill, wartime cabinet minister, into the government and it was deemed likely that if he had come to a decision it first would be communicated to the King.

Hitler Has Seen Warned

Frederick Cocks, Labor, asked in the House whether the government proposed to take steps to inform Herr Hitler personally that any attempt to change the status of Danzig by force will be instantly regarded by the British government."

Shouts of "that has been done!" came from the Conservative benches before the Prime Minister could reply. When he did speak he said:

"The position has been made perfectly clear by the Foreign Secretary"—an apparent reference to the speech by Lord Halifax last Thursday.

THREE KILLED AS CARS COLLIDE AT INTERSECTION

Alleged Death Car Came Onto Highway at a Terrific Speed

THROWN INTO AIR

Toronto, July 3—(CP)— Three Toronto people were killed today when two automobiles collided at the intersection of Highway No. 7, just four miles north of Toronto. The dead are S. H. Scholey, 55, Canadian National Railways clerk, his wife, and Mrs. Ethel Caulton.

Five Toronto persons were injured critically. They were Esther Brady, 19; Winston McMillan, Mr. and Mrs. John Caulton, 27, and Mrs. Charles Phillips.

Police were told the Scholey car came on to the highway at a terrific speed and hit a car driven by Caulton.

The car carrying Caulton and Mrs. Phillips was turned around twice by the force of the crash.

The Scholey car was thrown into the air by the crash, hitting a hydro pole and fell back on the ground and continued for 25 feet in the air, and finally came down in a ditch, 75 feet from the point of impact.

Hospital authorities said Mrs. Phillips and Caulton did not appear in critical condition. Jack Lang was unconscious when admitted and his injuries were not immediately learned.

Mrs. Brady's condition was considered serious. Doctors said her spine may be fractured. McMillan's condition was serious. He suffered head injuries.

Danzig Involves Vital Issue To Both Poland and Great Britain

By J. C. STARK
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, July 3—(AP)— With conspicuous unanimity the British press has launched broadsides to the public opinion at home and in Germany—that Danzig is a war and involves a vital bond to Poland and Great Britain.

At the same time some sections of the press declared that Premier Chamberlain's proposal of a Moscow trip to the Free City during the past weekend to a French Cabinet meeting in Paris, French firmness in what was called a "war of nerves."

There was speculation whether the Anglo-French barrage of warnings had any effect in postponing or averting a crisis over Danzig. But memory of the situation in May, 1938, four months before the Czechoslovak crisis, dampened any feeling of optimism in British circles.

As that time rumors swept Europe that Germany planned a swift coup to the Reich before Britain and France responded with military precautions and warnings. The result encouraged feeling in some quarters that Hitler was "frightened off." Yet the crisis came later, in September, and the Munich conference enabled Hitler to achieve dismemberment of Czechoslovakia.

And on a recent visit to the farm of his son, Elmer, in one day he picked 5,943 potato bugs. That Grosert added, was "not counting the baby ones."

WIFE GOES BY TRAIN

At Interview at Brockville Smith Refuses to Tell Reporters Why He Had Come to Canada

Brockville, Ont., July 3—(CP)—Dr. James Monroe Smith told reporters here today he was not guilty of any misconduct of the affairs of Louisiana State University of which he was President until a week ago, and declared he was going back to Baton Rouge "to help clear up this matter."

Held here on embezzlement charges since he gave himself up to Brockville police Saturday night, Dr. Smith declared there had been no improper use by him of university funds. There are no outstanding bonds of the university that can not be properly accounted for, he asserted.

"You claim you are not guilty of the charges?" he was asked.

"Of course," he replied.

"And you are going to fight the charges?"

"I am going back there to straighten them out" or to assist in straightening them out," Dr. Smith said.

The educationist said he did not know when he left Baton Rouge with Mrs. Smith eight days ago, that any charges had been preferred against him.

Interviewed at Hotel

Dr. Smith was interviewed shortly before Louisiana State Police officials reached here to return him to Baton Rouge by airplane.

"Why did you come to Canada?" a reporter asked.

"I do not care to answer that question," he replied.

"I want to say that I have been shown every courtesy and consideration by the Brockville Police," he added, "and that goes for the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, too."

Dr. Smith posed for news photographers in the corridor of his hotel room, consenting to see the photographers and reporters on condition that Mrs. Smith would not be intruded. She did not appear.

They said airplanes were active on both sides, both for bombing and reconnoitering.

The communiques said they captured 30 tanks when their infantry encountered a Mongolian corps of 100.

Lake George, N.Y., July 3—(AP)—New York State today dedicated a memorial standard to Father Isaac Joques, martyred French missionary, on the shore of Lake George, which he discovered in 1646.

Chief Justice Frederick Crane of the New York Court of Appeals, in unveiling the $75,000 memorial, recalled that Father Joques left France in 1636 to become a missionary among the Indians of Quebec. SIXTY-FIVE BOYS START FOR CAMP

Bound for two happy weeks of vacation at the Belleville Boys' Camp, Moira Lake, some 65 teen-year old lads gathered at the Y. M. C. A. early today and were transported to their summer camp and vacation grounds by truck. Each camper carried his own personal effects, bedding and other camp essentials, but a more happy lot of boisterous youth has seldom been seen vacating the city. Singing camp songs the caravan left for Moira Lake shortly before 10:00 this morning. The Belleville Rotary Club is sponsored by the Y.M.C.A., under the auspices of the local Rotary and Kiwanis Clubs. Those in charge of the camp this year include A. E. Smith, camp director and H. Vaughan, R. A. Beach, O. Kemp, F. Styles, J. Seymour and A. Cooper, all supervisors with government qualifications in their respective fields.

The section of the park will be levelled and graded after the concrete slab is removed.

RIPE TOMATOES IN CITY GARDEN

A record that may not soon be equalled is held by Walter Breach, 68½ Cedar Street, who informed the Ontario Intelligencer today that ripe tomatoes were picked from vines in his garden on July 1st. This is a most unusual occurrence as tomatoes don't usually ripen and also from the fact that the spring has been backward with respect to growth.

Gaining entrance by means of forcing a rear door, burglars stole goods to the value of over $10.00 from a small concession booth located along the Murray canal over the week end. The break-in was discovered by Mr. Hubert Ellis, proprietor of the concession booth when he opened his place of business early Sunday. Provincial Constable W. E. Smith of Belleville investigated and was informed that only chocolate bars, cigarettes and confectionery had been stolen. The day's receipts are taken home each evening upon closing, Mr. Ellis told the authorities. A rear door was forced open to gain entrance.

The ever-popular "Blue Danube" waltz the Strauss composition which will lift you right off your feet again lasts even if the Vienna and Austria waltz knew its composer have been swallowed up in Nazism, has been turned to a new lilt, that of the swing, by Lieut.-Col. Reginald Hinchey, under the title, "Swing the Blue Danube."

REV. DR. FLETCHER DULY INDUCTED

Enters Pastorate of Marmora United Church by Impressive Ceremony

Marmora, July 3—(Special)—With Rev. W. J. Scott of Stirling presiding, assisted by Rev. D. T. McClintock and Rev. L. S. Wright of Belleville, Rev. Dr. W. P. Fletcher was duly inducted into the pastorate of Marmora United Church on Friday evening in a service which was most impressive. Following prayer and reading of portions of scripture by Rev. W. J. Scott, Rev. D. T. McClintock addressed the congregation on what he felt he would expect of the congregation if he himself was being inducted. In course of his address he quoted words from Dr. Road book on Sociology where the writer declares "Concert fires people to a certain degree of performance they rarely reach alone." Through sayings of Jesus Christ, the speaker also showed that while God is the God of the individual, it must not be overlooked that He is the God of the aggregate also. Regular attendance at church was among other things stressed by the speaker, as to be expected from the congregation. Rev. L. S. Wright addressed the incoming minister on "The Essentials of a Minister's Efficiency." At the conclusion of the service following the benediction by Dr. Fletcher, Rev. W. J. Scott called upon H. W. Sabine and Mrs. W. J. Park to introduce Dr. and Mrs. Fletcher to the congregation. Mrs. Gordon Jarvis was hostess at a reception held in her home on Friday afternoon in honor of Miss Hilda Bonter, whose marriage took place on Saturday.

TOURIST ARMY GROWS STRONG

Sleek Water Craft Visit Harbor and Streets Lined With Visiting Cars

The tourist army over the week end gained in strength and numbers, arriving in and leaving Belleville in their scores by automobile and boat.

On Saturday and Sunday numerous large and small craft bearing registry of United States lake ports churned the waters of the Bay of Quinte entering Belleville harbor from the east and west. Several of the craft tied at the harbor overnight and continued on to the regatta at Picton early this morning.

Thousands of dollars were represented by the sleek boats which have become as streamlined and pleasing in chrome and copper as the latest cars on the highways. Many of the boats were sloops and yawls from Toronto and Oshawa ports.

Equally quiet Front Street this morning as automobiles bearing licences representing the majority of the States of the Union south of the border passed while occupants scanned road maps, or searched for open stores, where purchases could be made. At the tourist camp and on Victoria Park many of the visitors rested and lunched briefly.

GLERKS, WORKERS ENJOY HOLIDAY

Bright July Weather Attracts Thousands Into the Country

Store clerks and office workers enjoyed a perfect holiday today, one enjoyed by many as the cool and bright sunshine prevailing from dawn till dusk.

Though the city faced the anomaly of some of the offices operating all week, namely those of the Provincial and Dominion departments, Belleville Sunday was a standstill during the day, and Front Street took on the deserted appearance of a summer Sunday.

Scores of boats piled the waters of the Bay of Quinte, and many of them were loaded and gone with their passengers early in the morning headed down the bay for Picton where speed races today are attracting crowds from throughout the Province. Other boats headed for the many fishing spots, and bait dealers reported heavy sales of supplies to the angling.

Still others of the city holidayed the day in the district by motor. Quiet shaded spots in the immediate rural district attracted picnickers, and the parks were well laden baskets. The Scuttle hole, Massassaga Point, Consecon and the Sandbanks in Prince Edward County all reported heavy crowds of visitors enjoying the water and perfect weather.

KELLEHER SHELLED

Stan Spratt Given Fine Support as Locals Boot the Spheriod

Scattering seven hits carefully, Stan Spratt pitched the Napanee Gibbards to a 13-3 victory over Bud Wilkins' Belleville nine in a Bay of Quinte League fixture at the Fair Grounds this morning. Walt Gerow's Napanee boys shelled Lefty Kelleher in the Belleville mound role, for 13 hits and a total of six runs. Chuck Barriage was rushed in to relieve Kelleher and halted the slugging Gibbards until the ninth when they again broke out to score the visitors' runs.

Loose baseball in the field and errors in the pinches paved the way for a Napanee lead and ultimate victory as the former were held the ball for four of their five runs on errors in the early sessions. Spratt, was given fine support as he weathered a third inning attack in the big frame, which was the victim of tallies as the results of hits by Sero and Jocko.

Errors Costly.

Errors started the ball rolling in the initial frame as Sero threw wild to Collins, and Jocko did a frequent run. In the third McQuaid and Riggs rumbled and interspersed with hits, Napanee scored three. Doubles by Gerow and Jocko and singles from the bats of Isard and Kinkley gave Napanee two more runs in the fourth and Kelleher derricked in favor of Chuck Barriage, starting his first game of the day for Quinte's Bay of Quinte this season. From the fourth until the opening of the ninth, Spratt allowed but three additional singles, but in the fourth as a big parade followed by two walks and four hits, including Jocko's hard triple and errors by Collins and the visitors. Belleville left two stranded in their half of the ninth.

McCutcheon supplied the fielding features with a pair of passes attempts around the host corner, while Kinkley's stab of Green's liner in the second and a Belleville double with this sensational play. Spratt's wicked eight while Kinkley struck out seven in the nine innings on the mound. The Napanee boys played better defensive ball than the home sters and were also the aggressors. The two teams meet this afternoon in Napanee.

CHAPTER I.

Reuben Likens Exile

Lyddon Strang was waiting under the clock on Platform Number 3 when the London train arrived into Manchester.

Catherine saw him from the window of her carriage, and the sight was like a first stab of the returning past in her heart, at once most grateful and most poignant.

The year of her exile in France seemed to dissolve in a moment before the first glance of those eyes which had watched her set out, here, from that very platform, as a pale wreck of the woman she was now. It was the self-same moment; she remembered every detail of it. Only she herself was changed.

Lyddon, with his astonishing gift for looking cool under any disadvantage, carried a sheaf of yellow roses in the crook of one arm and came bounding across the platform with the post office staff could see him now!). But she dropped the window and called out to him as he came; and her smile as they shook hands met was almost as radiant as his. It was not forgotten even if she was still a place for her. Lyddon knew a good deal about life; he did you know I was coming by this train? I've written to no one but Mabel."

"I've been phoning her every day for days past, week. Did you really think I should let you pass through without seeing me? A year! It's been a century. Are you really well now? No more relapses?"

"No more, I swear it. How long have we? Five minutes? Get in and talk to me until the train leaves."

There was nothing he desired more. He closed the door upon his entrance, and they were alone in a queerly intimate isolation, the activity upon the platform waved away. They looked at each other, and the old constraint fell upon them.

"I hardly knew you, Catherine. How nice it is, Catherine."

Haven't called you that for a year. I was looking for a ghost again, I think, and behold, in an Amazon! I've brought you some chocolates and things, but I'll not give them them upon the already littered seat. I can't suppose you want them, but one does it. I'd have brought you something better if I could; but, Catherine, I'm glad you given up wanting the moon!" He smiled at her, and there behind the pleasure in his eyes the old, patient bitterness.

"No," she said slowly, "no, I've not given up wanting the moon. But that's another thing, and the same; they mean much more than they think. Lyddon, you've had a journey do you know, I've had a stupid feeling that I should never reach Great London at all, that something would have happened to it while I was away, and that I'm nearly home, and someone has remembered me."

"Every moment of every day," he said very simply.

"And I know I'm sorry!"

"You were very ill; I don't believe you know how ill. Catherine, there's so much I want to say to you; now most of all, I will be had longer. You'll let me see you soon?"

"Of course, if you really want me. I'll ring you in a day or so, shall I? I'm not presenting I know you'd understand it all—I can think of is getting home." She smiled, half in apology, "I've lived for a year on the memory of it."

"Such a quiet little place to call you so strongly," he said, regarding her curiously.

"But my place; and always will be."

"I wish I knew how to make you look like that about me."

She did not reply, but she felt the moment stilling in her heart to a crisis as altogether unexpected. They heard the hurried clatter of wheels and hasting feet fall back from them, and a great gust of steam cut them off for a moment from even the realization of a world beyond the clouded glass. They were utterly alone and had only a moment now in which to readjust their lives, either into the old, easy friendship or—

"Catherine," said Lyddon Strang, "you marry me!"

There was a brief pause; she dared not let it be more than brief. Doors were slamming along the train, nearer and nearer to their isolation; and Lyddon, even in this desperate moment, had his hand upon the door, and his foot braced for a swift leap to the platform.

"No, I won't marry you. But if it's any consolation to you, I never liked you so much as I do now, at this moment."

"It isn't. Why won't you let me take care of you? Have you the self-assurance to tell me that you've everything you want? You don't know what you want; and you know how much I love and want you; you've always known. Why won't you?"

"Because I don't love you, my dear."

The train began to move.

Strang let her go with a rapid gasp, as he jumped down from her window. His face was of a deathly pallor.

"But this is not Geoffrey, either."

"That's why I am so determined not to accept a second best this time." Her hand, his hand in the instant before he withdrew it from the window-frame, were the moon more than ever. I'm sorry."

"No need; I understand. If ever you want anything else—no matter what—I'm here, Catherine, at least—anything in the world—"

Bryceton Abandoned

She heard no more, and her own uselessly reply was lost, as the train gathered way. She saw him stand motionless, with the sun upon his fair head, and then Catherine sat back in her corner with a helpless sigh, and tried to think of the day she had left Marle in Bayonne. It was a strange homecoming, after all, but not stranger than the brief distress was the speed with which her mind threw itself back into the past. Joan was three stations out from Stanchester, driving with her husband, upon the platform, she had forgotten Lyddon Strang.

She felt her heart stir softly, as if it had been asleep for a long time, and was only just waking now. She sat forward, and looked out at the landscape.

Straining her eyes through the dusk, she could just make out beyond the hedges the dim shapes of rolling green of meadows. This was the country she had known as a child, away from it for over a year. Already she was in the jurisdiction of Bryceton, and Bryceton belonged Court Harwell, Court Brandon; Bryceton was home. Home!

The train drew slowly out of the station, and the dusk pressing against the lighted windows defied her to unveil it. She was aware of lines of scenery which ran with the wind, of trees which she could sighed with a deep, passionate pleasure. Then she tried to go on thinking her letter, to Joan, which had been begun only a few miles out from London.

"—I shall be home in about a quarter of an hour. I'm almost sick with joy at the thought, because it seems too good to be true. I shall be with you and Joan, and you and Fernand have been to me; but you'll understand, I know, that I'm coming home in my own place, and I sit. I belong to the soil of Court Brandon as many ways as you do. Joan's children are mine. I've been forestated for centuries in the Court Brandon estate, as my husband's family lived at the castle. I've lost my husband and I've lost the relic of what they stood for; because I couldn't bear to live in the rooms of his people. But that doesn't matter what happens. It must be the blood of all my own ancestors that is in me, and it is to this place. It isn't simply the beauty of it, though there is that, and I simply that—well, there isn't a field along this railway line that doesn't make a thrill of the clay of Court and Fernalls; and I'm coming home. Perry, I can hope, even if I wanted to. To the end of the world, I still be a homesick fre fields and valleys.

"Only five minutes now I should to see the Castle, but after that I'll be glad to go dark to make out much and from the station I can add home. At the end of the to it was sold long ago, nephew of my husband's only at the outlying edges of the fields where they had been there were still the broken stumps of trees. Instead, where the trees had been, these had been blasted out of the ground. Over the raw wounds there was spread a debris of progress, stacks of wooden beams covered with tarpaulin; one or two large sheds of corrugated iron, a square red-brick building with frosted windows, the bright orange of heaps of sand, and the tiger Indian red of partially finished bricks.

Outlined among these various signals of construction ran in a straight row the shapes of future houses, near to more progressive of cord- bond, cement foundations, beyond again the beginnings of walls: simply curious cabalistic signs as yet, but some day to be, she could tell at how many feet, but she thought almost fifty—small, semi-detached, workers' houses. At the far end of the row stood a workman's shelter, a hut built of red eye of fire in a brazier in front of it.

On the other side of the lane the process had not gone quite so far; but the trees, the clear lines of her babyhood were down and dead, the scatterings of their lopped twigs and branches smothered the ground in the grass; and the positions of the houses were pegged out there as many as the opposite row, she thought even more.

She stood on the crest of the road, and looked at desolation like that of a modern battlefield, where she had hoped to find all the peacefulness of the past; and that was her homecoming.

After a while she stirred herself and walked down the lane to where it. Beside the corrugated storeshed which glittered so like silver in the dying dusk there was a little pile of neglected odds and ends of building, a bag vanished, with a mortar had been mixed, a trowel, a couple of sack-barrows, and a large letter "Hanwell and Glover, Builders and Contractors, Stanchester." The name stretched the building, with its frosted panes, she took to be an office. Inside one of them should have been there. Good enough, kind enough, useful enough, but not the old, familiar people of the bachelor station-master.

She was alone.

She raised her eyes, and saw above the near roofs the outline of the Castle, a square of trees, and far off the loom of the Castle on the Stanchester road. The last train of the train almost before it had stopped, and she had stepped out with an appreciative glance. All her misgivings vanished. The very air smelled as she remembered it, of lime trees in full bloom. Nothing was changed, nothing could be brought exultantly, could ever be changed in this dimension the present.

The porter at the barrier knew her at once, and his face lit in a smile which made her heart leap again. There was no longer any doubt in the matter of her welcome.

"Mrs. Court, I'm glad to see me," she said as she proffered her ticket.

Very pleasant surprise, too, Mrs. Court, take my word for it. Everybody's glad to see you back, and looking so well, too."

"I'm glad to be back, I can tell you. It seems much more than a year to me since I went away. Everything the same? Joan and all?"

"Yes, Mrs. Court, and Mr. Perry, but it doesn't matter tonight. Will you get someone to fetch up in the morning?"

Once out of the station, and down the chalking narrowness of the railway carriages, the dusk was not so deep. She turned into the lane mellow like a conqueror, with the self-possession of a grandmother. Seven-year-old Catherine Perney who had met and married Geoffrey Court, and who, in her turn, never been either wife or widow, would have shown more pride than she had first been, half of her an unreality which was all the earth and air, half a steadfast memory of the old itself, and of the Catherine Court who went to make up the sol.

The sound of the four lanes she stopped, and looked all round. There was the Castle, at the top of the hill, with its stook, a lofty distant rise beyond the near and slight one, against the sky and heaven. There were the twisted chimneys of her childhood, built as the Castle was, of the trees on her left hand. It was, she knew, as familiar as before. Then a doubt assailed her. She did not know what she had expected, but it was something. The tree-tops which should have shown, the roofs of green roundroom just above the skyline of the lane were no longer there.

"They cut off the view from the house," she said, half aloud, "and the new tenant didn't like it, and has had the trees cut down." But she was not satisfied.

She went on, more quickly, because she was in a hundred yards ahead the lane was at its highest point, and the ground began drop through the village; and from that point she could see the river, the bridge, the high-backed houses, the woods, spread in a narrow, gently rising amphitheatre before them. She resolved it, and looked eagerly forward.

The dusk was not yet so heavy as to disguise the scene. She wished night had covered it. She could quite still, while all the exultation ebbed slowly and sadly from her mind.

There had been trees to the left and to the right of the straggling road which ran between the cottages There were no trees now, rattle-trap like a shot. As it is, you've walked; I don't know whether you ought to be walking yet—ought you? Let's have a look at you!" He stood back, and his eyes, with an artist's quick eye like time, but with a subject; and an adoring subject at that. She was more than aware of him, a beautiful woman to Perry. He had adored her through ten of his twenty years, and she was a habit to him now.

"Yes. They have put you together again, haven't they? Quite nicely, too. You're looking awfully fit, darling. I think someone ought to propose a vote of thanks to France and the Perronels. I don't believe you know what a wreck you were when we sent you abroad. It was a ghastly business, wasn't it? That awful smash, and Uncle Geoff's death, and then that long, long, dragging recovery of yours. Once we thought you'd lost you, but we didn't dare admit it. Oh, don't let's talk about it! Let's be free by the hands to the hearth. Dear old hall! Have a drink? Have something to eat! You must be tired!"

"No, darling!" said Catherine. "I'm not hungry; nor tired, even, though I suppose there's a little sinking abnormal in that. But Perry—"

"It's nice to have you back," he interrupted entumultastically.

"Perry, who's bought up all that ground along the valley?" she remarked.

"Hanson help us!" said the young man, his contentment collapsing with a groan. "I was hoping you hadn't been along the lane. If you'd turned straight in here you wouldn't have seen it."

"I walked into the middle of it all. I'm glad I did. I'd expected death. I came here because I have seen it. I want to know what's happening."

"I'd Like to Shoot Him"

"Heaven knows it's happened. Someone has hit on the bright idea of building houses all round Court Brandon. There's no end of money in house-property, I'm told, in the big industrial cities—village greens, roses round the door, and all that. Somebody's bought up all the property in the village, and is building up two independent bits like your dingle; and how they little tin-pot houses be means to build I don't know, suppose it was bound to happen once or later; but I'd like to shoot the chap who's doing it, all the same."

Catherine heard this bitter and not unnatural recital with a still face, though her colour ebbed and flowed a little from skin to skin. Only the light in her eyes and the rare fireside corner redeemed from stern utility to comfort by the flickering shadows of the lamplight and a large basket, chair. All the rest of the room was in shadow, a space round the clay torso of a straining athlete, which stood upon a high stool in the middle of the floor.

Perry Dunstan was invisible from the doorway, but a blue coil from the depths of the basket-chair betrayed his presence. Catherine closed the door, and he heard the click of the latch, turned his head, and craned his head round the back of the chair without altering his position in any other way. Then he came to his feet nimbly and jumped to meet her with a smile which was pleasant to see.

"Catherine, what on earth are you doing here?"

"Coming home, I thought," she said slowly.

"No, but what I meant is, why didn't you let me know you were coming tonight? I'd have been down to the station with the old

Without moving or appearing to hear him Catherine said: "What are you going to do about it?"

"Do? I'm going to put out, like a sensible person. I'm going to try and get Mickey Dennis on the phone, or the nearest possible approach to it, and settle there and another Probert comes and turns me out of it. Or if I can't find such a place I'll go back to London. Anyhow, that's got a character of its own. And I advise you to do the same."

She said deliberately: "No, I'm not going to turn my back on it. There must be something we can do."

"Do, darling!"

"Meaningless!" said Catherine scornfully. "What does he know about it? He's never lived there. He doesn't know what it was like in that place. Neither do you, or you wouldn't run away from it. I'm staying."

"But what can you do?" Perry demanded miserably. He sprang up and began to walk restlessly about the room. "What can you do? Much better get out now, and forget it."

Catherine rose' "I suppose I must go. I'm late, and Mabel will be wondering what's up."

"I'll walk up with you," he said, relieved at the change in the subject and in her tone.

"No, please. I'd hate to make you do that. I shall be quite all right." She hesitated, staring at him. "What did you say this man's name is? The man behind this building scheme?"

"Prosser. Some rich business magnate from Stanchester, named Adam Prosser."

CHAPTER II.

Contact With the Enemy

Catherine had meant to go straight home, but when she came to the top of the hill at the further end of the building area, and saw the lights of the village below, twinkling in the moonlight some hundred yards away from the nearest house, it was with no impulse to look at it again.

She passed along the little stretch of lane which separated her from the first new right hand house, and the green hedge of alders, the ground fell away to the hollow valley which was her own private possession; on her left the once all hedgerow timber gathered up by the roots with tractors. Much of the hedge lay in great heaps where it had been gathered from the lane shadowy black now in the night. She saw across the caring emptiness where the tall bushes had been, the watercourse of the dingle, and the silver glint of the corrugated iron store-shed which Perry had erected at the end of the car. "Tom, do you know who that man is? See, there he is, by the shed. Probably a builder's master. He drove up in this car, and—Perry-Stanchester—surely Court Brandon are rare."

"Of course, madam," said the chauffeur, and his features she point-ed. "Only he isn't a stranger to these parts, so much, but of course you wouldn't know about him, after you've been so long."

"Why, who is he?"

shadowed by its trees It remained the most happy of waters, remote in a sort of dreaming peace, with nothing sinister in its quietness.

Catherine's past seemed to her like a letter, a series of letters, wrecks along the green shores, which was now a new surface in the hollow which was not peopled by herself and some whom she had valued. She had played there in childhood, had brooded there, had—the one thing for which she abhorred—consented to be grateful—consented to marry Geoffrey there, in just that angle of the trees. Then she had stooped so low to its reflection, "I could marry me," he had said, "and you'll love me some day" I'll make you love me. I'll make you so happy that you'll have no choice."

So she had married him; and they had been fond of each other with a complacency which was not even unsatisfying. He had not made her love him. She did not know why, for the form of love had been there, and only the last living part had evaded them.

And now Geoffrey was dead, eighteen months ago; and she was back in the place where she had received in the motor accident which had killed him.

Presently she turned back up the ferny path. She latched the gate carefully behind her, and walked for a pace or two with her chin on her shoulder, she collided, gently, with a man who had just alighted from a car opposite the entrance to the drive. Adam Prosser, and smiled again "I know it's impertinent to come back running Cain for years about the way people were being driven into town by the housing scheme; but perhaps there were no houses being built to accommodate them. I'm sure the three councillors can't make the land less valuable by the sheer force and sparsely-covered bones.

Intense details, these, to remember or to observe one to make contact by moonlight, and she was not even sure that she had seen them, that they had not been stamped into her consciousness by the intensity of her emotion.

"I beg your pardon!" he said in his deep, hurried, rather nervous and that was all. He was stepping over the brambles of the hedge from the hawthorn hedge; and she was standing in the lane looking after him.

Voices roused her. Two men were coming along the lane together and the nearer of them was the golden Perry's rosiest.

"Jordan! It is, you, Ian't it, Tom?"

"Well, now, Mrs. Court, I'm glad to see you home again. It's a fine night for walking. I'm sure. How long have you been back?"

"I only arrived today, Tom." She was not looking at him. With head bowed, she was gazing at the ground of the car. "Tom, do you know who that man is? See, there he is, by the shed. Probably a builder's master. He drove up in this car, and—Perry-Stanchester—surely Court Brandon are rare."

NEW WORLD CELEBRATION

New World lands have reached a good age. Barbados has just been celebrating its three hundred years of particular attachment. The island now acts in closest co-operation with all the West Indian Islands. It was in 1627 that King Charles First granted the island with others to the Earl of Carlisle. It has been a British possession since 1625 and in 1752 was visited by George Washington and his invalid brother, Lawrence.

Barbados remains the military headquarters in the West Indies. It is under a governor, assisted by an executive committee and legislative council, all appointed by the King, and a house of assembly elected by the people.

MODERN TORTURE

Pictures have been issued showing torture cells used, it is claimed, in Spain during the recent civil war. Some of these means of torture of prisoners were devised by an inventor, who faces death after trial by a court.

There are in museums torture chambers and implements of torture preserved from what are called the Dark Ages, and they were brutal but if all that is claimed for these modern tortures is true the inventor had a mind probably keener on human suffering than any ancient because he knew modern methods.

Surely there is no greater degradation of the means of science than inventions to destroy life and mind.

ANZACS' DEFENCE PROGRAM

The Australians and New Zealanders are awake, stirred over the events of the past and the talk in the Orient. A New Zealander has been ill-treated in Tientsin. There is no doubt in the minds of the Anzacs that Japanese would welcome the day when they might move over to these great dominions to conquer them for colonies. Japan has a rugged climate and a land that is too small, while these Dominions are large and have an ideal climate.

So the Anzacs are preparing defences. They are far from British aid in an isolated part of the world. Their populations are not large and they are making tremendous strides in their naval programs.

Australia has planned to spend about one third of a billion dollars on defence, and this year her outlay in this respect is to be $150,000,000.

TREATING POISON IVY EFFECTS

The Department of Agriculture gives the following method of treatment of poison ivy effects:—

"There are still many sequestered nooks and rocky beauty spots beyond the reach of the plough where poison ivy may be encountered. Poison ivy prefers the wildwood, so do holiday makers. Hence the need for caution.

"Poison ivy has many guises. It may appear as a low shrubby patch, or as a fence border, or as a climber like the Virginia creeper. Each stem of poison ivy bears three smooth, even glossy leaves. Those of the Virginia creeper are in fives. In early summer poison ivy grows whitish flowers on green stalks, later to become dull whitish berries, each the size of a field pea. The Virginia creeper which is not poisonous has clusters of blue fruit on red stalks.

"The active element of poison ivy is an oil which permeates the plant, in the root, stem, leaf, flower, fruit, and even to the easily detached hairs. Breaking or bruising any part of the plant liberates the oil to come in contact with the exposed parts of the person touching it. The first sign of infection is usually a slight itching, followed by a faint blush of the skin. The itching increases and from a few hours to days perhaps, numerous blisters, or there may be only one blister, appear. In mild cases, immediate scrubbing with strong laundry soap will effect a cure, if the scrubbing is done before the oil really penetrated the skin.

"In severe cases, the treatment most widely recommended is potassium permanganate which has for its purpose the destruction of the poison itself by oxidation. The parts are swabbed with a three per cent solution, made somewhat weaker if the skin is particularly sensitive. Once blisters have been formed, rubbing should be carefully avoided. If baking soda, boracic acid, or other cooling substances are used, no application should be made when the sores are open. Otherwise a dry bandage is necessary. Lotions are to be avoided. A

A VAGABOND SONG

There is something in the autumn that is native to my blood—
Touch of manner, hint of mood;
And my heart is like a rhyme,
With the yellow and the purple and the crimson keeping time.

The scarlet of the maples can shake me like a cry
Of bugles going by,
And my lonely spirit thrills
To see the frosty asters like a smoke upon the hills.

There is something in October sets the gipsy blood astir;
We must rise and follow her,
When from every hill of flame
She calls and calls each vagabond by name.

"NEWSPAPERMEN ARE PEOPLE WHO SIT BY AN OPEN WINDOW," remarked a noted author once upon a time. "They sit by an open window," said he, with fingers in one hand and flower pots in the other . . . And sooner or later everybody passes under that window—and it's a lot of fun." This was said apropos of a biggety swell-head who thought he could push newspapermen as dirt, and get away with it.

CONEY ISLAND HAS LONG BEEN NEW YORK CITY'S CHIEF SUMMER AMUSEMENT RESORT where prices are low and the sky is the limit for fun. Coney Island is not an island, just a chunk of Long Island, mostly sea beach, not far from Brooklyn and Manhattan. Lest visitors to New York this summer think the World's Fair on Flushing Meadows is the whole thing, this is to remind them that Coney Island, birthplace of the "Hot Dog," is still functioning on all cylinders and drawing its millions of city dwellers and visitors who seek the cooling breezes down by the sea. The sea breezes generate robust appetites and Coney Island has developed all kinds of dishes and tit-bits to satisfy that longing for something new and tasty. Latest dish from Coney Island state that popular eats this summer include toasted rolls and bacon, with clams and shrimp cocktails for contrast. Chow Mein reigns supreme on the Boardwalk with Sunshine Cocktail and Shore Dinner as alternative. Then there is the Hero Sandwich, which consists of a loaf of Italian bread with ham and Swiss, American or Bel Paese cheese, hot corn and frankfurters get a heavy plug, and a new dish which is very popular with the hungry throngs, "Frozen Mustard," which was invented by mistake during an experiment with the new ice cream mixer. Of course when it comes to the weiner wurst there is always the famous Coney Island Hot Dog to fall back on, a creation, born in Coney Island which neither ridicule nor falsehoods nor funny stories have been able to kill down through the years of steadily growing popularity. You haven't seen New York if you haven't seen Coney Island.

BEHIND THE SCENES are often more interesting comedies and dreams than before the footlights. Much has been written about the Royal Tour, so much that newspapermen begin to look upon it as a closed book, but occasionally little stories come to light worth repeating even at this late date. Anna Eleanor Roosevelt, wife of the President, authors a daily newspaper column of comment which is featured in a number of newspapers in the United States. In this column she lifted the curtain on a melodramatic jinx which made the Royal Sunday visit at Hyde Park somewhat of a nightmare to those directly involved. Said Mrs. Roosevelt:

"At Hyde Park the servants we brought from Washington suffered a jinx which ran its course in three mishaps. My mother-in-law's serving table in the dining room has a centre standard. Too many dishes were put on one side, and in the middle of the dinner the table tipped over. No one could think for a minute because of the noise of breaking china. . . . Later in the evening with a tray full of glasses, water, ginger ale, and bottles, one of our men going into the big library, slipped and dropped the entire tray on the floor . . . And as a final catastrophe on Sunday afternoon my husband, moving backward across the grass by the swimming pool, almost sat on another tray of glasses and pop bottles." However all's well that endswell.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

When parents with sons and daughters in their teens or twenties think of how hard those children work at school, factory or office, and then think of the vacation plans of these young people they may be greatly worried.

Why? Many of these young men and women plan a vacation that means hiking, wheeling, rowing, riding, canoeing all day and perhaps dancing until midnight; five or six nights each week. Is it any wonder that many of them come back tired mentally and physically? And it may be many days before they are in good physical condition again.

Yet those who know young people best tell us that during the entire year these young people have been planning what they want most to do during the two or three weeks of their vacation And it is this doing what they planned to do that seems exploited them.

Notwithstanding that it means much happiness and satisfaction to do what one wants to do, nevertheless when one is "ready for" or "in need of" a vacation, both the mind and body are usually tired. To put the body under the two or three days of strain and stress that many of them come back to, is a big mistake.

I usually tell friends and patients that the biggest factor in getting the most out of a vacation is unquestionably doing what one wants or has planned to do—and this can be done and yet the individual can return home strong and refreshed from his vacation.

There is but one suggestion that I continue to make and that is that as far as much mental and physical work is crowded into the last few days before going on a vacation, the first thought after arriving at one's vacation spot is to rest completely for two whole days. This allows the body to gain strength, and then this added strength is available to enjoy the vacation.

Similarly, before the vacation period ends one should again give the body the last two days for rest. It means arriving home strong and rested instead of weak and tired. This method, which apparently costs a loss of four days in vacation, really means a gain, for while the vacation days are shorter in number they are longer in enjoyment because there is strength with which to enjoy them.

Reviewed Volunteers

As proof of Britain's readiness, King George and Queen Elizabeth, standing in Hyde Park under gray skies and windy weather, reviewed 20,000 men and women, national service volunteers, who will be mobilized in national defence in event of war.

It was the first time in this country's history that a King has reviewed such a volunteer corps, which Mr. Chamberlain characterized in his speech as "the fourth arm" of Britain's defences, standing side by side with the auxiliaries of the three fighting forces as a definite part of the organization of the country's protection.

"We are living in critical and dangerous times," said Mr. Chamberlain, "but let no one make the mistake of supposing that we are not ready to throw our whole strength into the scale if need be to resist aggression, whether against ourselves or against those whose independence we have undertaken to defend."

Impressive Demonstration

The King's message, after expressing pleasure at the marchpast said: "To us it was a most impressive demonstration of the spirit of service which is in the hearts of the young generation today, and which shows itself in the determination to make the country ready to meet any emergency, whatever the sacrifices or inconveniences entailed."

Bonarlaw—At the last regular meeting of Springbrook Lodge I.O.O.F. No. 429 on Tuesday evening two splendid reports of the Grand Lodge session recently held at Hamilton, were received.

They were given by Past Grand Lindsay Mumby, Springbrook Lodge representative and Past Grand W. J. Barlow, who was appointed District Deputy Grand Master, Madoc District No. 45 at this Grand Lodge session. There was a splendid attendance to hear the reports and after the business session the Noble Grand, Bro. Bert Bamber, treated all present to fresh strawberries, ice cream and cake and some fine cigars. Bro. Mumby provided smokes for all.

It was decided at this meeting to hold decoration service the second Sunday in August at the hall.

About seventy-five persons gathered in the Sunday School rooms of St. Mark's Church on Wednesday evening of this week and presented Miss Leola Pollock with a purse of money and other useful articles. Miss Pollock has taught the junior school Section No. 5 for the past eight years and having secured a school nearer her home which is at Keswick, Ont., she will not be returning here after the holidays.

An address was read by Miss Iva Brown expressing the sorrow of the community and wishing her success in her new field of labour. Miss Pollock replied in a few well-chosen words thanking all for their many kindnesses and co-operation during her stay here and for the beautiful gifts. Other speakers were Rev. Canon Swayne, Rector of St. Mark's Church which Miss Pollock attends; Messrs. G. S. Eastwood and Thos. Prior, members of the School Board. Mrs. Lindsay Mumby and W. J. Barlow, Mr. J. F. Baker acted as chairman and thanked Miss Pollock for her assistance in the Sunday School where she has taught a class of girls for a number of years.

A program consisting of community singing, a reading by Margaret Barlow harmonica solo by Ray McLaren and a contest by Mrs. Jason Baker was given. "For she's a Jolly Good Fellow" was also sung and three rousing cheers given. A splendid lunch was served by the committee in charge after which all joined hands and sang "Auld Lang Syne." All Miss Pollock's pupils were present.

Gossip Writers Busy

Mr. Bennett, never communicative about his personal affairs, keeps London gossip writers and Canadian newspapermen guessing when they try to draw from him admissions that he intends:

1. To accept a peerage and a seat in the House of Lords.

2. To accept a House of Commons seat.

3. Marry.

They find, in the end, they cannot convince themselves that anyone has offered him a peerage or will or that he would accept one if one were offered.

Recently when he was showing a friend around his home he paused opposite a door, nodded at it with a grin, and said: "That's Lady Bennett's room."

"And who," asked the visitor, "will be Lady Bennett?"

"That I cannot say," replied the former Prime Minister. "We have not met yet."

Arriving in London on their return home, the King and Queen are shown passing through Trafalgar Square on their Coronation visit, and said "Welcome" through wide

Mr. Bennett will live in the midst of a 16-acre estate, next door to his old friend, Lord Beaverbrook. Lord Beaverbrook, formerly Max Aitken, was Mr. Bennett's law apprentice when they were youngsters.

AT THE McCARTHY

"BLONDIE MEETS THE BOSS"

The most human, wholesome, lovable family ever brought to the screen, Mr. and Mrs. Dagwood Bumstead and Baby Dumpling beaued upon the comic strip created by Chic Young, which features Arthur Lake....as Dagwood, Penny Singleton ..... as Blondie, Larry Simms....as Baby Dumpling and Daisy....as himself, are now presented in their second feature made by Columbia studios entitled "Blondie Meets the Boss", which is now playing at the McCarthy Theatre.

Blondie continues to show the world who's boss in the Bumstead family, Dagwood continues to do the wrong thing at the right time, Baby Dumpling is still very much small, but he has got bigger and bigger ideas, than when first steal-ing your heart in the hit picture "Blondie" and last but not least Daisy still continues to lead a dog's life and loves it.

There is no other entertainment like this on the screen today, when it comes to the kind of do-your-heart-good laughter which the Bumstead's provide in "Blondie Meets The Boss" so make a date now to come and see a family picture that might be taken from real life of the family next door to you. As a co-feature attraction the McCarthy Theatre is also showing Warren William, Lola Lane, Ralph Morgan and Rita Hayworth in "The Lone Wolf Spy Hunt" which is based on the popular detective novels by Louis Joseph Vance that combines comedy-romance and mystery that at the midnight performance Sunday night was most pleasingly enjoyed by the large audience. A new "Screen Snapshots" featurette with Lowell Thomas in a real fine short subject presentation entitled "More Power to You" will also continue to be presented at each performance during the balance of time that "Blondie Meets The Boss" and "The Lone Wolf Spy Hunt" will be at the McCarthy Theatre.

AT THE BELLE

"GOING PLACES"

"Going Places," Warner Bros.' newest comedy with music, starring Dick Powell, will be the Belle Theatre's next feature presentation, starting Tuesday. Powell, who has proven himself a top-notch comedian in his recent pictures, "Cowboy From Brooklyn" and "Hard to Get," rises to new heights of hilarity in "Going Places."

Playing opposite Dick in this extravaganza of the Steeplechase is the beauteous Anita Louise. The rest of the cast is made up, principally of comedians including such experts as Allen Jenkins, Walter Catlett, Harold Huber, Thurston Hall and Minna Gombell. The one serious character in the story of any importance is played by the charming Ronald Reagan. And most of the musical entertainment burden is shared with Powell by those two great colored songsters, Louis Armstrong, who has no peer as a hot trumpet player, and Maxine Sullivan, the velvety-voiced songstress who specializes in syncopated ballads. "Going Places" incidentally, is the first motion picture in which she has appeared.

Four new songs were written for the occasion by the reliable team of tunesmiths, Harry Warren and Johnny Mercer. "I'll String A Kiss", is a romantic melody sung by Powell; "Mutiny in the Nursery" is a hot novelty number for the presentation of which Armstrong and Miss Sullivan, as well as dusky swing band and chorus, do their stuff.

Miss Sullivan Armstrong and his sizzling trumpet go to town with syncopated renditions of versions of nursery rhymes, and Miss Sullivan interpolated her own version of "Sing a Song of Sixpence," such childhood favorites as "Little Bo-Peep" and "Rockaby Baby", and the whole thing develops into a big jam session with Powell and Anita Louise also taking part.

"Oh, What a Horse Was Charley", is a comedy number, sung by and danced to by the Messrs. Powell, Jenkins, Catlett and Huber; "Vander Vegers Broadway," their song for a horse-yes, a horse—is sung by Powell, Louise and John Litel.

"Nancy Drew —Trouble Shooter", "Nancy Drew—Trouble Shooter", third picture in Warner Bros. popular film series based on the exploits of that youthful whirlwind, Nancy Drew, is the companion feature attraction with a cast that is again headed by Bonita Granville, John Litel, Frank Jenks and John Litel.

Again the indomitable Nancy confounds her elders by the shrewdness and courage she displays in solving a complex mystery which has baffled older if not better brains. And the success in this instance is more than usually pleasing to her father, because a $5,000 prize is served in the case and retold and falsely accused of the murder.

Another new angle is introduced into this third picture in the series, played by John Litel. The object of his romantic attentions is a Miss Rima Gregory, played by Charlotte Wynters, who thus makes her debut in the series.

Whether or not Nancy is to acquire a stepmother is a matter left unsettled at the end of the present film, but Nancy, who at first looked upon Miss Gregory with extreme disfavor, has become thoroughly reconciled to having her for a stepmother. Nancy's own boy-and-girl romance with Ted Nickerson, again of course played by Frankie Thomas, progresses in the new film to the point where the pals her first kiss from Ted.

The popular Belle news of the day will be exhibited on the same program.

"Heart of the North"

Entirely in Technicolor is "Warner Bros." action-packed romantic drama "Heart of the North", to be presented at the Belle tonight with The King and Queen in Washington and New York, and the Lido-Caleneto fight film.

Three Big League Contests Punctuated By Fighting And Realignment of Standings

Greenberg Fined $50 for Striking Kuhel and Several Players Banished

POP BOTTLES THROWN

Chicago Cubs Move Into Third Place Ahead of Cardinals

(By Judson Bailey Associated Press Sports Writer.)

All that most Major League players want is a fighting chance and they'll keep baseball safe from dissatisfaction as a parlor game. That was demonstrated yesterday in a rough-house three-game program for 196,338 patrons at eight parks.

Three contests were punctuated by fighting, firecrackers and pop bottles and in another three players were injured. But withal there was considerable good baseball and a realignment of the standings in both leagues.

In the National the league-leading Cincinnati Reds divided a double-bill with Chicago Cubs, winning the first, 11-4, and bowing the second, 5-8, to enable the Cubs to climb into third place ahead of the Louis Cardinals, who were beaten twice by Pittsburgh, 5-4 and 6-2.

In the American old Moses Grove of Boston Red Sox handcuffed New York Yankees on one hit for a doubleheader, 7-3, but the champions broke his win streak in the cap, 9-2. Washington Senators took over fourth in the standings by whipping the Philadelphia Athletics 4-3 and 13-2.

Pot on the Stew

Detroit had only one game, but put on the best show seen aside from the fact Tommy Bridges pitched a four-hitter against Chicago White Sox to win his 11th of the season, 5-2.

As an aftermath to Saturday's slugging of Joe Kuhel by Hank Greenberg, which brought a fine of $50 for Greenberg and an admonition from Umpire William McGowan to the White Sox for abusive language, Umpire Jimmy Dykes emptied his dugout yesterday.

He sent all the box players who weren't starting to the clubhouse to the centerfield pen, where they couldn't tease the Tigers. Then in the fourth inning umpire Ed Rommel called a ghastly third strike on Eric McNair, who threw his bat into the air and was quickly banished. That caused Dykes to forget about the chastening of his team's language and he got slapped. Ted Lyons were soon flagged off the field, too.

Dropped in Fight

Manager Casey Stengel of Boston Bees and Merrill May of the Phillies punched each other and were expelled at the windup. The fight collided with second baseman Ed Martin of the Bees. He tried to prevent a double play. Boston won both games, 5-3 and 4-3.

Fire crackers popped and pop-bottles were tossed from the ramparts of the Brooklyn baseball cage. Lee Durocher of Brooklyn Dodgers and Babe Phelps, occasionally amiable first baseman of the Dodgers, engaged in the mixed-weight championship of New York.

The Dodgers won the first game, 3-2, on Leo Hamlin's 12-in inning hook. lost the second, 8-4, to a home run that at which Durocher participated. Durocher stepped on Hamlin's ankle in a play at first base in the nightcap and Bonura threw the ball and his glove at Durocher and then jumped on him.

Struck on Elbow

At Boston catcher Gene Desaulels of the Red Sox was bowled over laughingly by Jimmie Foxx at the plate and had to retire for the day with a bruised arm.

Bobby Doerr was struck on the elbow by one of Jelly Gomez' pitches and taken to a hospital. Finally Heinrich smashed into the bleacher wall and cut his head in the last inning trying to field Tom Williams' home run.

Four stitches were required to close the wound, but the hospital said neither he nor Doerr was seriously hurt.

Cleveland and St. Louis Browns split a bargain bill, each game being won by five-hit pitching. Bump and Mills got the performance down first as the Browns won 4-3, while Feller had harder time the second, 3-2.

The Red Sox took the first of their series with the Yankees Saturday 5-3. Detroit split a bargain with Chicago White Sox taking the nightcap 4-2 after dropping the opener 6-5. Washington Senators downed the Athletics 5-4 and Cleveland Indians trounced St. Louis Browns 8-5.

In the National League's Saturday program Brooklyn Dodgers were beaten 5-2 by the Giants and Cincinnati took an 8-6, 10-innings decision from Chicago Cubs. Boston held the Phillies scoreless while they batted in six runs and Pittsburgh edged out a 4-3 decision over St. Louis.

New York, July 3 (AP)—Tag Boston College (along with Fordham, Cornell and Brown) as the coolest baseball team to seize in the eastern United States next year.... Jack Onslow, star first baseman of the losing club room at Polyclinic Hospital, Princeton, N.J., where Coach Spiedel Gardner whose both are pretty well known.

Willard Athalin sums it up nicely in the World-Telegram.... He says the guy who beats Louis must have the punch of a Dempsey, the speed of a Pastor, the youth of Schmeling, the confidence of a Galento, the coolness of a Schmeling, the durability of a Farr and the heart of a Braddock.

Yesterday's Stars

Buddy Lewis and Johnny Welaj, Senators: Lewis made unassisted double play, batted in Welaj, who hit homer with one on to win first game of doubleheader; allowed 3 athletics; latter, got four hits to drive in six runs to lead way to victory in nightcap.

Tommy Bridges, Tigers: Four hit White Sox pitcher to win his 11th win of season.

Howard Mills, Browns and Mel Harder, Indians: Each hurled five-hit game to divide doubleheader.

Ed Carnett and Al Miller, Bees: Lopen hit home run with bases loaded and Miller hit homer with two on in seventh inning to break up the game in 10-inning affair.

Bob Grove and Ted Williams, Red Sox, and Bill Dickey, Yankees: Grove muffled Yankees on six hits and Williams hit homer with two on in seventh inning to break the game and win for Boston. Dickey's home run with two on was big blast of New York's second game bombardment.

CANNIFTON BOYS LEADING LEAGUE BY FULL GAME

Defeat Shannonville While Latta Takes Measure of Foxboro

VIOLATING RULES?

Foxboro Hitting Light as Latta Hurlers Keep Them in Check

Foxboro, July 3 (Special)—With one half of the season's playing schedule completed and the teams now going down on the home stretch, the race for first place honors in the South Hastings League is beginning to thin out a bit. The Canniffon boys broke their first place tie with Shannonville and are now out in front all alone again today as they visited Foxboro Saturday night and administered a 4-2 trimming to the hometeam, while at the same time "Doc" Walsh's Latta nine broke their tie with Foxboro at the other end of the standings and are now in third place one full game ahead of Foxboro, who dropped back into the cellar with only two wins against five losses.

Shannonville came out on their chance to slap up even with the league leading Canniffon nine when they played hosts to Latta here Saturday night and dropped a 4-1 decision to the visitors to fall back into second place but one game ahead of Latta, who after a very inauspicious start are now beginning to clout the ball real hard and have not only won seven in their last four tries. The recent drive of the Latta club has been marked by a rather startling transformation in the personnel of their club and it is now developing into a team of these newly acquired ballsters, that they are now in the limelight.

It is taking rather too much for granted, however, for the Latta management to quit right now, we thought, that the other clubs have not been idle, which was laid down at the annual meeting of the league, when it was agreed, with the effect, that all players in the league henceforth must be strictly local talent, and that all imports be passed. Latta, along with the other clubs, are now living up to this agreement to the letter and the league officials ruled out of the league and all clubs were asked to release any only honehrews on their lineups. The past four games however, has been the visiting management's regard this ruling by injecting into the league several ball players who were ruled out and according to authentic reports are reported receiving their mail from the same office they did four years ago. We wonder if Mr. Grey can throw it away with it?

Saturday's woefully weak effort at the plate against the three hit delivery of Walsh was the worst Foxboro lads lost their fifth game of the season when they played hosts to the Latta nine and they only dropped a close 4-2 decision to the visitors but the manner in which they take ousted defeat in their last three starts was again the rating for Foxboro bowing to the visitors. Getting enough runners aboard to win the game was the main cause, the homesters just could not get their bats working for enough runs and with the bases well loaded in the fifth inning Foxboro lads with succeeding batters either fanned out or rolled weakly to the infield. Shannonville had their way by the Foxboro to win a ball game is by having the breaks of a close one to cut.

Shannitton went two up in the first inning when L. Jarrell singled after one was away to steal second and Ward Jarrell followed with a long blow. E. Jarrell was out but Curley Shannon followed Jarrell to the plate to score as the catcher tried to nab Jarrell at third. Shannonville then added two more in the third to make it 4-0 but Foxboro got one back in their half and added a run other in the fifth as Norm Guay walked, stole second, took advantage error and advanced on Wright's single. Pitcher Walsh scored Norm ing Guay but Walt and Peacock were out to end the frame. The box:

Canniffon: Gannon lf; Jarrell st; Shannon 2b; Jarrell ss; Jarrell c; Curley 1b; Loucks p; Parquahson 3b; Jarrell rf.

Foxboro: Noley, Guay c; Wright lf; Spencer ss; Walt 3b; R. Peacock 2b; Walsh p; Peacock rf; Norm Guay p; K. Peacock cf and Norm Guay 1f.

Score by innings:

Canniffon ..... 202 000 0—4
Foxboro ..... 001 010 0—2

JERSEY GIANTS ADD HALF-GAME TO THEIR MARGIN

Win Twice from Syracuse While Rochester Defeats Leafs

MARCHILDON WINS

Toronto Hurler Allows Only Hits in Defeating Buffalo Saturday

(By The Associated Press)

If they could only play all their games in their own section of the International League instead of making journeys into the north, Jersey City Giants probably would find a somewhat easier road to the pennant than they're travelling now.

It was in the southern sector, that the Little Giants took advantage of Rochester's skid to regain the league lead after losing it in May. If they didn't have to face the northern quarter, the Giants would be a lot more than the current 1 1-2 games over Rochester. The Jerseys have won 43 out of 35 games so far from Baltimore, Newark and Syracuse, and six of nine from Newark's Bears, 1938 champions and the most consistent rivals in the southern group.

Jersey walloped Syracuse twice yesterday, 7-3 and 5-4, and held a half game to its lead as Rochester won only a 4-2 decision from Toronto Leafs. The Little Giants, with Johnny Gee and Ken Strong hurling effectively, piled up a 26-hit total, bunching their blows for a five-run rally in the first opener and three three-run clusters in the night-cap.

Bears Now Third

Newark's mediocre victories with the league leaders to regain third place by a half game over Syracuse. The Bears walloped Baltimore, 8-1, in the first game as Buster Mills pitched a three-hitter and aided single to lead a 14-hit attack, then Norman Brenner, Bear hurler, lost his first bid and hung himself to an 8-1 victory with a home run and single. Then Jim Bivin stretched Newark's record to nine straight wins with the nightcap decision.

Down in the second division, Buffalo and Montreal divided a pair of slugfests, each marked by a six-run rally by the visitors. Ray Blosna took the opener, 1-1, as Ken Ash starred a shutout while granting 11 hits. Then the Royals banged out 16 safeties to defeat Jim Carnegie's 16th homer and one by Lou Boudreau.

Toronto Gets Split

Jersey's twin victory yesterday emerged a 6-2 rubbing line from Syracuse in their series opener on Saturday. In the other double-header fixture, Baltimore downed Newark 14-4, Montreal Royals defeated Rochester 6-4 and played to a scoreless tie in the afterpiece of their double bill while Toronto split a doubleheader with Buffalo, dropping the first 2-0 and taking the nightcap 4-1.

MAX SCHMELING WINS QUICKLY FROM HEUSER

Crushing Right Brings Disaster to German Champ in 47 seconds

70,000 SEE BOUT

Schmeling May Continue on Comeback Trail for Another Shot at Louis

Stuttgart, Germany, July 3 (AP)—Max Schmeling, after mastering again a trick he used to disable Joe Louis, hit the comeback trail for sure today with a 47-second conquest of the European heavyweight championship.

The former world champion snatched one of two European crowns awarded by Adolf Hesser, another German, yesterday in Nestens Dam Stadium before 70,000 Schmeling's hopes in New York, a year ago. And he did it with the same punch he used to KO the American negro two years earlier —a right cross.

A right to the temple which traveled only a few inches before it carried all the power of Schmeling's powerful body, stretched Hesser 70,000 spectators in Adolph Hitler arena gasped and then went wild with joy.

Hundreds stood outside his hotel for hours after the fight to cheer him to appear. That was sweet music for Schmeling, who has come home a year ago after his defeat by Louis.

Schmeling didn't wave his new crown at Louis. In fact he wouldn't talk about him in the dressing room after the fight.

"I am very pleased to extend his comeback journey to America, Max said:

"I want to have a few more fights first—either here or over there."

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with Ken J. Colling

Only last week we were speaking of the fine dirt track qualities of Bert Pallant, Belleville rider, who has been racing with success ever of late. Bert was racing at Oshawa on Saturday night during a crack up and spill had the misfortune to break his leg. This untimely injury at this time when Pallant was beginning to meet with better than average success and it was only unfortunate. Pallant was pressing hard Dempsey right out of the running in front of him giving him no chance to escape a crack up. The fractured leg was sustained as riders and bikes hurtled through the air. Young Pallant seemed headed for a brilliant racing season and the injury suffered by him puts him out of competition for the remainder of the season. It seems too bad that Bert started his career in Belleville and Rochester this week.

Making the best of their hike, Chuck Barcroft-Corbys gang managed to break the Sheet-Dyer-Corby record set last Friday, as Sweden's crew in centre field in the fourth turned the way for the Corby rally. The Oilers out-hit Corbys 11 to 9 as the latter were introduced to a new hurler from the sticks, by the name of Stewart, but Sweet Green Pea broke the game for him. Eddie Schreiber was the victim of the assault. The first two times up Nicky Soro hit home runs, and Corbys had four runs to their credit. Belleville Oilers then started the first inning rally for Valakadyn, but he failed to mystify the slugging Peeles, which is nearly about average, with the officials frequently rating off batters for the first two seconds of in their beds. In another game played at Point Anne Sunday afternoon the Dracup Tre by the score of 6 to 0 with pitcher Ken Dracup hurling effortless fine support.

The local Ki-Y softball groups of professional baseball, allowed Leafs on Saturday, so apparently Leafs are not what they were doing when he recalled Marchildon from Centreville. Both games were league games yesterday, fist fights, jockeying, ejections and all that go to make the old diamond game so colorful the Orioles 8 to 5.

JACK DEMPSEY QUITE IMPROVED

Former Heavyweight Champion Calling for Steaks Instead of Soups

New York, July 3 (AP)—There's no need to worry any more about Jack Dempsey. He'll look old age-pendicitis just as surely as Tony Galento kayoed "dat bum ann-nouncer."

The former heavyweight champion practically had his vital, abdominal area in worse scare than Lulu Angel Porpo did 16 years ago, don't like the count there. He dashed the "crisis" in his recovery from an acute appendicitis operation Thursday night without incident. His temperature was reported as normal yesterday.

The hospital stopped issuing bulletins on Dempsey's condition. The reporters, who had been hanging around the hospital floor for three days and nights, went home and Jack raised his voice in a demand for steak instead of the liquids and gelatine that have been his only diet.

Fourteen Carat Stuff

By MARJORIE HAYES

When the first clock in the little jewelry shop struck twelve Walt Sachs laid down the watch he was repairing and slid off his high stool. While he shrugged into his overcoat he glanced over his shoulder to see if anyone were watching him, but the boss and Joe were both busy with customers.

Cautiously he slid open the drawer under his work shelf and took out a tiny parcel wrapped in tissue paper. He and Joe usually lunched together, but today he didn't want Joe around. No one letting anyone else in on this business, he thought, as he dropped the parcel into his pocket and hurried out.

In a dark little restaurant, he ordered coffee and pie. Then he unrolled the tissue paper and drew out a ring with a solitaire diamond. What he had to do now was get rid of it.

An hour later that was accomplished to his satisfaction, and in the back room of an unbelievably dirty shop he waited while a shaddy old Jew in a skull cap counted out a pile of crumpled bills and pushed them across the table to him.

That evening when he climbed the long three flights to his flat, a big box under his arm, Walt's feet dragged wearily but there was about him an air of pleased expectancy. At the sound of his key in the door his small blond wife came running from the kitchen.

"Wherry, Trudy?" he asked.

"I sent her on an errand by the store."

"That policeman of hers? He has not been around? I don't want to set eyes on him just now."

"He never comes so early. Did you get it done? What have you in the box?"

"Here, I will show you. Quick, before Trudy comes!" And laying it on the cot that served as a couch he snatched off the cover and drew out a white satin wedding dress and a long, tulle veil.

Anna bent over it, her hands clasped in delight. "Wunderschon! She will look like an angel in it."

A moment later light feet came running up the stairs and the doorknob turned. Walt hastily pushed back the bolt and a young girl stepped in.

"Hello, Dad!" she cried. "What's the big idea, locking me down?"

"To make sure you didn't get by without my seeing you. Come and see what I brought you," he urged, and led her over to the couch where Anna still hovered.

"Oh!" breathed Trudy, her pale cheeks flaming. Then with a return to her usual light tones, "What do you expect me to do with that?"

"Your mother and me, we know how you feel about that policeman feller, but how you said you wouldn't marry him nor nobody else till you got a job and could buy yourself the right things. So we got a thinking. Jobs is scarce and we wanted you should get married while you was young."

With the gesture of a magician he pulled a crumpled roll of bills from his pocket and pressed it into her hand.

"Dad!—Dad!"—Why, Mother!" she cried. "It's fifty dollars. You shouldn't give me all that!"

The girl flew to kiss first one and then the other before she gathered up the box. But she did not go at once to the bedroom for they could hear her at the telephone in the kitchen.

"Could I speak to Sergeant Mooney? . . . Oh, hello, Bill! You coming around tonight? I have the swellest news for you!..."

Walt sank down beside his wife on the couch and mopped his brow. "Whew!" he breathed. Then he slipped an arm around her and taking her plump left hand in his he straightened the third finger with its plain gold band.

"It looks empty, your finger, without the other ring," he whispered. "You will not regret giving it up?"

Anna shook her head. "Why after all these years? While I have about me the engagement ring you I do not need that."

"Well," declared Walt, "as he kinda likes him, I was guessing I was not such a fool to pick two good ones—that ring and you. It pays to get fourteen carat stuff every time, you bet!"

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, August 3 (CP)—Prices on Toronto exchange today were strong in the early session with little trading. Later, the Wall Street market will be closed tomorrow for Independence Day, and the slightly pre-holiday market there had its influence on Toronto trading later. Only $1000 shares changed hands, giving the Toronto market a record low for recent years.

Bids were strong for the gold and gains up to 10c were showing at early afternoon. Amor was up 10 and Fields Cron. Central Patricia, Preston, Uchi, O'Brien and others added a few cents. Industrial issues were slightly stronger, Nickel, Noranda, and Sherritt posted gains.

Food, utility and miscellaneous industrials generally displayed a narrow upward slant and the western oils were unchanged to slightly lower. Home Oil lost two cents and Royalite was off ½. Calgary-Edmonton and Anglo-Canadian held unchanged.

WALL STREET

New York, July 3 (AP)—A little buying in a few investment favorites and miscellaneous industrial shares lifted prices irregularly in a listless pre-holiday stock market today.

Some stocks were ahead as much as a point near the fourth hour but the market generally hugged the dividing line at the rate of less than 300,000 shares for a full session.

Business over the week-end of Democratic Chairman Farley and Secretary Hull in Europe, as well as the arrival from the capital of Senator Wagner, continued to keep the speculators on the side lines.

Fractional gains in advance were the rule most of the time in such issues as U.S. Steel, General Motors, Montgomery Ward, Goodyear, International Harvester, Santa Fe and Consolidated Edison. Many shares did not trade at all.

American Telephone rose a point at the start and Industrial Rayon advanced more than a point on a transaction of 4,000 shares, later yielding part of the gain. Celanese Loft and most Copper Mining shares were other firm spots, the mining group stimulated by the report of a big foreign demand for the red metal.

Late News reports of further minor fractions in the Canadian group while Distillers edged forward. Dominion % moved evenly.

Problem of Raising Winter Litters

As the hog prices advance our thoughts are turned to the problem of raising winter litters.

Twenty years ago broader houses for chick raising were practically unknown. Today nearly all farmers have broader houses for this purpose.

In Western Canada where the climate is much colder than it is in this district farmers have constructed broader houses for the raising of young pigs, and the results have been most encouraging.

Some good lots of hogs marketed during the week of June 30th, 1939, are as follows:

Plane Lands at Ottawa

Ottawa, July 3—(CP)—A flaming red biplane carrying Louisiana citizens landed at Uplands Airdrome today at 11 a.m. EDT. Murphy Roden, Assistant Superintendent of State Police, and Myron Cunningham, special investigator, left immediately for Brockville, Ont., to take into custody Dr. James Monroe Smith, fugitive, former President of Louisiana State University.

The plane, owned by the universities, left Baton Rouge, La., at 7.47 p.m. C.S.T. Pilot Lieut. J. F. Frame, head of the University Aeronautical School, took three hours and 10 minutes to make the 1,459 miles flight where the officers spent last night.

They were at the airport only a few minutes. A motor car was waiting to carry them 82 miles to Brockville where Dr. Smith surrendered to police Saturday night to face charges that he embezzled $100,000 of university funds.

Take Man to Ottawa

Mr. Cunningham proceed to the District Attorney's Office at Baton Rouge, said he expected to have Dr. Smith out of Brockville within an hour of his arrival there. He planned to bring him to Ottawa and start back to Louisiana the afternoon in the plane, proceeding somewhere in the United States overnight.

Mrs. Smith, charged with "harboring" and "assisting" her husband, will be taken to Baton Rouge by Deputy Sheriff Frank Trimble who is en route to Brockville by train.

Royal Canadian Air Force mechanics at the Rockcliffe Airport started servicing the plane and finishing it soon after its arrival. R.C.A.F. officers promised to have the plane ready for departure this afternoon.

The pilots met at the field by several representatives of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police who had conversed with the Louisiana officials and arranged for the motor car to take them to Brockville.

HON. DR. MANION REFERS TO TARIFF

Would Have Protective Tariffs Held and Develop Home Markets

Queenston, Ont., July 3—(CP)—Hon. Dr. R. J. Manion, National Conservative Party Leader, outlined a policy of "adequate protection" for Canadian industrial products farmers when he spoke Saturday to a rally at Lundys and Welland counties Conservative here.

Through protective tariffs a Conservative government would hold and develop the home market for Canadian producers, the party leader contended, accusing the present Liberal government of whittling away protective tariffs.

"We have to have a tariff policy in Canada as a whole, though I must admit I have in the past given thought to regional tariffs," Dr. Manion said. "It is worthy of consideration, but our policy stands for a unified and adequate protection."

Customs duties collected in Great Britain average $25 a head compared with $50 in Canada, he said, declaring the object of tariffs is to hold the market for the people rather than raise prices.

He felt it only fair that Canadian fruit and vegetable growers, with the handicap of climate to overcome, should have the benefit of season tariffs against imports from the United States.

NOTICE SERVED ON DR. A. DAFOE

Quints Doctor Asked to Produce Certain Contracts at Meeting of Guardians

North Bay, July 3—(CP)—Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe, physician to the Dionne Quintuplets, was today believed to have given documents requiring his presence at the next meeting of the Quints' guardians, the contracts in which his name is linked with those of the Quints.

O'Connor, chairman of the board, presses recent accounts of the Quints' estate. Members of the board are Dr. Dafoe, Dionne, Judge J. A. Valin—all guardians—and business men. Leo Lamb is secretary. Fred G. Wilson, official guardian, represents the guardians in court matters. The guardians usually meet in camera with police posted at entrances to the room.

SUMMER QUIET RULES AT CAPITAL

Ottawa, July 3—(CP)—Developments in the international situation failed to cause any disturbance to the quiet summer routine of Ottawa today as the Dominion government but have caused no visible interruption to the midsummer quiet which has settled upon the capital.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King's announcement last night of meetings of the matters which might influence a general election and his announcement that the formation of an election date remained to be decided, was the chief topic of talk today.

There has been little political activity so far as the Liberal party is concerned but the same is not true of the Conservative party which is showing considerable opposition in the House of Commons.

Conservative Leader Manion has been busy all week with addresses and meetings in Eastern Canada. Saturday he was in Toronto. On July 9 he will enter the Quebec field with a series of addresses.

Strength was added to the new democracy movement sponsored by Major W. D. Herridge when the Federal Social Credit Party, meeting in caucus in Edmonton Friday, endorsed the utterances of Major Herridge and left it to its members to follow his leadership.

DROWNS DIVING FOR JACKKNIFE

Come to Canada Young Man Believed to Have Been Victim of Heart Failure

Tuesday, July 3—(CP)—Henry Hall, 26, of Toronto, was drowned at the Hall's Lake dam Saturday afternoon when he dived for a jack-knife lost by a companion. His body, recovered by his superiors in the stop logs of the dam, was recovered two hours later. Acting on the instructions of Constable Cecil Taylor, Minden, two doctors who were visiting the district for the week-end described his death as due to heart failure rather than to drowning. Dr. W. R. Crowe, Minden, Coroner, declared an inquest unnecessary.

Tall, with two companions, Ted Hall and Gordon Hall, of Toronto, was standing on the dam when the brothers dropped a knife in the water.

Brilliant 69 Shot by Three Golfing Greats

St. Andrews, Scotland, July 3 (CP)—A trio of golfing greats—Jim Braden, Percy Allen and Lawson Little—shot four-under-par 69's over tough St. Andrews today to set the pace in the first round of qualifying play for the British Open championship.

Braden, young Irish amateur sensation, was the first man home and his card was the more surprising for the fact he played only three holes through a fine rain and fog.

Although conditions improved as the day wore on, many big names in golf posted scores high in the 70's.

But Allis, former British Ryder cupper, and Little, husky American who gave himself up to police at Brockville on Saturday evening, on hearing he was sought, spent some time in Belleville on Thursday with Mrs. Smith, it is believed.

Questioning of local service station attendants and others of the city who claimed to have seen and identified the couple from newspaper photographs, disclosed that Dr. and Mrs. Smith entered Bell Boulevard from Front road on Thursday afternoon and drove past the municipal tourist and service station to have the machine serviced. The car was gone when a mechanic, greased and then passed and oiled it.

Friday afternoon about 3.30 information was given the Provincial Police district office that there were grounds for belief that the president of the State University and his wife had been in Belleville on Friday morning.

Police at once got in touch with Toronto headquarters of the O.P.P. and Inspector Wilson soon communicated with the Federal police at Ottawa. Then Brockville police, who had started a search when Dr. Smith surrendered to the authorities.

The number of the car which had been serviced at Bellville and which was thought to be Dr. Smith's was given to the provincial police and passed on to the Ottawa authorities.

Meanwhile police check-up here led to the belief that Dr. Smith and Mrs. Smith had spent Thursday night as guests at a Belleville hotel and left the city early on Friday.

While the couple, thought to be Dr. Smith and his wife tarried in Belleville they were the object of an intensive hunt by the police of the United States and Canada, a search which had begun at Baton Rouge, Louisiana, a week ago. In the meantime, Louisiana citizens many hundreds of dollars had been offered by the State Police of Louisiana.

The Smiths were travelling in a maroon roadster, number 1939-474, purchased at Dearborn, Michigan, early this week. It was the same car which was serviced, it is said, in Belleville, on Thursday afternoon. Constable Cecil Taylor, the one in which the driver and passenger left Trenton late Friday afternoon for Desoronto by Archie McConeghy, proprietor of a Desoronto lakeside tea room stopped for soft drinks. The description of the couple resembling them were observed at Desoronto by Mrs. Clark Wilson, Desoronto, Mrs. Vine, together at the Belmont Restaurant. Some of the party entered the tea restaurant at the time of the explosion which shook the city of the building. "I thought the building had been struck and cried one patron who was in the restaurant gathering up the scattered contents of the restaurant along the curb could be seen smoke still emanating from a shattered chimney. No one was injured.

Asked if any objects or hardened particles or metals had struck the front of the store, neither Mr. Wilson nor Mrs. Pappas could state, "There was just a terrific explosion and the building shook for a moment" added Mr. Sayers.

Sees Auto Fleeing

"When I arrived at the door I could see an automobile near the Bridge that appeared to me to be travelling at an excessive rate of speed. It was travelling faster than more," added Mr. Pappas.

Mrs. Pappas, a friend of the incident, P. C. Arnott investigating. The authorities were unable to state definitely what the explosion was the result of the ignition of a dynamite cap or an improvised device.

Police seemed to be inclined to believe that the harmless noise and the parties concerned merely a prank.

A similar explosion is believed to have occurred on West Bridge Street about 1 o'clock after the Front Street occurrence.

Wicklow Man Hit by Car

Cobourg, Ont., July 3—(CP)— Henry Walter Warner, 45-year-old Wicklow resident, was brought to Cobourg Hospital today suffering from a broken collarbone and fractured leg. Warner was struck, police say, by a car driven by Arnold LaFay of Cobourg. The accident occurred at Wicklow.

Police said LaFay told them that Warner stepped right into the path of the car.

TIME HAS NOT CHANGED FOR FIVE MONTHS

Kitchener, Ont., July 3 (CP)— Kitchener, were making so many uncomplimentary comments on the post office clock here that has shown 6.30 for five months, that the Board of Trade took action. They protested to Ottawa, and Federal authorities order the clock's hands amputated.

THINKS SMITHS MAY HAVE STAYED HERE FOR WHILE

Local Persons Reported Late Friday Afternoon They Thought Ex-President Smith of Louisiana State University Had Been in Belleville on That Day

Dr. James Monroe Smith, former president of the Louisiana State University, from which university he is charged with embezzling funds amounting to $100,000, and who gave himself up to police at Brockville on Saturday evening, on hearing he was sought, spent some time in Belleville on Thursday with Mrs. Smith, it is believed.

Highways Dept. and Police Requested To Increase Staffs to Reduce Toll

Toronto, July 4—(CP)—H. G. Pester, General Manager of the Ontario Safety League, today urged the Ontario Highways Department and the Provincial Police to increase their staff considerably in an effort to reduce the highway traffic toll.

Pester was one of a group of Ontario men commenting on Ontario's holiday death toll of 20, which included four persons killed in a two-car collision north of Toronto yesterday.

"I think if we doubled our police force here we would just about begin to touch the fringe of the problem," Pester said. "More traffic policemen are needed badly because there are highways in the province that rarely see a traffic policeman."

He said Pennsylvania reduced its accident toll by 40 per cent by doubling the number of its police-patrol cars.

Chief Coroner Dr. Smirle Lawson has issued an appeal to drivers to drive safe in the interest of life.

Dr. Lawson said:

"As the summer holidays are now in full swing and people are travelling to and from summer resorts, the terrible death toll of motor accidents is mounting daily.

"As Chief Coroner, one sees that dreadful carnage of these terrible and, never times, unnecessary accidents almost daily. One would like to appeal to the honor of those in charge of motor cars and ask them once again for the safety of themselves and others to drive carefully and under no circumstances drive a car while under the influence of liquor.

REV. D. McIVOR LIBERAL CHOICE

Will Run in Fort William Riding Against Hon. J.R. Manion

Fort William, July 4—(CP)—Rev. Dan McIvor last night was nominated by a convention of Liberals of Fort William federal riding to contest the constituency against Hon. Dr. R. J. Manion, National Conservative Leader, at the next elections. Mr. McIvor is the present member, having defeated Dr. Manion for the seat in the 1935 elections.

Mr. McIvor's was the only name to come before the convention when nominations were called by Mayor C. M. Ross of Fort William, President of the Fort William Liberal Association.

Hon. C. D. Howe, Minister of Transport, and Hon. T. A. Crerar, Minister of Mines and Natural Resources, spoke briefly, both commending the selection of Rev. Mr. McIvor.

Mr. Howe said it was unique for two cabinet Ministers to attend a nomination but they could not miss the chance of a good word for the Fort William member. He stressed the efforts of the government to fight unemployment on a sounder basis than that of the days of the former government which left boys remote from civilization with some $36,000,000 to work.

Mr. Crerar also enumerated the efforts of the Liberal government to overcome the various problems it met with. He said the government had put the National Housing Act into operation with some $35,000,000 being spent in constructing new homes and $28,000,000 in home improvements.

Under encouragement the present government extended to mining, he said, and 38 new gold mines had come into production during the last year.

FEEDING ANIMALS

Charlesbourg, Que., July 3—(CP)—Victim of a mauling by two sub-adult polar bears, the mangled body of Dr. Joseph Germain, 53-year-old Rimouski physician, lay today in a morgue at Quebec, 13 miles distant. He was killed accidentally, a coroner's jury found, while feeding the bears in the Zoological Garden here last night.

While his 22-year-old daughter, Jeannine, and 16-year-old son, Paul, looked on with horror, unable to aid him, Dr. Germain was mauled until his body fell to the ground. The son frantically dug in sand and gravel into the bears' eyes but to no avail.

Climbed on Rail

Witnesses said that Dr. Germain climbed under a small guard rail, approached the cage and was feeding one bear apparently when the animal attacked. The bear reached a paw through the bars, grasped Dr. Germain by the shoulder and pulled it fast. Seeking to steady himself, Dr. Germain clutched a bar but the second bear pinned his other shoulder against the cage.

World's Record Made by Cooper In His Tops III

Picton, July 4—(Special)— Jack "Pop" Cooper, of Kansas City and Clayton of Year III, 225 cubic inch displacement hydroplane boat, pushed his racing machine over a measured mile in Picton Bay early today to a new world's record of 97.465 miles per hour. The weather was ideal for the run and the boat was in perfect condition for the test having been thoroughly overhauled after a break-down in the last heat of the Prince Edward Gold Cup on Monday afternoon.

BLASTS RIP OPEN SEWER PIPE, SMASH GARAGE

One Blast Endangers Bridge at Vancouver, B. C., Over Railway Tracks

BRIDGES PATROLLED

Vancouver, July 4—(CP)— Two blasts which ripped open a sewer pipe and smashed a garage in the Grandview residential district were investigated by police today who attempted to track down a report of a third mysterious explosion in the area within 24 hours.

Although none of the last explosion has been found officers were ordered to make a search of the district near Clark Drive and Adanac Street where several citizens told police they heard a loud report.

It occurred as police probed what they considered was a blast which had torn the sewer pipe, endangering a bridge passing over Canadian National and Great Northern railway tracks leading into Vancouver.

Discovered yesterday, the damage was found to have occurred about the same time a nearby empty garage was wrecked shortly before midnight Sunday.

Fuse And Matches Found

Two walls and a window in the building were smashed and officers' said two lengths of fuse and burned matches were found on the floor.

All highway bridges passing over the railway track were ordered patrolled by police to safeguard the structures from possible further damage.

Police said they found no trace of explosives in the sewer pipe but were inclined to believe explosives were responsible for the blast. Their feeling was shared by assistant City Engineer Robert Brown, who said he suspected "foul play."

The pipe was rended 12 feet below the Nanaimo Street bridge and 50 feet above the railway tracks. Debris holding the pipe were twisted.

Charges and Counter-Charges Are Heard Over Danzig Issues

Danzig, July 4—(AP)— Polish charges and Danzig Nazi counter-charges grew in bitterness today following reports that Polish Free City customs officials were giving pledges of loyalty to "the Fuehrer (Hitler) and leadership of the state."

Polish accusations were that effective customs inspection to protect Polish interests had ceased. A Danzig charge was that Polish inspectors were engaged in espionage and that their chief purpose was to report whether arms were being brought into Danzig.

The Polish answer was that no espionage could be carried on in any secret because Polish customs inspectors were not on duty the entire day and, at most border stations, Danzig officials and officials from bringing in uncontrolled arms shipments at all times.

Observers, meanwhile, attributed to the Nazi campaign to unite Danzig politically with Germany an announcement by the Bank of Danzig that it henceforth would pay interest and amortization charges on foreign debts to the Free City only in blocked gulden. Germany does the same thing with its foreign debts to creditors who may not be converted into foreign currency or taken out of Danzig.

Chairman Hogg Sees Three Sources For Development

Rates to Municipalities Will Go Down When Commission Assured it Has Reasonable Safe Financial Position

NO RATE INCREASES

Commission Chairman "Refers to Niagara Falls, St. Lawrence and Ottawa Rivers as Sources of Power Which will be Required

Ottawa, July 4—(CP)—By 1942 or 1943 the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission will be faced with the need of obtaining large blocks of power, Dr. Thomas H. Hogg, Commission Chairman, said in an interview here today.

Dr. Hogg would look to only three developments for this power, said Dr. Hogg, who is attending the two-day session of the Ontario Municipal Electric Association here. It could go to the St. Lawrence, Niagara Falls or the Ottawa River, he said. The latter, the Chairman said, development of Niagara was tied to development of the Lawrence and development of the Ottawa needed cooperation from Quebec. He would not predict which of the developments would be considered.

Situation Two Years Ago

"After the clean-up of the Ontario power situation two years ago we contracted for $2,000,000 worth of additional power and we had no deficit," said Dr. Hogg. "Last year we took $1,000,000 worth and we expect to meet all charges but with a comparatively small surplus. In '39-'40 we will have $400,000 worth of new power and we expect to pick up the surplus and transfer it to the primary power demand.

Rates to municipalities will go down as soon as the Commission is assured it has reached a safe financial position, the chairman declared. He foresaw no increase in rates in the next few years.

Pheasants Cause Damage, Say Farmers

Port Credit, Ont., July 4—(CP)— Farmers in the Port Credit district want to go out shooting for pheasants. They claim the birds are causing widespread damage to fruit and vegetable crops.

One farmer lost his crop of melons, valued at $400, last year, property owners said the pheasants have caused damage to tomato crops and strawberries.

Farmers contend that the lack of an open season on the birds and a Peel for five or six years has resulted in making the birds too numerous and bold. Scarecrows do no good.

The farmers advocate an open season on pheasants this year.

MONETARY STATUS TO BE CLARIFIED

Statement Will be Made at Washington Entry Wednesday

Washington, July 4—(AP)— Officials of the United States Treasury plan to issue a clarifying statement on the complicated monetary situation with negotiations now out waiting for the Senate to vote on the monetary bill.

Officials refuse say definitely what the statement would contain, but indications are that it will disclose the price of silver mined in the United States which the treasury will pay for foreign silver, whether the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund will be used to fix the price of gold.

The statement will be given out a few hours before the Senate acts on a bill passed by the House of Representatives extending the President's power to change the gold value of the dollar, continuing the stabilization fund, and fixing the price of silver at 77.11 cents an ounce, a Republican filibuster prevented final action on the measure at the date of the old laws Friday night.

Secretary General Frank Murphy advised President Roosevelt that the Senate would be kept in even though the gold and stabilization fund powers apparently have lapsed, but Republicans and Democrats could not extend something that no longer existed. They ask that the powers could be revived only by new legislation.

Ultraviolet radiation! The natural source of this is the sun. It is composed of wave-lengths shorter than those of visible violet light. The longer wavelengths reach the earth, coming from the blue of the sky, the shorter are absorbed by the ozone layer in the higher parts of the atmosphere. Ultraviolet radiations are said to have power to cure certain maladies, but if so it is not known definitely as yet just how they act, whether they kill the germs directly or act indirectly. Some believe that all the rays from the sun are curative to some extent and attribute the alleged healing of ultraviolet radiations to out-door life, excitement and exercise.

STRAWBERRIES SELL 4 BOXES FOR 25 CENTS

A largely attended post holiday market was in evidence in Belleville today with no marked variations noted in the prices of farm produce. Strawberries remained at four boxes for 25c or six cents per box; by the quart, 12c. Potatoes were in abundance, but remained firm in price, 90c per peck. Veal fell off slightly, selling for 25c per quart measure, while yellow string beans made their first entry, ahead of the season and sold at the rate of 15c the quart box measure. Other green vegetables were featured as were several displays of floral decorations of the cut flower type.

'BLUE DEVIL' WEED SHOWS STEADY GROWTH

Acres of the weed "blue devil", an annual broadleaf plant which once started, are now noticed in full bloom in Belleville and district and even vacant lots within the city are supporting this crop of this hard to kill growth. Zwick's Island has become plentifully covered with the blue-flowered weed and it is being spread to other sections of once cultivated land by nature in the agricultural officials.

Considerable concern is also expressed over the reported appearance of a new weed, the "devil's scotch brush", a weed originally believed to have entered Canada from Europe via the Maritimes, which has been slowly spreading westward.

PIGS 'CASH CROP' MORE ARE RAISED

The bacon hog has become the farmer's cash crop this year and shows that more farmers are going into the raising of hogs, stated an agricultural official this morning.

"With prices at present ranging between nine and ten cents, nine and a quarter was today's quotation for live weight—pig raising has become more attractive for many of them. Farmers who never bothered with hogs before are this year putting up new styes and quarters for them."

Army and Navy Veterans Of Belleville Enjoy Holiday

Annual Outing is Held In Memorial Park at Tweed

SCENE AT CENOTAPH

Tweed, Ont., (Special)—The annual picnic of the Army and Navy Veterans of Belleville Unit No. 20, was held in Tweed Memorial Park yesterday. The weather was ideal, and combined with the beautiful setting on the shores of Stoco Lake to make the occasion a most enjoyable one for the veterans and their families. Seven trucks for the pouring intervalled and dozens of motor cars were pressed into service to bring the visitors from Belleville.

The visiting veterans were welcomed by the members of the Moira A.N.V. unit. A parade was organized and led by Peterboro district Army Boys' Band and Tweed Citizens' Band, preceded along the main thoroughfares of the village and returned to the Park.

At eleven o'clock the veterans entered about the Cenotaph and observed a two minutes' silence in honour of fallen comrades. Following this tribute the day was given over to sports into which everyone entered with zest. Chairman Arthur Newman assisted by Secretary Harold Revell and an able committee, had lined up a very attractive programme and the day was not a dull moment until the last event was concluded late in the afternoon. The following is the committee were: E. W. Terry, F. Marsole, A. Sterling, G. Smith, C. Richards, P. Adams, S. Dainton, P. McTaggart, J. Hatfield, A. Jordan and M. Cronkite.

Chairman Newman issued a warm welcome from the Tweed veterans to the visiting veterans, their wives and children to join with them in all the day's festivities. During the morning the Salvation Army Band rendered programme and band numbers. Tweed Citizens' Band also played several selections. The afternoon session was enjoyed by the large crowd who were deeply appreciative of the enjoyable hours they had received.

Two ball games added interest to the non-programme of the day. In game the executive committee defeated the picnic committee by a score of 21-11. The second game witnessed a snappy struggle between the veterans and the locals. The oldsters had not forgotten all their prowess on the baseball field and opened a 6 to 4 beating to the younger generation and made the score 11-10.

Piper Jamie Clark entertained the children who had formed him into a "band" to the stirring music of the bagpipes, while many of the veterans present had a share of their time on the dance floor of the Pavilion.

Possessing as it does boating and swimming facilities for old and young, a fine ground for softball and races, an extensive shady area provided with seats and benches, and all within a hundred yards of the business section, there remains nothing to be added to attract picnic parties and a cordial welcome awaits the Belleville A.N.V. unit 201 another year should they return for their annual picnic.

DAY'S SAMPLE OF SHIPMENTS

Grated plate and window glass from Holland and Czecho-Slovakia; peas, soup, white lead, sugar, beer and angle iron from the mills, breweries and factories of the east all form part of the shipments being received from Montreal by water this week at the government dock. Yesterday one of the season's infrequent coal carriers, the collier Henry C. Dalrymple heavily loaded with a cargo for the Schuster Company docks unloaded her manifest with a self-unloader and departed across the lake for another shipment of slack.

No Major Motor Accidents in District Over the Holiday

Although other sections of the province reported major accidents and numerous fatalities as the result of motor accidents on provincial highways over the holiday period, not a single major motor accident was reported by Motor-cycle Patrolman Sam Ervine after one of the heaviest days of motor traffic seen this season on his detail along Highways No. 2 and 14.

"There wasn't even a fender scratched in this area during the holiday week end, that saw heavily increased motor traffic commencing early Saturday and continuing even through today," remarked Constable Ervine today. However, the officer did admit he had apprehended some 18 or 20 motorists allegedly travelling in excess of the 30 miles per hour, as allowed by the Highway Department. Traffic was the heaviest of the year.

No arrests were necessary in Belleville, with the lone exception of a sole inebriate, although at a

Down at Napanee Chief Eddie Watts reported the theft of a 1929 model La Salle sedan, stolen from a parking lot in that town. There were no licence plates on the car at the time it was stolen, however. "Generally speaking the public enjoyed the week end holiday quietly and seemed satisfied to lone down their pace," remarked Chief Kidd today as he looked over a practically blank police blotter.

NIGGER SCORES NEW TRIUMPH

Pussycat Boldly Challenges Snooping Canines and Routs Them

Nigger, the coal-black, lower Front street feed store cat, who has performed a dazzling feature and the wild and attracted considerable attention on the part of local residents and outsiders by bar dogchasing prowlings, scored another victory this morning by pitting his nine lives against flying fangs.

Nigger, unlike other felines, likes to crouch and slink to safety at the sight of a dog, reverses the habits of cats and boldly attacks the enemy in direct frontal charge. The dogs unused to this flying charge of bared teeth and sharp claws, flee precipitately, nails scratching and slipping on the pavement in their haste to be gone.

This morning a scrappy bull terrier from a nearby residence entered the gates in his brief moment of freedom from his master and tasted of this unusual charge and retired undignified and abashed. Nigger put the scorn on the dog with a broad sweep of extended claws and lightning leap. Before the astonished dog could recover Nigger returned to the cushions.

OBITUARY

LATE DAVID EDWARD CLARK

The funeral of David Edward Clark took place from the Martin Funeral Home, Belleville, on Saturday afternoon and was largely attended. The service in the chapel was conducted by the Rev. T. T. McClintock, Pastor of the Tabernacle Church.

The late Mr. Clark was a popular and efficient member of the Belleville police force, retirement some years ago. Owing to an accident which permanently crippled him, he was while-in the discharge of his duties, he was forced to retire after some twelve years ago. His old comrades of the force paid many floral tributes as a token to their late associate and attended the funeral in a body. Many floral tributes covered with flowers was placed upon one of the motor cars which followed the hearse along the sides of which marched the active pall-bearers, members of the fire department formed in line.

The funeral cortege upon leaving the Funeral Home proceeded along Church street to Bridge street and then to the Belleville Cemetery. The members of the fire department at No. 2 station on Front street, who were on duty, stood at attention in front of the fire hall while the funeral procession passed. It was at this station that the late Mr. Clark was engaged when he was in the service.

At the Belleville Cemetery the service at the graveside was conducted by the Rev. T. D. McClintock.

The bearers were all members of the Belleville Fire Department and were as follows: Messrs. Gerald Manor, Arthur Wilson, Thomas Thompson, Stanley Waddell, Charles Greatrex and Charles Weaver.

The following members of the City of Kingston Fire Department believed to be the only one gang responsible for the outbreak of robberies all of which have occurred within one week.

Says Visitors Scatter Litter

In spite of the request of civic authorities to "keep Belleville Clean" and the judicious planting of garbage and rubbish containers at selected spots in the downtown section, the littering of Front St., walks and roadway continues. But, it is noted by observers, local residents are not the chief offenders, visitors in Belleville's midst during the week-end violators of the sanitation laws.

This morning a sleek car pulled to the curb at the middle of the street and from the back of the machine the driver calmly swept the floor of its heavy deposit of dirt, cigarette packages, old newspaper, road maps, wrapping of candy bars and other paper to the roadway. He pulled out later leaving behind a small heap of litter to be scattered by the wind. The car bore Ohio licence plates.

VICTORIA PARK DRAWS CROWDS

JAPANESE DELAY MILK SUPPLIES

Only 30 Bottles Entered British Concession at Tientsin in Day

Shanghai, July 4—(AP)—Nearly all milk supplies for the British and French concessions in Tientsin were cut off because of delay at the blockade barriers today, and Japanese explained that the milk must be examined because there might be bombs in the bottles."

Only 30 bottles of milk entered the British concession during the morning. They were for the British military hospital. There was none for other hospitals.

Russian dairyman of Tientsin refused to bring in any milk for the foreign areas, in which more than 180,000 persons reside. They explained Japanese guards had detained some of them at barriers for as long as five hours, the milk spoiled, and Japanese dumped it as worthless.

Domei (Japanese) news agency reported another shortage of Japanese British friction at Tientsin, where Japanese have blockaded the British, and French concessions since June 14.

British Suspected

The agency quoted Japanese army officers as saying they suspected British of supplying arms and ammunition to Chinese guerillas and of supplying them with information on Japanese troop movements.

The officers were said to have declared that the British Consul General, Edward G. Jamieson, had had advance news of guerilla plans to attack a Belgian-owned power plant, which was raided Saturday night.

The British China inland missions property at Kweichowfu, 280 miles west of Hankow, was reported in a belated telegram today to have been damaged in a Japanese air raid there last Thursday.

Foreigners there were safe but 1,000 Chinese were said to have been killed in the raid, which destroyed one-fifth of the city.

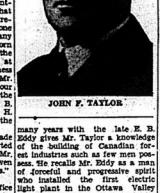
Name John F. Taylor as Vice-President of E. B. Eddy Company

59 Years Active Service With Company Recognized in Appointment

Appointment of John F. Taylor as vice-president of The E. B. Eddy Company Ltd., Hull, is announced now, following his retirement on July 1, as secretary and sales manager, after 59 years in active service with the company. Mr. Taylor remains a director and as a vice-president his advice will be available to the company at all times.

Record Length of Service

In announcing the new appointments the company points out that Mr. Taylor has established a record in length of service with one company which has hardly any parallel in Canada. He was born in Hull and started to work for the late Ezra Butler Eddy in 1881 at the age of nine, when the business was a personal proprietorship. Mr. Taylor has served under all the four presidents who have directed the company since its founding, E. B. Eddy, W. H. Rowley, George E. Millen and the present head of the firm, Victor M. Drury.



JOHN F. TAYLOR

"There was no paper being made by the firm at all when I started to work," Mr. Taylor recalls. "Mr. Eddy had large sawmills and even then employed about 600 hands."

Started at 50 Cents a Day

Mr. Taylor began as an office boy and his diligence earned him a promotion to the responsible position of secretary telegrapher. Later he was made cashier and ledger keeper. More than 30 years ago, Mr. Taylor was appointed sales manager, and since that time has travelled Canada from sea to sea. Last year alone he covered more than 25,000 miles. He was first elected a director in 1915.

Mr. Taylor's legath of service and extensive travels have made him one of the best known sales executives in Canada, particularly in paper and wholesale trade circles, among many publishers. Taking an active part in pulp and paper association work, he has served on various trade committees.

In addition to serving the company and trade organizations, Mr. Taylor was for several years an alderman in the Hull city council, two years he was pro-mayor, and he continues to take a keen interest in municipal affairs.

Knowledge of Industry

An intimate acquaintance of many years with the late E. B. Eddy gives Mr. Taylor a knowledge of the building of Canadian forest industries such as few men possess. He recalls Mr. Eddy as a man of forceful and progressive spirit who installed the first electric light plant in the Ottawa Valley and one of the earliest sulphite pulp mills in Canada. Mr. Eddy in 1905 made the first use of a motor truck for commercial purposes in the province of Quebec.

The fire in 1900 which destroyed most of the Eddy plant, and the still greater conflagration of 1903 which wiped out most of Hull and part of Ottawa, are vivid memories to Mr. Taylor.

"Disasters such as these would have been enough to make most men give up in despair," Mr. Taylor says. "But Mr. Eddy started to rebuild on both occasions almost before the ashes were cool."

Tracing succinctly the history of forest industries since he joined the E. B. Eddy Company, Mr. Taylor points out that when the company was largely a sawmill business, most of the season's cut was sold to one or two large firms. Later, when sulphite pulp was made, Mr. Eddy did a lot of travelling and took great pride in making sales of pulp.

As time has passed on the industry has developed into paper and tissue manufacture. Nowadays it is necessary to distribute paper products through many wholesaling organizations, as the paper products, in many cases, are produced in finished form, ready to sell to the retail buyer.

Importance of Salesmanship

Salesmanship is of great importance today because of the wide variety of products on the market, Mr. Taylor comments. "I sometimes wonder if the average person realizes the great usefulness of a salesman's daily work," he says. "Without the efforts of salesmen we would have no industrial system."

Modern industry not only produces more and better goods than could be turned out 50 years ago but it has also improved the lot of the worker, Mr. Taylor points out. Advantages now available to all employees include such benefits as accident prevention, first aid services, life and sickness insurance, recreation facilities and better income.

London, July 4—(CP)—Miss Audrey Butterworth, general organizer of the Royal Academy of Dancing in London, is going to Canada next September in the hope of arousing greater interest in ballet dancing.

Miss Butterworth is to give lectures in Vancouver, Winnipeg, Toronto and Montreal. The physical training department of the Vancouver Board of Education has asked her to lecture for it and she expects to be there almost a week.

Her visit is designed to lay the groundwork for academy examiners going to Canada which is the only Dominion they do not visit. In South Africa, Australia and New Zealand examinations are held every two years.

Miss Butterworth expects to be in Vancouver Sept. 12, Winnipeg Sept. 26, Toronto Sept. 29 and Montreal Oct. 2. It will be her first visit to Canada.

A number from here attended the induction service of Rev. Mr. Mercer at Hayden on Friday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Everett Miller took dinner on Sunday with Mr. Miller's aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Wannamaker, Belleville.

Mr. and Mrs. James Hudgins and Mrs. Middleton of Belleville called on Mr. and Mrs. Everett Miller on Monday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Percy Emmerson of Moira, and Miss Dorothy Elliott visited their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Elliott and Mrs. Elliott on Friday.

ALIEN SMUGGLING RAMPANT ON RIVER

U. S. Patrolmen Establish Special Watch on Detroit River

Detroit, July 4—(CP)—The Detroit Free Press said in a news-page story today that United States border patrolmen, armed with machine guns, have established a special watch on the Detroit River to combat a "rising wave of alien smuggling from Canada into the Detroit area."

Aiding immigration officers in the drive against smugglers, the paper said, was a detail of Federal Bureau of Investigation operatives, sent here especially. Theft of a speedy 26-foot cruiser from a Detroit boat club Sunday and its reappearance yesterday, unmarked, led to belief the city "has become the centre of activity for a well organized band of smugglers," said the Free Press.

The power boat was the fourth "borrowed" in recent weeks. Two have been taken from the Canadian side and two from the American side. Radios or other articles that would make easy loot for thieves or joyriders were not taken in any case, the paper said.

"The significant fact in all four cases is that whenever a boat has been taken for a short period federal agents have learned through the underworld grapevine that 10 or 12 aliens, mainly Chinese, had come into the United States in this district about the same time," the Free Press said.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Parents Must Watch Child Carefully For Rheumatic Fever Symptoms

It is unusual for a child with rheumatic fever not to complain of some special symptoms as well as the abnormalities we have been speaking about in the last few articles. There is always or nearly always an acute illness at the onset of disease. When this happens, there is no difficulty in diagnosing the trouble. The unfortunate thing is that by this time the damage is usually done. That is why I always urge parents to watch their children and, if they see any of the symptoms we have been talking about, have their doctor examine the child carefully. If they do this a simple operation such as removal of tonsils may save the child from a serious attack of rheumatic fever and heart disease.

The acute attack of rheumatic fever usually starts out either with or directly after a head cold. First signs are often pains in the joints with the patient's temperature going up to 101 or 102 degrees—so high for ordinary arthritis and yet not high enough for an actual infection of the joint and the formation of pus. The pain may not stay in one joint, often it jumps about all over the body.

In many cases it has been the child first complain of pains in the lower extremities—the ankles and the knees. When we examine this affected area it is usual to find it swollen and hot to the touch. It is always extremely tender to handle, and the skin over the joint is likely to be fiery red. For two days the pain may be severe in this region and then it will disappear, going to some other joint and involving it in the same manner.

There may be two or three joints involved at the same time, I have seen as many as half a dozen all have pain but in these cases are rare. As a rule, the pain and swelling lasts two or three days in one joint and then moves on to another. The joints of the body may be affected at some time or other, but the usual ones are the ankles, knees, hips, elbows, wrists and fingers. I have seen cases where the shoulders were involved but this is unusual.

If a child develops rheumatic fever and receives no treatment whatever, the joints become less and less painful until, at the end of about a couple of weeks, he would be fairly well. That is, the swelling and pain in the joints would be gone, but he would still have the damage to the heart which makes itself known later and in no uncertain tones.

If you are so unfortunate as to have a youngster under the age of puberty develop the disease, I hope I still have impressed on you the importance of calling a doctor without delay. When the doctor arrives and discusses the trouble as rheumatism, he will prescribe salicylates. The most common form of this drug is aspirin; it appears to be almost a specific for rheumatic fever. The drug in correct doses it will have the joints clear of pain in a surprising way.

You might think your child well when once again he is able to go back to school. Actually the treatment is just starting. The doctor will then want him to start taking exercises to his heart action. I recall a little youngster I have in mind examined and I remember hearing that soft murmur creep into the heart which told me that the valve of heart has been affected by the poison.

THE GOLDFISH

So far as we know, every sensible child is fond of goldfish. To understand how college students can think it smart or in any way creditable to their sanity to swallow live goldfish. Wherever this exhibition was started, it seems to have become quite popular among a certain class of students who are apparently seeking an education in supposedly civilized days.

Now we believe that the fish really know anything like actual suffering. Doctors seem to agree that they die almost immediately upon entering the stomach. TIBETAN NEW YEAR

Though Tibet has still not found the reincarnation of its monk ruler, the Dalai Lama, picturesque ceremonies associated with the court continue to be held at Lhasa. A report from Mr. H. E. Richardson, leader of the British Mission there, gives a graphic description of the New Year festivities. The Dalai Lama's robes are brought in procession, followed by the Regent, and set out on his throne. The Regent and all the highest officials stand in the centre of the hall and prostrate themselves three times before the throne. Then a long procession streams up to offer scarves to the throne, and is bow to the Regent and Prime Minister who sit on lower thrones on the right. The Dronyer Chhempo (Lord Chamberlain) now round the hall inquiring on behalf of the Dalai Lama whether all the guests are well. The Chikyap Khenpo stands on the highest step of the throne to minister to the needs of the Dalai Lama while two young officials with golden censers stand one on either side of the lowest step. The Dronyer Chhempo leads a monk carrying a golden tea pot, and the tea is first tasted by another monk official before being offered to the Dalai Lama. Then tea is served to the whole company."

Standing boys perform and then offerings to the Dalai Lama in the shape of bread, fruit, sweets, sheep and yak carcases are piled in the hall. Later crowds went to the foot of the Potala (Government palace) to see the pole trick; several times on an iron pole. "Formerly a man had to slide down a rope fixed from a corner of the Potala to the Doring but this seemed too dangerous, so now a tall mast is set up and a man climbs up this and gyrates on his stomach palace). This performance is a tax on the village, somewhere near Mt. Everest, which hold s its land free except for this one duty."—Montreal Gazette.

TENSION EASES

Polish newspapers have put it up to Adolf Hitler, the maker of crises. Go to war and assured defeat or resign, and he has a month to think over it.

In many quarters the latest reaction is that Hitler will not now attempt a coup by means of force to get Danzig but will give the world a fright and endeavor by an internal action to bring the Free City of Danzig into the Nazi Reich orbit.

He and his associate, Mussolini, in creating crises are now ominously silent, but Hitler, who is shrewd, seems to realize the might he is facing. Britain has made it clear to Germany that any attempt at aggression will mean war.....Will he try a peaceful "inside job" and trust to the world's aversion to war to let him get away with Danzig?

He apparently knows one thing—that Poland with British and French support is a different Poland than the Poland he looked over last March and April when it appeared Germany was about ready for a blow. Last March showed Germany in even deeper dye of guilt than in September of last year at Munich. So Britain struck out at aggression and built up the anti- aggression pact.

Peaceful return of Danzig as a fully German city is the generally accepted Hitler plan now, and Britain and France will be asked to take "a sensible view" of the affair. Hitler's visit to Danzig on July 25 or 26 is said to be for the purpose of receiving the diploma of Danzig. The Danzigers would be swept off their feet and ask to be reunited to the Reich. And what would the world say?

All depends upon impressing the world so that actions will take a moderate view, the Germans think, in other words, it would allow Hitler to work his way around the anti-aggression bloc.

But there is that Poland to account for and she has pacts alliances with Britain and France. Poland has the say.

If the world would say "no" to Danzig and Hitler, would the Hitler technique be elastic enough to find another way 'without surrendering all his ambitions or going to war.

On the other hand there is a view that Danzigers will strive to provoke the Poles to attack them and so get the benefit of propaganda in Germany for the Nazis.

But the "fair land of Poland" as it is called in the grand opera of Faust, is resolute in the face of all.

General opinion sees an easing of the tension which has reigned for some weeks.

Dictators like mountain retreats where they can sit on the heights and like Rodin's Thinker, survey humanity and the world game of politics. So avers the Montreal Gazette. Hitler has his Berchtesgaden and Mussolini his Rocca delle Caminate. Stalin's retreat is not mentioned, possibly because it is so vast and unknown that anywhere he wants to go is a retreat as far as the world is concerned.

But other men have lived in the mountains, besides dictators. The Swiss, lovers of freedom, French, German and Italian bloods, know the mountains.

There are other folk who may be somewhat aloof, that is, those who are cut off from the Continent by the sea—namely the British Isles. But then dwells a people, not a mere dictator, they love the sea and their islands as a people, not as a lonely individual likes it for solemn meditation in the Hitler and Mussolini way.

Hitler's tunnelled retreat in the Bavarian Alps would not appeal to the Italian who was given the Rocca delle Caminate for his service to Italy. It has been restored as it was in the Middle Ages. There the modern counterpart of the imperial line of Caesars sits in solemn conclave and communion with the spirit of his country.

These two men today have burdens on their shoulders—their native lands taxed and weighted down with armour plate and their future cloudy, through their own making. Well might the two of them think before acting. They have heard so much of militarism, they must find it a very bugbear, a nightmare in their dreams. Democratic lands can become militarized for a crisis and are fresh under the test, but Italy and Germany have been too long soldiered and militarized.

Does the mountain dreaming of the dictators show them drawing away from their fellows and prove they have failed in their visions of years ago?

WHO ARE THE "MONGOLS"?

The "Mongols" have slipped into the news in recent days in widely divergent accounts of air battles said to have been going on since the middle of May on the border between Outer Mongolia and Manchukuo. From Tokyo we hear that Japanese losses have been insignificant while 250 "Mongol planes" have been shot down, ninety-eight in one forty-minute engagement over Lake Bor. Equally belated reports of the same fighting issued from Moscow tell a different story. According to this version the losses of the Japanese have far exceeded the losses of their opponents. The New York Times gives some interesting information on the subject:

No eyewitness has checked on these rival accounts of air armadas clashing in the hidden fastnesses of Asia. If the figures mentioned bear any relation to the truth, the concentration of fighting planes on the Mongolian frontier is far greater than any expert has estimated or imagined. The reader may well ask who are these "Mongols," so well equipped in the air that they have lost 250 planes, say the Japanese, in a conflict nobody heard of until Moscow and Tokyo began to swap yarns.

In describing the fight as between the Japanese-Manchukuoan and the Soviet-Mongolian aviation forces, the Russian communique gives the correct answer. The relation of Russia to Outer Mongolia is for all practical purposes the same as that between Japan and Manchukuo. The most recent clashes between Japan and Russia have been at Changkufeng, on the Korean-Soviet frontier, in 1938 and 1936 and the tension centered on the eastern border of Manchukuo. Following several unsuccessful Japanese efforts to "open up" Outer Mongolia, a mutual assistance pact was signed between the Mongolian leaders and the Soviet Union, and Outer Mongolia, at least in the military sense, came under the avowed protection of Russia. The Japanese and Russian Governments have since been fortifying the boundary, to the accompaniment of sporadic incidents, reported and unreported.

Whatever their actual number, the "Mongol" planes are, of course, Russian planes; and whatever the true story of the current engagements, they are part of the test of strength in process between Japan and the U.S.S.R. since 1931. For the present the Japanese are too heavily involved in China to be able to divert much of their military force to the Russian frontiers, but there is always the possibility that Moscow, although apparently basing its Eastern policy on defence of its frontiers, may be putting out "feelers" in Asia in connection with the decisions the Kremlin is now facing in Europe. The whole thing clear in the outbreaks East and West is that they are all of a piece. The volcano is rumbling and the eruption, if it comes, will have no boundaries.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Your Body Can Do Great Amount of Work Without Much Food

Like other boys, I was interested in stories of adventure—South Sea Islands, shipwreck, being cast in the jungle. As I grew older, I still liked the stories but couldn't understand how these adventurers were able to keep going with little or no food. While I knew that the human body was capable of doing a great amount of work under stress of circumstances, I also knew that it must have plenty of food to supply that energy. It would appear that we have doubts about my adventurers' ability to work with little or no food can at last be swept away, and by an outstanding nutrition authority, Dr. L. M. Rabinovitch, McGill University, Montreal.

In the Journal of Nutrition (Philadelphia), Dr. Rabinovitch reports his study of the effect of a very low diet on 500 diabetics since these persons must live on diets considerably lower than their usual habits. He found that bodily balance or equilibrium may be maintained with diets the calorie-food or fuel—value of which are much below the generally accepted standards. With these low or reduced diets, the average loss of weight was much less than was expected. This would prove then that the amount of food necessary to supply energy for work was very small.

"Since these diets resulted in an improvement in health (in diabetics), it is necessary to assume that the human body has available some unrecognized source of energy". Since the average diet contains sufficient energy (2500 calories) to do about three million foot tons of work, besides what is used up by the body processes (heart, lungs, digestion), the human machine appears to be very inefficient under ordinary conditions. That the human body is not inefficient however, is proven by the fact that when it is underfed, it can still do work because it has available tea mentioned above source of energy.

It is known that sugar—to supply energy—is stored in liver, muscles, and skin, but even beyond this the appetite is a sure guide further sources of food and energy supply which we can use when our food intake becomes low.

This then, explains why my ed were capable of heroic deeds despite hard labor and small amount of food.

Letters to the Editor

FLOOD DAMAGE STOPPED

To the Editor of the Ontario Intelligencer:

Sir,—I express astonishment at people who continue to reside near volcanos and in earthquake sections.

Belleville was settled about one hundred and fifty years ago and the business street laid out along the bank of the river. More will be sustained over $2,000,000 damage to real and personal property by the flood on that street and this damage will continue. In newly engaged cities from Montreal to Detroit the principal business street or one of the principal business streets is the street runs northerly and southerly. If the business houses of Belleville were erected for instance, on Dundas Street, damage to real and personal property of business houses would be eliminated. After one hundred and fifty years of disastrous experience why not make the change?

W. C. MIKEL.

Sought for a week by Louisiana state police on warrants charging him with embezzlement of more than $100,000 in Louisiana State University funds, Dr. James Monroe Smith, 51, former president of the university, surrendered to police of Brockville, Ont., after telephoning to authorities his intention. Dr. Smith and his wife were reported seen in several American and Canadian cities following their disappearance from Baton Rouge, La., after the prominent educator resigned the post that he had received from the late Huey Long, and were definitely identified in Belleville before the surrender. They rented a summer cottage at Island Charleston Lake and the professor stated that he decided to give himself up after reading newspaper reports that he had been indicted on the embezzlement charges in his home state. Louisiana state police flew to Canada to take back their prisoner who waived extradition. Principals in the dramatic university probe are shown here. Dr. and Mrs. Smith are at LEFT. CENTRE shows Police Chief Wilmot F. Young of Brockville who received the telephone call from the professor announcing his intention to surrender. At TOP RIGHT is Owen W. Ware, son-in-law of Dr. Smith and named with him in the embezzlement charges; LOWER RIGHT, Dr. Paul M. Hebert, dean of Louisiana State University who was appointed acting president to succeed Dr. Smith.

SMITH ADMITTED

New Orleans, July 4—(AP)—Louisiana's attention was focused today on statements by the former Governor and the Supreme Court Justice alleging that Dr. James Monroe Smith, charged with embezzling $100,000 from the State University he headed, admitted "financial irregularities" at the school before he resigned.

While federal agents were promised by Governor Earl K. Long they could have first right to quiz the educationist now being returned from Brockville, Ont., where he was taken into custody Saturday, former Governor Richard Leche said Smith, before going to jail, told him "he had done a very foolish thing" and borrowed $300,000 without authorization of the (school) Board."

Told to Come

"I was informed by the former State Governor said in a telephone statement to The Associated Press, he added that he then did not realize true meaning of Smith's statement. He explained he told Smith to "go home and rest up while he looked into the matter."

He said, he sent for Attorney General Eugene Stanley and R. G. Cooper, then supervisor of public funds, and that Supreme Court Justice Fred Odom and Borah Leonard, the mansion in Baton Rouge at the time.

While these officials were in the room, Smith telephoned Governor and told him that in addition to making unauthorized borrowings he had made little trading on account" on behalf of the university.

Offered to Make Amends

Fourcard, in an interview with the New Orleans Times-Picayune, said Smith offered "to make amends for his 'gambling losses', meaning the money he lost in stock market manipulations . . . but none of those present considered Dr. Smith's proposal."

Leche explained he looked at Smith and asked him:

"Well Doc, do you want to do it the hard way or the easy way?"

The former Governor said that when Smith answered he would return, he told one of the Attorney General's assistants to write out a resignation for the President to sign.

Leche said Smith then signed it and left.

Taken to States

Syracuse, N. Y., July 4—(AP)—Dr. James Monroe Smith, former Louisiana State University President was placed under arrest today with his wife, in police custody, after crossing the border on fugitive charges of embezzlement.

Border officials said the plane in which they embarked arrived here from Newark under special charter at 4 a.m., DST. They said the pilot announced his destination as Newark, N.J., when he took off.

Proclaiming his innocence since his arrest, Smith and his wife were driven to Syracuse early today.

Police drove the Smiths on their uneventful trip through upstate New York from Brockville. The party travelled in the sedan Smith purchased before entering Canada at Windsor, Ont., last week.

Travelling approximately 40 miles an hour, the car entered the United States after pausing midway of the Thousand Islands Bridge across the St. Lawrence River for a thorough search of Smiths' luggage by customs officials. The party stopped once for a few minutes near Watertown.

'Courage and Determination' Shown By King, Queen on Visit to Canada

London, July 4—(CP)— King George and Queen Elizabeth showed "courage and determination" when they undertook their visit to the new world; the Marquess of Lothian, Ambassador-designate to the United States told the Canada Club here last night.

He spoke at a dinner marking the Dominion's 72nd birthday, at which eight members of the royal suite who accompanied Their Majesties across Canada, were guests of honor.

"I do not think it is always realized what an act of courage and determination it was for two relatively young people, having just mounted the throne, to go to quite unfamiliar conditions and face quite unknown difficulties, and never escape the most pitiless spotlight the world knows—the western spotlight," Lord Lothian said.

"Yet they never put a foot wrong, never faltered in their courtesy and friendliness and their good humor, and brought home a triumphant success."

A New Meaning

Hon. Vincent Massey, Canadian High Commissioner in London, said that "God save the King" has taken on a new meaning in Canada since the royal visit.

The welcome accorded by Canadians to the King and Queen revealed to the whole world the unities of the British Commonwealth, Lord Lothian said.

It revealed again that the monarchy stands for unity, national responsibility, and friendship at home and abroad. The monarchy is the real reason, he said, why anarchy will never disrupt the empire. It is unintelligible to Canadians to admit no other political force and to itself the most destructive political force in the modern world.

Members of the royal tour attending the dinner were the Earl of Airlie, Lord Chamberlain to the Queen; Captain Michael Adeane, assistant private secretary to the King, Earl Eldon, lord-in-waiting to the King; Lieut.-Colonel Piers Legh and Commander E. M. C. Abel Smith, RN., equerries to the King; George F. Steward, chief press liaison officer and Surgeon-Captain R. E. V. Wylie, R.N., medical officer.

TURKEYS KILLED BY HAIL STORM

Lampman, Sask., July 4—(CP)— Hail described as the worst within the memory of residents here Saturday flattened crops, smashed windows, damaged buildings and killed turkeys in a strip of territory stretching from Lampman 23 miles to the international boundary in a wide semi-circle. Lampman is in the southeast corner of Saskatchewan.

So much glass was broken in the town that two shipments were being rushed in for replacements. Two hundred panes in the hospital here and every pane on the west side of all buildings were smashed by the storm which lasted for about 15 minutes.

Hail the size of pigeon eggs lacerated the backs of cows and between buildings the stones piled to a depth of four feet in some places. Heavy rain followed.

Considerable loss of stock was suffered by George Sachan, general merchant, when water came in through broken windows. Furniture in homes was damaged by water, which flooded the floors of practically all houses in town.

The stones came down with such force they hammered dents in the sides of buildings and tops of cars were riddled.

In a number of cases hail stones smashed through windows on the west side of houses, then bounced off floors and through east side windows. A number of houses will have to be re-shingled.

An estimate of crop damage was not available.

Hail also hit an area eight miles south of Sedley, 25 miles southeast of Regina, where it flattened crops, but extent of damage can not yet be estimated.

Martial music is in the air. Picnics are spread. The call of "fore" echoes on a thousand golf courses. We Canadians go in for holidays in a big way.

The truth is, we go in for many things in a big way. Our interests are keen and diversified. We are always on the alert for new thrills—new opportunities.

This characteristic is one of the reasons we are such great newspaper readers, and it explains why so much of this interest is devoted to the advertisements. We know from experience that the advertisements are filled with opportunities; that they are the beacons of new thrills, of new satisfactions in life.

This day, many people will find many real values in the advertisements in this newspaper. We can't go shopping in person throughout the markets of the world, but through the advertisements we can, and do.

Fashion Flashes

GRAY SMOKE drifts over the fashion shades, a popular shade. A delicious evening frock of soft silk chiffon in this shade trimmed with bands of fur, is produced to match and placed at the neckline, shoulders and hem.

A CHANGE from the usual travel coat silhouette shows a snug waistline, a skirt full and rippled. This is made of a wool plaided with green, dark red and brown on a beige ground. Pouch collar of blonde lynx.

NICELY TURNED out for the day wearing a bolero suit of paper-weight linen with full skirt and high waist. Blouse of white lingerie Good from cotton.

FUN AT THE FAIR isn't possible without comfy feet. A good choice is an oxford in black white or navy calf with a wide vamp, open toe and a mesh front. Cuff-ed toes.

LOOKING AHEAD we see that sheared beaver maintains its high rating in fur fashions. A model ready for summer exploitation has a bolero and skirt effect with an insert of suede at the waistline which forms a tie at one side.

TOP OFF a sheer black frock with a large black hat. A becoming model is black lace made with a wide brim and flat crown. Clusters of pink camellias appear above and below the brim.

Get Back to Normal

MARY HEALY...her strong ba ck gives her an attractive figure.

By HELEN FOLLETT

TAKE a backward look. Whenever you find yourself before a full-length, triple mirror, as you will when you get a new frock fitted, size up your back. It should curve in nicely at the waistline, have no sign of a bulge above it. Nice back, swell figure. The backbone is the main structure of the skeleton. Throw it out of alignment and the figure loses grace and balance. Not only that, but the musculature becomes impaired and weakened, the nervous system is under a strain.

Your spinal column will perform as nature intended if you will stand on the ball of the foot, carry the head on the level, keep the body stretched full length. When the backbone relaxes the abdominal muscles sag, the head leans into next curve, the chest flattens. The feminine shape loses spirit and verve; style gets up and sadly goes away.

Don't throw your shoulders forward; don't throw them back too far and don't let them hang swallowed a curtain rod. The backward pose makes movements stiff and the figure should appear vibrant but it should also be softly beautiful and at ease.

Here is an exercise that will strengthen back muscles: Stand erect, elbows resting in the hands. Extend the hands and arms out in front and then slowly with a hard muscle pull, send them over your head as far back as you can. Return to first position and repeat.

Your First Trip in a Sleeping-Car?

During these coming weeks, with vacations and a World's Fair beckoning each one, thousands of women will be taking their first trip in a sleeping-car. New travelers are asking questions about the "mysteries"— to them— of the Where and How of undressing and dressing in the strange new world of a compact berth cabin.

It is natural and understandable that women travelers are a bit timid and apprehensive over taking their first trip in a sleeping-car, since they needn't be, for it's all very simple, easy and convenient.

If your accommodation is a completely enclosed room of any kind —a compartment, a "bedroom", a drawing-room—all dressing and toilet facilities are in the room; therefore you will not have to go to the public dressing-room. But if your sleeping accommodation is in the open car, you must use the car dressing room.

The usual sleeping car in this country is divided into sections, each section having a lower and an upper berth. At one end of the car is the dressing room for women; at the other end, the dressing room for men. Usually above one entrance to the body of the car, there is a sign (illuminated at night) marked "Women". Or there is a sign "women" on the curtains at the entrance to the dressing room.

When you are ready to go to bed ing for the porter (you will find the call-bell between the windows in your berth), and ask him to "make up your berth". While he is doing this, you may sit in a nearby seat or take your toilet case to the dressing room to begin your preparations for the night.

There are two schools of thought concerning whether it is more convenient for a woman to undress and to dress in her berth or in the dressing room. Do whichever you wish—either way is correct.

Let's say that now your berth has been made up. The porter has put your suit-case under the bed; your overnight bag or toilet-case is on the shelf at the bottom of the berth. Your hat is in a paper hat-box brought to you by the porter.

In front of your berth hangs a pair of heavy curtains made of an opaque fabric. You step behind these and button them together in the centre. These curtains, once closed can be opened only from the inside! Behind the curtain will find two hangers, on which to hang your dress and coat. Other items of clothing may be folded and laid either on the shelf at the foot of the berth or in the small hammock suspended across the wheels. If you leave your shoes on the floor under the berth, the porter will polish them and return them to their place. Now, with your travel slippers on, with your robe over you your night clothes, and with your toilet case or overnight bag in hand you are ready to go to the dressing room to complete your preparations for the night. A long tailored robe is the most appropriate and convenient, short, light fitting negligee, light in color, is definitely unsuitable.

Most women find it more agreeable only to partially disrobe in the berth. They hang coat and dress on the hangers, go to the dressing room to complete their toilet, then return to their berth to undress and prepare for the night. Whichever you do, you will find that you have ample room in your berth to undress and dress.

Or, if you wish, you may take your toilet case and overnight bag, and robe, remove your clothes in the dressing room and return to your berth in your dressing robe.

If you have an upper berth you will find your toilet case complete ly, gather together all your belongings, and then ask the porter to bring the little stepladder (it's very sturdy) by which you access your berth. When you wish to come down, either during the night or in the morning, you ring bring the stepladder.

You needn't be embarrassed at the porter's coming and going in the dressing room in your robe, for he has been trained to ignore the other passengers, who will be similarly attired, and who will be similarly occupied with their own preparations for retiring or dressing.

THE DOCTOR AND THE CAUSE

A physical let-down is a sign of something that may become serious unless properly treated by the good friend of mankind —the family doctor.

Experience in this instance is not the best teacher — merely the most expensive. The better part of wisdom is to take the matter in time, relax in the doctor's office, tell him all about it, accept his skilled advice.

His advice may be merely to cut down on extra activities, or it may include medication. In either case, follow his advice implicity.

Always remember how important it is to have prescriptions compounded in the precise manner required to secure the most gratifying effects.

Keep Your Memory Bright

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've been going with a girl who is still in high school and I'm 20 years old. She says she does not love me more than anyone. But as she hasn't finished school, I've agreed that we wouldn't let the affair become serious, and that she should go with other boys, and I would take out other girls.

The last time I was with her, we discussed her vacation. I asked if I might see her to the station. She said she was going, She told me that another boy was taking her. I was in love with someone else? Will you please help me decide?

Victor.

Frankly, I wouldn't take a small town girl seriously. Sometimes it gives her a chance to explain, but I would not be too assertive about it. Why not make a joke of it? Perhaps the other boy asked her first, and since you agreed between you that you would not demand exclusive attention from each other, be a sport about it.

As she has already left, why not send her a box of candy or a bunch of flowers to show her you still love her?

Try Independence

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I went with a certain boy for about a year and we had a little quarrel, about something I've entirely forgotten, and he didn't come over for several months. When he finally came back again he asked me to forgive and said that he had discovered how much he loved me.

Everything was lovely again and now he's beginnin to act queer again. I love him very much and I don't see how he's becoming indifferent I asked him if he was interested in any one and he seemed to avoid me. He confessed he still cares for me and doesn't want to break up. Do you think he really cares for me?

Wondering.

I think it would be better to take the case of this uncertain boy friend into your own hands and "set the tune" yourself. He wandered off because of a silly quarrel, because he's sure of an affectionate reception on his return.

The welcoming of the prodigal son is a beautiful story, but personally I like a touch of independence that ceases to be a virtue when it comes to sweethearts. Perhaps the pleasure of the chase is more thrilling to him, and he's wondering if you are interested in your love for him.

Try to be more independent next time he leaves without telling you. He may care a great deal more, provided the wrong way about holding him, my dear.

A Very Candid Girl

Dear Miss Fairfax:

For the past three months I've been dating out a girl I've known for several years. Her family moved away a couple of years ago, but recently moved back to the city. Now she tells me she is in love with a man who is married, and swears up and down that she cannot forget him.

It was mighty square of her to tell me all about it, but what I could judge for myself. And she left it up to me to decide the right thing to do. Shall I give her up or go on with our affair, knowing all the time she is in love with someone else? Will you please help me decide?

In Doubt.

Sometimes I am dreadfully afraid of advising people against their own inclinations, more especially when in doing so, I might appear to be unsympathetic. While you do not say so, I think that you are in love with this girl.

If you love this girl, and she loves someone else, it would be an injustice to both of you. If you persuaded her to marry you. Then too, you could get no happiness out of such a union. My answer is simple. Break off with this young lady either at once or slowly. Seek happiness with someone who can give you the love that you have every right to expect in a wife.

RENTS ARE LOW IN EDEN

By PETER BENEDICT

"In the case of this sixty-odd ground," said Adam coolly, turning his fine eyes from the magnificent sky outside the window with reluctance, "for the day tested river picnics rather than bricks and mortar, 'you won't be put to the necessity even of wondering. I haven't bought your children's recreation ground, but although it is, to build houses on it."

"Then may I ask——" It was sold your understand, on the consideration that it was to be used for the public good." It was a fine phrase and from long practise he uttered it with an impressive fluency. Adam thought: his self-control from us almost improved the effect.

"So it is, or at least I believe I can call it so. If you're interested, there's going to be a library, a swimming bath with an attendant—tennis courts, swings and—and anything else I can think of adding by the time we've reached that stage. A combination, perhaps; I've no doubt they'd like one. Is that a satisfactory explanation?"

"Most satisfactory, of course, but I had no idea——"

"Neither had I until I spent a day watching them play cricket on a glorified pinball heath, and I'm afraid this plot of ground won't run to a cricket field, but at least we'll find them something to do instead; and later we must see about finding a pitch; there must be plenty of good fields going idle."

He picked up his hat and glanced from the desk; the paper-knife, impelled by a particularly nervous spasm of his fingers, followed it to the floor.

"I'm obliged to you for giving me such a prompt sale, at any rate, Mr. Washburn. I'm afraid I've been a nuisance."

"Not at all, not at all. You must know that I'm deeply interested in your plans, Mr. Probert—very deeply interested. I'm at your service whenever you want help or advice, remember." He rose from his chair to see the last of Probert, Adam out and be done with him; his face and not an ambush when the door had closed between them, though it carried a certain tremulous smile of self-congratulation still. He pulled out a silk handkerchief, and Adam Probert, after a stare from his fat hands. They were not fond of each other.

From the room where he had hailed to light a cigarette, Adam heard clearly the whirr of the telephone as the chairman dialled a number, and the tone, though not the words, of the voice which followed, indubitably pleased with itself. There was no doubt, therefore this was a local number.

"Hodgson Pike?" he thought mechanically, exercising his clairvoyance once again, "to share a cringer over the sale of the land to them Beardsley, to protest he could get no money."

A Significant Glance

He went slowly down the well-carpeted stairs and out into the vestibule of the offices of the Council. He was feeling rather tired, with the curiosity he affected when where his liking was not engaged. When a woman, then was the sweep of gravel before the doors, the bits of her dress caught in the car door, the way she had looked at him, though she did not know what his real business clairvoyance.

But when he reached the turn of the road, and a glanced along to where the hawthorns met the hollies and both lay brown and waterlogged in the dust, he captured the memory in a moment. She was the woman who had come along the lane with her chin upon her shoulder and run into him as he crossed from his car; the woman in the dark; and that was why his subconscious mind had kept the feeling of her body, and the bold walk she had, rather than any recognizable feature of her face. He felt again the touch of her, so light and so instantly recalling, and yet so vital that it had seemed to pass into him like a tiny electric shock, and fill him with a shivering sensitivity. Her eyes had that quality, too.

Adam stepped over the fallen twigs and almost looking thoughtfully down into the fermy side of the copse beyond the white gate. The slope was not very great, and yet it seemed to drop away before his eyes, such was the stillness and the peace it had. The timber, he judged, was very old, for the trees had attained an immense girth, and the turf itself was lost in moss. The turf itself was at close-grained as moss and of a dull shading emerald the open fields had lost some three months ago in the first hot sun. In the heart of it he heard, but could not see, the water falling, a sound crystal pure. He turned and went back to his own property, and the peace was gone, and his mind quickened to activity around him. He was changing the face of Court Brandon with a vengeance, and changing it at up speed; and everything about him, the fermy cries of men and beasts in the sun to the voices which on all sides chirped 'Good-morning' to him as he passed, conspired to remind him that the day was the pivot on which this erection rested. It was a feeling of which he was secretly fond, though he shared the confession with no one and even laughed at it to himself.

In the little red-brick office, in the dazzling sun, he was unashamed swivel chair, a very young gentleman sat scribbling, and a middle-aged man with the air of a trier or Mickey Dennis, who was scarcely older, than his face and Adam's plan-chester office, and ran it, as he himself admitted and Adam did almost on top of that bluff on the not envy, extremely well. Mickey sat upon the desk, for there was no one chair, and he did not fancy it; but he slid to his feet when Adam entered and reached for the hat he had discarded.

"I'll be getting back to town, Mr. Probert, if you don't want me here. I had to close the office for the morning, as a matter of fact, to come at all; but there were some cases I desperately wanted to have before you could do anything. Kenworth has them down now and I'll have them situated one or two of his own this morning, locals. What'd you think? Will you be able to be in the office?"

"Depends on the circumstances," said Adam, "but I'll look at them. It may be necessary in some cases."

"I'll get back, then, shall I? Or can you use me here for a while? I wouldn't mind a day in the country, while the good weather lasts."

"Stay here," said Adam indifferently. "One day won't matter much, and I'll see you in a day or two. I can go up and look at another piece of ground I've just bought which carries a few dirty swings and calls itself the Council Recreation Ground? I've bought that and the two flat fields beside it, and a recreation ground is what it's going to be. I want a clubhouse and a swimming-bath and tennis courts and so on—think of so many things, as you like, and see how many of them we can fit in. Take Britten up with you and whatever he says, don't contradict him; he'll be right."

Mickey Dennis stood in the doorway, and a senile half sheepish and half honestly amused came and went in his face as he looked at his employer.

"Honestly, sir, if you weren't a millionaire, I'd be getting worried about my quarter's salary. What are you going to buy next? The Council Office?"

"I might, at that," said Adam, and smiled at the thought. "It isn't a bad building; that's not an idea, Mickey."

"I'd like to see old Washburn's face," said the very young gentleman, clanging up for a second from his writing.

"So would I; but not again this morning; once is enough for one day. I've just come from there."

"And did he say where you could him an offer for these meadows? Thought you wanted them as well for still more jerry-built hodges, I don't mind betting."

"You'd win. And pretended he'd been planning the same destiny for them."

"And put you off, or tried to, so that he could 'phone Beardsley and get tipped off how much extra to put on the price." I know the game," said Mickey knowingly and very well, for he was a native, and observant. "They don't publish the full report of their meetings; the Council chairman sees to that. I hope you tied him down."

"I did, and I got what I wanted at my price. I won't pretend that my price displeased him; it didn't. I'm obliged to him if I'll come down to doing him in preference to beating him down, and I'm not without thoughtfulness: "Ah well this is a one place where they can't do any damage thank heaven! Get along and look over that plan to Mickey. Be back at one and we'll have lunch together at the King's Arms. Then we'll talk about these cases of yours."

Mickey departed; from the small window they saw him run across the trodden space between the store sheds and disappear behind the night-watchman's cabin.

"I've got a desperate case out of the village, Heslip sir," said Adam worth, hunting among the papers which littered his desk, "and I know they've been driving people out of the place, really, there hasn't been a house built for exactly privately, for something like ten years and I've got my eye on several that want scrapping, too. This is a young man, who works in the other direction, out at Kennels beyond Bishop's Brandon, so of course he can't take his hour in the town, it would mean a twenty-mile journey every day, and the trains are not only expensive, but confoundedly bad. There's no cottage for him at the job, and no house here at Court Brandon. He's in lodgings, he's been married four years, and there's a kid."

He put down the paper, and looked up at Adam, his eyes large and young and earnest behind the distorting glasses. Adam lit a cigarette, and sat down. Mickey's place upon the corner of the desk.

"Fellow come himself?"

"Yes sir."

"Like him Think he's straight?"

"Absolutely, sir. Good lodgings, you see; there's the devil to pay if the kid has a cough. Landlord: I think you ought to know, sir, he's getting fairly good money, and I'm pretty sure he's a decent chap wanted to offer a higher rent than we're asking, to clinch the matter and he didn't."

"Put him down," said Adam, and slid away to the door to escape the vicarious thankfulness which at once began to exude from his opponent face turned up to his. From the open doorway he could see in a tantalising nearness still, the tops of the ancient trees in the glen beyond the lane. On an impulse he turned back to Kenworth, and demanded:

"You're the native. Who owns that copsie across the road there? The place fascinates me. I know it's private, but I've been there several times, and I think it gets better every time."

"Oh, that belongs to Mrs. Court—Captain Court's widow. They used to be a very considerable property, the whole of the parish, but there never was a penny to keep it up, and gradually, piece by piece, it's been sold off. Mickey Dennis, who was scarcely older, than his face and Adam's plan-chester office, and ran it, as he himself admitted and Adam did almost on top of that bluff on the not envy, extremely well. Mickey sat upon the desk, for there was no one chair, and he did not fancy it;but he slid to his feet when Adam entered and reached for the hat he had discarded.

humized little waterfalls among the thirsty whispering trees. Now she leaned her chin upon her palms, and looked down upon one green open wound, raw with new red blood of sand, and dust, and brick; stretching from field to field, from hedge to lane; as if some horrible skin disease had broken out over that so lovely face, and blotted it from her sight for ever.

Even the silence had departed; the activity of men among the building sites, the coming and going of cars and lorries which she saw as pestilence and crawling beetles, seemed to infect the air even in her eyes with a medley of sounds, none of them in keeping with the Court of Brandon she desired.

She put up her hand with a heavy sigh, and pulled off the smart little hat, and threaded her fingers through her hair. There was a curious ache there in her head; she could have understood it better if it had been in her heart; but there was no elegance, the odious eloquence of all the commiserating voices had left the pain there after the confusion of their arguments had ceased.

It had been a bad omen, that meeting with him at the foot of the stairs in the Council Office; a sympathy of the whole matter; for there as in all things, he had got his way. Mr. Hodgson found new self speculating somewhat bitterly upon Adam Probert. She admired while she hated; the calm assurance in him which neither the lodgings, even the sullen hostility in his face, nor the cold eyes to dwell so frankly upon her as she had met and passed him, the impersonal and candid glance which had examined her from head to foot, and assessed among the good points the beauty of her eyes and the fit of her shoes with an equal detached approval for each. A dangerous man because he could not be swayed by any emotion; and was as sure of that as if she had known him all her life. To provoke him would be difficult, and to induce in him any person gentleness virtually impossible. A dangerous man, reaping where he had not sown, and all the rest of it; something almost Biblical about him in another truth, so essentially sure of himself and his, and so ruthless. But how Percy must like him, with the grand bone-structure of his face!

In her attitude to Adam Probert the man Catherine could be as unreasoned as he; the destroyer, the institution, the public benefactor, the Socialist gentleman, the absolute of vandalism had to be destroyed. She knew that now; not only for the saving of what could be saved out of that pitiful wreckage in the valley, but for her own saving too.

She had been too long away; it was almost an obsession in her now, this unresting agency after the Court Brandon estate was gone for ever, dead and in its semi-detached red-brick grave. Her life had buried with it. Young as she was, she had ceased to feel any pleasure in living, but for this gnawing hunger which she supposed was the impetuous will of her honour's redress.

She would go, and he should pay her high for what he had already done; but heaven alone knew how. She had been to see every available member on the District Council, and every voter they had talked of progress, so vigorously and with such eloquence, that she was sure they did not themselves believe one word of it. Mr. Druce, a retired gentleman sentimental over the possibilities of the new Council Office, had been reduced to only in his compliments to herself. Mr. Beardsley a little brusque in his hypocrisies, as if he hardly thought the deception worth the trouble. They acknowledged that Court Brandon had been a beauty spot, but could not see that it would cease to be one when it had lost its trees, and most of its minor waters had been drained; besides, there was progress to be considered; they must move with the times.

Now it has been something of a relief to talk to Redfern that hungry-

THREE PASSENGERS ON ONE TICKET

No wonder Captain Maurice MacGregor, of Trans-Canada Airlines, was looking perplexed when this shot was taken at Regina, Sask., airport, Wednesday. Here was a problem! Three passengers on one ticket! If Mrs. Albert O. BELLEVILLE INTS. BACK IN CELLAR BY TWIN LOSS

Defeated in Napanee 11-7 in Second Game of Doubleheader

LOOSELY PLAYED

Collins and Sero Slap Spheroid for Real Healthy Wallops

Bud Wilkins' Belleville intermediates slipped back into the cellar of the Bay of Quinte League as they dropped two ball games to Napanee Gilbards over the holiday. After losing a loosely played game 12 to 9 in the morning the locals journeyed to Napanee in the afternoon, where Skipper Walt Grew's charges made merry at the expense of the locals, who showed their exceedingly poor base running in the second tilt to be consistent on the day and lose at Napanee by an 11 to 7 count.

The afternoon game had little on the morning affair, with the exception that both teams were off form as well, bobbling the ball around with consistency. Napanee outhit the locals 15 to 10; collected them 11 to 7 and for good measure made a surprising number of baseball blunders. Belleville 7 to 5.

After Belleville took a one run lead in the second inning of the fourth by virtue of Collins' single and a two run double batted safely by Ellis and McQuaid, Napanee returned to the offensive to score five runs on six hits and a couple of walks squeezed in. Napanee added one run each in the next two and three in the seventh to coast in. Green also got a single and three in the fifth. In both the sixth and seventh Belleville got the first two on with none out and could score but one single tally, as they turned in as sad display in matters of base running as has been seen throughout the Bay of Quinte League play. The locals did rally to score two in the ninth and then left two stranded.

It was a loosely played game, although Belleville was held to two errors by Switzer's seven. Russ Collins had a perfect day at the bat, five hits in as many tries, while Sero smashed out a triple and double in duplicate in the morning's effort at the bat. Jocko, Kinsley and Lucas sprung points bat for Wall Grow's charges, with Switzer hefting his own cause with a pair and batting in three runs. The repeated errors in both fielding efforts are brilliancy, that might have shone, otherwise. Two fast double plays by the locals should somewhat to the pastime, however.

79-Year-Old Race Driver Wins Prince Edward Gold Trophy

"Bob" Jaite of Jaite, Ohio, Nosses Out Last Years Winner

SENSATIONAL TIME

Picton, July 4 (Special)—"Bob" Jaite, of Jaite, Ohio, seventy-nine-year old "youngster" who does his first speed boat exacting one month ago, won the Prince Edward Gold Cup at the annual Picton-on-the-Bay regatta here yesterday nosing out the 69-year-old veteran "Jackie" Cooper of Kansas City, last year's winner after three gruelling heats.

Jaite, although finishing with two seconds and one first place, against Cooper's two firsts and a fourth, won the trophy with an aggregate of 1000 points against Cooper's 961.

Don Furman, Buffalo, N. Y. "Augusta" finished in third position with two thirds and a second, with Jim Robbins of Picton in "Marguerite V" bringing up the fall position.

Records Shattered

Records went by the board, as the beautiful speedster flashed over a near-perfect course.

In the second heat, Cooper in an effort to break the existing world's mile record of 68 miles per hour was well on his way to a new mark, roaring over the first lap of the course at a speed of 68 miles per hour.

Rounding the buoy for the home stretch on the last lap, Cooper's battery terminals broke and his motor conked out. A few minutes later, he crossed the finish line in fourth place, thus cost him the valuable Gold Cup.

Just Missed Record

In the morning trials Cooper just missed a new world's record over the measured mile course, but established a new provincial mark of 66.666 miles per hour for 225 cu. inch displacement hydroplanes.

The former Canadian record was 78 miles per hour while the world record is 98.8.

The Gold Trophy, emblematic of the Ontario championship for this class, has formally presented to Jaite by Commodore Wilfred Lane of the Prince Edward Yacht Club following the final heat.

The indicated speed is a ground-cut in North American power boat circles and the handsome silver-baked drivers exchanged gay banter.

Bob spoke over the microphone.

Jokes Over Mike

Jaite visibly affected by his sensational win, called to the other drivers to "play away from us old fellows. He's 79 and I'm 69." Cooper laid away on the sheet at 40. Look at me I am 75," he said while a flock of cameras clicked. Nearly a thousand spectators that lined the shores of Prince Edward Bay.

He paid splendid tribute to his fellow veteran, "He is a real sport and drivers that ever competed in a race" he said "and it is a privilege to have driven against him. I'll be alone to win from him."

Cooper, in his splendid sportsmanship that has always characterized him ever paid tribute to his conqueror. "I am thrilled," he said, "but can you imagine that old fellow beating me. My hat is off to grand-daughter that is three years older than am I." Cooper was escorted from the crowd as the beautiful trophy was formally presented to the winner.

Looks as if the Yanks will have to take the two younger Big Magic after all....Larry MacPhail says he's had 'em both booked over and the Columbia has filled every date as a hitter on the coast, and that American Association pitchers literally have got hep to brother Vince's weaknesses at Kansas City.

Teams Leading Loops July 4 Generally Win the Pennants; Reds, Yanks in Driver's Seat

Yanks Almost Sure to Head American and Cincinnati Has Good Chance

FELLER WINS AGAIN

Chapman of Cleveland Equals Major League Mark by Hitting 3 Triples

(By Bill White Associated Press Sports Writer)

The Fourth of July to baseball men is one of the most important dates of the year.

There is an adage that says the team cutting the corners on the 4th will be cutting up the world series money. It's a safe bet there'll be some true about 80 per cent of the time in America and 90 per cent in the National League.

With that evidence in mind, it isn't hard to vision a Yankee-Red series in October.

Cincinnati Reds are currently four games ahead of the New York Yankees and the Yankees are something over a dozen games to the good.

Thus if history repeats in the American League, the Yankees can coast in and let old man percentage win the pennant. In the National League development will be to see if the percentage will hold for the Reds. They haven't been overly impressive since June 21, when they started to add a trifle, they have lost six out of nine since then, but have lost only 1 1-2 games of their lead.

While most of the clubs were resting yesterday, today's host will gain bull of doubleheaders, the three games played offered some noteworthy performances.

Mize Hits Two Homers

Johnny Mize smashed two homers, a double and a triple to move St. Louis Cards into third place in the National League today in a 12 to 3 win over Chicago Cubs.

Mize's circuit clouts back to fourth spot.

In the junior circuit Bobby Feller and Bruce Campbell teamed nicely to hand the Indians a 4-3 victory over Detroit Tigers. Bobby limited the opposition to five hits while Campbell drove in the winning with two on to break a 1-1 tie in the eighth. Feller fanned only two and it time low for him.

Ben Chapman, Indian centre-fielder, established a modern Major League record when he slammed out three triples to share that mark with six other players.

In the only other game played on the current flare-up of tempers and over the Majors rose again Ernie Lombardi, Reds catcher was banished while the White Sox hammered out 15 hits and an 8-6 win.

Pitchers Rookie Lawson and Vernon Kennedy and Manager Fred Haney all got total too vocally to a decision by umpire Cal Hubbard and found the selves under an early shower.

CANADIAN RECORD SET BY COOPER FOR 225 BOATS

Travels 81 Miles an Hour Over Measured Course at Picton

LOSES GOLD CUP

Robert Jaite, 79 Years Old, Takes Trophy With 1,000 Points

Picton, July 4—Jack Cooper of Kansas City, Mo., Monday lost the Prince Edward Yacht Club $500 gold cup, emblematic of the championship of 225 cubic inch displacement hydroplanes to 79-year-old Robert Jaite of Jaite, Ohio, but set a new Canadian record for this class in a mile trial. Over a measured mile Cooper drove Tops Kat at an average speed of 81 miles per hour. In a second test later he did the mile at an average of 79 miles per hour. Cooper was trying for a world record for the class, but failed in the first attempt by three miles per hour. This was an outstanding showing, since Cooper broke in a new later found to have had a piece missing from the propeller which struck some floating object during the trial.

Robert Jaite of Ohio also tried for a record over the measured mile, but his attempt was an average of 72 miles per hour. Dave Pearson of Toronto, driving Kanadian, did 75 miles per hour. All three boats are entered by Canadian drivers for the mile trial, with Cooper as the new holder of the title.

In the point gold cup race, Jaite amassed a total of 1,000 points, placing first in three heats, while Cooper was second with 969 points, Don Furman, Buffalo, with 935 points, which was viewed by thousand people.

Cooper, in one of the 'gold cup, is 79 years of age, and it is his first time behind the wheel of a boat. The winners:

225 cubic inch, M class, second division: Lloyd Hicks, Belleville.

210 class: Buff Cooper, Picton.

Race officials: Referee: Jack Lemay, Belleville.

Judges: Jack Cooper, Canada; Chas. Bloomfield.

Bay of Quinte free-for-all: Keith Rankin of Picton.

Outboards, Class A: A. R. Louks, Belleville, Can., Class B: Fred Rowse, Great Neck, N.Y. Class C: R. H. Rubbell, Erie, Pa.

Jersey City Retains 1½ Game Margin in International Loop

TORONTO LOSES

Buffalo Bisons Reach .500 Percentage in Winning 7-4

(By The Associated Press)

The Jersey City Giants were almost ready to accede from the New York baseball system when Larry Berry had to call Bud Hafey to the big leagues, to keep them more than recompensed when they got pitcher Vanderberg. However, Jersey had better not run short of pitching talent and send for the tall Dutchman.

Vandenberg is one big reason why the Little Giants are in first place in the International League by a margin of 1½ games over Montreal and Syracuse, their nearest rival pilots, as they moved into a tie for second place last night and preserved Jersey City's 1-2 game lead over Rochester Red Wings.

The defeat tumbled the Bears into a third tie with fourth place in the existing first-division struggle, as Buffalo and Toronto Scorpions the hard-luck title held by his predecessor, Marius Russo.

Wings Trim Royals

While the night game was going on, Rochester put together two big innings to trim Montreal Royals, 7-4, and climb into a tie with the Baltimore Orioles 5-4. Thus at the conclusion of the holiday set of the season, the Chiefs are four games behind the second place Red Wings and Newark's another four games astern. Buffalo's Bisons won tat Syracuse's expense, 7-4, while Toronto Leafs 7-4, and brought their fifth-place Scorpions into a tie with them.

A crowd of 17,524 pre-holiday fans at Jersey City saw Vanderberg turn in his masterpiece, allowing only hit was a double by Mam Ginsberg in the fifth. Vandenberg issued no walks and fanned five to register his seventh victory against who hasn't pitched in a four hitter but made an error and a wild pitch in the seventh to pave the way for the Giants' only run.

Johnson Wins 13th.

Sil Johnson, veteran Rochester hurler, scattered eight hits in his victory, scattering eight Montreal hits while the Wings made only four run cluster in the second and one of five runs in the sixth. Homers by Ginsberg and Ben Chapman started the flurries.

Syracuse also had a big inning to regain third place. Trailing 4-1 going into the last of the seventh Boy Bruner tamed them the Chiefs broke loose for four runs as the Bisquits took over the Baltimore Orioles' 4th error. Buffalo made its tie count to four in Monday's double a southpaw Al Smith's shaky start, taking the first game 7-5. Cojesky's four-bagger in the fifth.

REDNERSVILLE WINS ANOTHER

Amelisburg Defeated in Free-Hitting Contest by 16-11

Rednersville, July 4 (Special)—The Orange and Black of Rednersville stepped into Amelisburg and took the long end of a 16-11 affair. The Bay Shore boys collected 20 hits including four each for Bonter and one a round trip ticket by L. Ward as he is the only one to circle.

The Amelisburg team seemed to go well when they received effective pitching from the visiting nine at times. Crosby was the big extra base hitter for the Amelisburg nine a double and triple, as was Ward of Rednersville with single, double and homer.

Joe Dempsey on the mound for Amelisburg was very ineffective with erratic control and he mixed his offerings with the long ball route. Only one was struck out.

A Dempsey pitching for Rednersville allowed six clean hits, walked one and struck out nine. His control although shaky at times was good enough to issue no bases as it has in earlier games.

The visiting nine were able to steal bases almost at will taking advantage of Crosby's weak throwing arm.

The Quinte crew scored one in the first inning, two in the second and fourth stanzas, one each in the third and fifth and two in the sixth and three in the final frame for a total of sixteen.

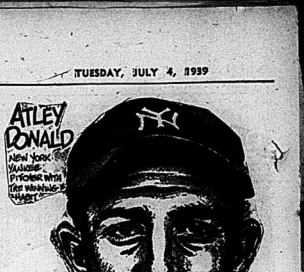
Amelisburg pushed two across in the first, got goose eggs in the next two innings, three in the fourth, four in the fifth, five in the sixth and one more in the last for a total of eleven.

The lineups:

Rednersville: L. Ward 2b; Saxley c; Wannamaker 2b; A. Dempsey p; D. Thompson rf; Dempsey lf; Snell lb; Brickman rf; B. Ward ss.

Amelisburg: O. May 2b; I. May 3b; A. Cannon ss; J. Dempsey p; Crosby cf; Leland rf; J. Dempsey p; Stinson cf; Ferguson lf.

If you don't believe the experts knew what they were saying when they wrote Thursday that the Yankee sweep would have a healthy effect on the Cincinnati Reds, look what happened around the Major League ball parks over the weekend.



CALLING 'EM
Between the Lines
with
Ken J. Colling

Bud Wilkins' champs dropped two games in the Bay of Quinte League over the holiday and today are reported firmly settled without company, in the league's cellar position....Brown and Hay pitched a clutch-pitching saw the Wilkinites lose by 2-1 yesterday morning on the home lot, while when they had a fair chance to win, with Napanee on the spherical for seven costly errors in the afternoon' at home, the local thought up another way to play consistent losing ball and ran home in a most pathetic manner. On several occasions the locals got the first two runs home in every inning but couldn't score the resemblance of a run. Just poor inexcusable base running was the sole reason for that second loss.

Now that the locals are back in the league cellar position, they might as well to take a look at themselves. If they expect to finish in a league play-off berth. There seems to be some misformed rumour floating around that the Belleville team is deserving of a Bay of Quinte League playoff berth, but here and now seems to be a splendid time to contradict the idea and put our baseball house in order. Frankly speaking it looks like a battle for the third position, between the Air Force and Belleville, with Picton and Napanee seemingly the strongest two play-off berths. Unless Skipper Wilkins' charges snap out of the present losing streak very soon hit the win column once in a while, they'll find themselves very much out in the-cold when play-off time rolls around, as they've already lost eight, while the Air Force may win the odd game from Napanee, Picton or Belleville, with Picton and Napanee seemingly the remaining Rebuilt as a peace shrine and tourist attraction, Fort Erie, Ontario, around which much warfare centred during the war of 1812 between Canada and the United States was reopened. Built in the year 1764 to keep American invaders out, its purpose now, in the words of Hon. T. S. McQuesten is "to bring Americans in." This picture at the right above symbolizes the new order as Uncle Sam (J. P. Papelje of Fort Erie in private life) embraces Miss Ontario (Mae-Belle Sampson) and Miss Columbia (Clare Hotchpeth), while at the left the unsuccessful attempt of the British to recapture the fort after it had been surrendered by a small garrison, is acted out by soldiers garbed in the gaudy uniforms of the day.

While the Dominion celebrates the 72nd anniversary of Confederation fitting recognition of this country's growth was given by the New York world's fair which designated July 1 as "Canada's Day" pavilion with Fair President Grover Whalen; at RIGHT Mr. Euler is delivering his address at ceremonies marking official opening of the Dominion's building. Hon. Alfonse Raymond, officially representing the government of Quebec, looks over the massive diorama Quebec exhibit, with Mayor Hanna at the LOWER LEFT. CENTRE shows scarlet-coated riders of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police thrilling the fair crowd with their intricate musical ride and other mounted drills, in the Court of Peace. At LOWER RIGHT is another picture of Mr. Euler as he stressed Canada-United States amity in his address.

NAZI PAPERS

Prime Minister George Kloosterzaff of Bulgaria is due in Berlin tomorrow for a round of festivities and discussions that are to result those held for Prince Paul, regent of Yugoslavia, during whose five-day visit beginning June 1 Hitler guaranteed Yugoslav borders.

Seeffing at Idea of Putsch

Nazi leaders and newspapers scoffed at those who predicted a Nazi putsch in the Free City of Danzig last week end. An authorized spokesman said that "Germany has no intention of forcing the issue" with Poland over Danzig and that "we have no desire to go against the territorial integrity of Poland; if we had wanted to let the matter come to military action we could have done so any day."

Klossterzaroff and his wife and daughter are to arrive tonight on German soil at Rosenbach to be greeted by diplomatic officials and Nazi formations.

Bulgarian Premier's Visit

Hitler's unexpected return from his Berchtesgaden chalet, where he went June 7, showed the importance attached to the Bulgarian Premier's visit, which one Nazi said was "an indication that more and more it is being recognized that political hopes—not to mention economic ones—can only be realized through collaboration with Germany."

Nazi leaders are expected to express themselves sympathetically over Bulgarian hopes for reviving the November, 1919, treaty of Neuilly, under which Bulgaria lost some of her western territory to Yugoslavia and larger sections to Greece and Rumania.

Nazi also were thought to be anxious to have nothing undone to draw Bulgaria more firmly into the Nazi orbit. Bulgaria already does most of her trading with Germany and is considered friendly to Germany although actions Hans believe she has too much French cultural influence.

Out of the funnies into your heart—the Bunstead Family in "Blondie Meets the Boss," now playing at the McCarthy Theatre.

SMOKE CLOUDS CAUSE ALARM

Clouds of smoke issuing from the rear of an upper Front Street bakery last evening after the proprietor had started fires in the bake oven prompted some brat-weary resident to turn in an alarm to the city fire department in the belief that a blaze had broken out in the shop. Trucks and firemen arrived on the scene to find their services not needed.

LOU GEHRIG DAY AT N. Y. STADIUM

Fans Will Honor "Old Iron Hoss" for His Long Term of Duty

New York, July 4 (AP)—A military band will play; they'll raise the 1937 championship pennant; some 60,000 fans may be on hand—and there probably won't be a dry eye in the house.

Because Lou Gehrig day at the Yankee stadium today and the world champions are going to pay tribute to their gyre first baseman during their doubleheader with Washington Senators.

There'll be gifts and speeches and a parade to the flagpole but there'll be an underlying note of abject sadness because everybody there will know that Gehrig, the fabulous iron horse, never will be able to play again.

Mayor Fiorella Lagurdia will pay the city's respects and Postmaster General James Farley will do honors for the United States government.

THINKS CAR A JINX

Miami, Fla., July 4 (AP)—Tired of jinxes, Lou Gehrig, to date after his automobile collided with a parked car, the defendant told Municipal Judge James A. Dunn:

"I didn't believe I had a jinx on a car—I thought it was a boat."

"What! You must have been drunk."

"I was, Your Honor."

WHITE BATHING SUITS

Arlington, Mass., July 4 (AP)—"Some girls" a shocked native spinsterette told the telephone, "are swimming in Spy Pond without any clothes on." Police rushed to the scene. They came back to the station to report the girls had on white bathing suits.

The Stars Say—

For Wednesday, July 5.
By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

ALTHOUGH there is an augury providing for a sudden upheaval or surprising change, a factor making for definite stability in the affairs is also found in the mutual planetary aspects. The devastating force may be in relation to an undercurrent socially domestic or sentimental which does not ultimately bound to bring much happiness and perhaps romantic adventure. Be alert to envy antagonize superiors or employers.

Those whose birthday it is may find themselves launched in a year of unforeseen trend or change of routine, environs and objectives. And while the vibration may seem portentious at the time, eventually the affairs and fortune will find firm foundation. Employers and superiors should be placated. Over all the social, romantic and domestic associations flourish and bring joy.

A child born on this day, although serious minded, industrious and at times erratic, should have a kindly, sympathetic and understanding heart, and much social and romantic yearning.

WOULD REGISTER TRANSIENTS

Sarnia, Ont., July 4 (CP)—City council last night approved a resolution to register transients. In Canada, by civic ordinance, it is illegal than military police. The resolution will be sent to the Dominion government. Some municipalities by-law to require the registration completed.

Aunt Sophronia Has A Birthday

By MARY HODGES

Miss Sophronia West, Aunt Phrone to everyone in her small world, sat up, shut off the alarm. It was five o'clock and cold. Shivering, she dressed. She was very small and thin, and she hated cold. Her one desire had always been to live in a country where there was good hot steam every day in the year.

And she still dreamed of rooms of her own instead of this tiny cubby-hole in her sister's house, with a little half window you couldn't see through.

"Nice way to start the day—grumbling. Sophronia West! Peggy's wedding day, too." Peggy was the eldest of her sister Alice's five daughters.

In her long-sleeved combination and flannel petticoat she scurried to the bathroom. At that moment it came to her that this day was her birthday: that she was—yes, she was fifty-five.

Well, nobody took any notice of it, hadn't for years. Must be twenty—twelve years ago that Ellen Bradford had sent her a card from Bombay. It said, "Many happy returns," and a day or so later came a big box of tea with a flower motif to it. She wished he'd given her an address; so she could thank him. He couldn't have loved her very much. Thirty-five years and he never came back. After the first year away he never wrote.

If only she could have gone! Gone to live in the house he was going to build for her in "hot sunshine, looking down on a blue sea." If only she could have gone—but then she would have had children of her own, and Alice's five babies, dead and buried, would then be worth. At thirty she was still cheerful, but her hair was quite gray. Only her lovely dark eyes were still young. She looked at her self in the glass. Little, mousy, old. But her eyes were not fifty-five.

"Phrone," her sister looked out from her room, "I'm getting one of my headaches. Maybe if I take aspirin, and keep quiet—but there are the cakes to ice—"

"I'll attend to it. Molly and Ruth can help me."

"They're dead, poor things! The dance last night—"

"Don't I always finish on time, Alice?"

Ooh—Aune Phrone!" That was from the children's room. Jane and Marge were thirteen and sixteen. "Put down our windows, Aunt Phrone, and give the furnace a poke. Like Greenland in here. Aunt Phrone, make pancakes for breakfast, please."

"Th-th-th-Phrone—" Alice again, "don't you want Peggy to get some sleep? If I had a cup of coffee, that, to three aspirins down. Shall I come down?"

"No, I'll bring it."

She put the kettle on, prepared the drip coffee-pot; flew down to the furnace, struggled with the heavy door; took Alice her coffee. Then she anxiously inspected the pan of dough she'd set for clover rolls. It was just light enough. She turned it out on the board. With the rolls in the pans, she considered how much icing she'd make for the six pound cakes she baked yesterday. Oh dear, the whole sink board taken up by dirty dishes! Molly and Ruth must have had a gang in Chocolate, and cake crumbs. Oh, they couldn't have—And believe me the first and foremost thing to go will be that gaudy green sweater of yours, she said.

Do you mean my good green home sweater for Pete sake? pop said, and ma said, I mean your worthless old green sweater with more holes than buttons, I'll be so glad to see the last of it I'll feel like celebrating. I can patch it up a little before I give it to the auxiliary, she said.

Well that's fine, you never offered to patch it up for me, pop said, and ma said, Now Willyum, that thing is a monstrosity and you know it.

It's a mighty useful garment and I may wish to wear it at any time, yes gods I wasn't alluding to my own clothes, I meant yours, pop said, and ma said, You know I don't hang on to rubbish the way you do, I haven't a thing and you have a perfect dead sea of useless clothes.

Well say, what's a use of being small and mean in a good cause, let's just shell out another ten spot and call it a day? pop said.

And he hurry up wrote her a check to settle the argument.

Quebec, July 3 —(CP)— Flood waters covered low-lying areas in Quebec and Portneuf Counties today after heavy rains which fell between Thursday and Saturday. The observatory here reported three inches of rain in that time—almost as much as during May.

Except for wrecking of a lumber-ary bridge, there was little property damage. Many Quebec residents, however, were prevented from reaching summer homes in the area because roads were washed out.

Two troops of Catholic girl guides were forced to break camp hurriedly early Saturday when a stream overflowed and raced over their camping grounds. Around by guards, the guides set to work during a squall, leveled their tents, and moved to higher levels.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was smoking in his private chair with a satisfied expression and ma said, The Relief Auxiliary is starting its annual drive, William.

They drove 10 dollars out of me last year, pop said. Not that I regret it, I just like to mention it, he said, and ma said, They have a splendid idea this year, they call it the Alternative Plan, they have they're giving everybody the alternative, of either donating money or old clothes for a big rummage sale.

Now that sounds sensible, there's almost a touch of genius in it, pop said. You must know where there's a lot of duds in old corners, he said, and ma said, I do indeed, in fact I'll be glad to get rid of some of them and kill 2 birds of a feather with one proverbial stone.

Soviets Seek New Guarantees

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, July 4—(CP Cable)—Great Britain and Russia have begun new stages in negotiating a military alliance with Britain, the countries with France in a European peace front, it was learned in official circles tonight.

It is understood Russia has demanded that Poland and Turkey give her territorial guarantees similar to those Britain has given France in return for pledges by Russia to Roumania and Poland and Belgium.

Britain and France after long hesitation have agreed to guarantee Latvia, Finland and Estonia, Russia's Baltic neighbors, and in return asked the Soviets to extend pledges of military support to Switzerland, Holland and Belgium.

It was understood Russia had agreed to these terms. But now apparently the Soviets seek additional guarantees for their country.

This will necessitate additional negotiations in Moscow between Foreign Commissar Vyacheslaff Molotoff and the British and French representatives.

NEARLY 400 DIE IN FOURTH CELEBRATION

New York, July 4 (AP)—With the homeward-bound traffic rush still ahead, the total of accidental deaths in the four-day celebration of the United States Independence Day holiday edged near the 400 mark today.

POLICE COURT

"I do not find this man is guilty of wilfully obstructing a police officer, but he is guilty of attempting to do so," stated Magistrate F. J. Butler, K.C., during today's city police court when John McMurter, of the city, appeared on a charge of wilfully obstructing Sergeant Arthur Harman in the pursuit of his duties. McMurter was remanded until Friday, at which time His Worship will pass judgment.

Recently when P.C. Arnott arrested Kathleen Thompson, 17-year-old Belleville girl, who was wanted for escaping from the Industrial School of Correction for girls, police allege, that McMurter was in company with the Thompson girl at the time and as the police station McMurter informed police the woman arrested was Jean Thompson, his wife and sister to Kathleen. The officers and Inspector H. D. Smith of the Children's Aid Society identified the girl in custody as Kathleen Thompson today, as did Grant Potter, of the Provincial Secretary's Department, who was also present.

Later Kathleen Thompson was assigned on a charge escaping from the Belmont School. She was remanded, when she demanded the services of a lawyer today. Mr. Murter on his charge failed to enter defence pleading "This man is only guilty of attempting to mislead or obstruct the police. Perhaps he tried very hard, but apparently he did not succeed," remarked His Worship.

"I'd like to see the court put some sting into a sentence in such a case as this," suggested Crown Attorney J. C. Donnan, K.C.

Four Belleville men, who had appeared previously on charges of stealing scrap iron and were remanded, were today again returned to the County Jail as sentence on the prosecution was not ready to proceed. Fifth youth named therein which to secure the services of a lawyer, but he was remanded in custody. Three inebriates enriched the city's coffers to the amount of $15.25, after pleading guilty to charges of violations of the L.C.A.

Harold Shoebridge Lands 31 Pounder At O'Brien's Bridge

Harold Shoebridge of this city landed a 31 pounder muskinonge near O'Brien's Bridge on the Tweed River, Monday afternoon but only after a battle which lasted nearly two hours. The fish measured exactly four feet and was a prime condition and today his friends are enjoying a real feast.

Mr. Shoebridge was trolling along at the time and the fish struck with terrific force. The equipment used was only a small spinning rod, reel and about fifty feet of line. Bringing the fish to the boat, Mr. Shoebridge realized he had a dandy and was not for losing him. Every time it came to the boat, the fish dragged the boat and angler a great distance up and down the river. "I had a dandy ride at his expense," said Mr. Shoebridge. "Finally he tired I manoeuvred towards the bank of Shown here just after his arrest is Joseph Shapiro, who was taken into custody in New York after an attempt to take his own life, and who is being questioned in the slaying of his wife and daughter, from whom he had been separated a year, in their apartment. According to his son, who was taken into another room, when his mother and sister were shot, Shapiro fired his alleged victims against one of the walls and shot them down.

PERSONAL REPORT GIVEN ON POLAND

British Committee Also Discusses Developments In Tientsin Concession

London, July 4—(CP)—The foreign affairs committee of the cabinet heard a personal report today from Sir Howard Kennard, Ambassador to Poland, on the present situation in a lengthy meeting which lasted from 10 a.m. until 1 p.m. with Prime Minister Chamberlain presiding.

The cabinet expects tomorrow to be a first-hand summary of German views from Sir Nevile Henderson, Ambassador in Berlin, who is to arrive tonight from the German capital.

Count Edward Raczynski, Polish Ambassador in London, had a long talk last night with Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax and left by airplane today for Warsaw, where he will report to his government on the situation. He expected to return here in two or three days.

Situation at Tientsin

The foreign affairs committee discussed developments in Tientsin, where Japanese imposed a blockade on the British and French concessions June 14, and considered a summary by Sir William Seeds, Ambassador in Moscow, of yesterday's conversation with Soviet Russian officials regarding the proposed British-French-Russian mutual assistance pact.

There has been speculation over whether Britain, France and Poland would complain to the League that Nazi activities in Danzig contravened the Free City's constitution, which prohibits militarization of the city without the consent of Nations' consent.

Prime Minister Chamberlain told the House of Commons yesterday that he had reliable reports that Germany "intensive" military activity in Danzig, which exists as a free city under the League's protection. If the League could establish that such activities menaced Poland, it could call on Poland alone or with other powers to protect Danzig against them.

Netherlands Abject

British official sources said the Netherlands had sent Great Britain a note expressing concern at being given specific guarantees in the projected pact.

The note was understood to have been the result of reports that Britain's latest proposals to Moscow provided for three-power guarantees to Switzerland, Belgium and The Netherlands if Russia insisted on demanding similar guarantees for the Baltic States.

The Netherlands' objection was said to be based on fear the inclusion of her name in the pact might jeopardize her traditional policy on neutrality.

Clarification Sought

Paris, July 4 — (CP-Havas) — Foreign Commissar Vyacheslaff Molotoff has asked the French and British government for clarification on several points before accepting the latest proposals for an Anglo-Franco-Soviet pact, it was reported here today.

St. Andrews, Scotland, July 4—(CP)—Favored Henry Cotton shot a masterful 68 over St. Andrews old course today to share with Lawson Little in the second qualifying round of the British open golf championship.

While handsome Henry was clipping four strokes off par, Little, the Canadian open king of 1936, went a bit off on his short game and needed a 69 to tie Mr. Cotton's new course.

The tied 36-hole totals of 142 gave them a two stroke lead over Reg Whitcombe of England, the defending champion, who fired his second straight 72. Scotland's leading pro, Jock McLean, was another stroke back after carding 73.

Long-hitting Wally Hutchison, former assistant pro in Canada at the Royal Ottawa Club, got back on his game for a 72, five better than his first-day effort, and his 149 clinched a qualifying berth.

News Of The Produce Market

Toronto, July 4. — Butter edged upward as cheese eased slightly during Monday's session of the Toronto open produce market, according to the Dominion Department of Agriculture. Prices held unchanged for eggs.

Fair demand met lighter offerings on the butter market, and prices stiffened. The market was not brisk as some sellers and buyers were inclined to wait for more definite news on local reports of a firmer English market. An upturn appeared in the Western market, with early sales recording at 22¾c and two cars later sold at 22¾c. Bids of 22¾c were still in near the close of the market, but these were refused. Ontario creamery solids traded at 23c for No. 1 grades and 21c for 36 score. Prints moved through retail channels at the former rates of 23c to 24¼c for top grades and 23¼c to 23½c for 36 score.

Fresh receipts were arriving in sufficient volume to satisfy demand on the egg market. Prices closed steady at previous levels in all sections. Graded shipments cleared at 24c for grade A large, 22c for A medium, 17c for B's and 15c for C grades.

Montreal, July 4.—Egg, butter and cheese offerings held mainly steady on open produce markets here yesterday but weakness developed in potato prices, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported.

Creamery butter prints to retailers sold for 23¼c-23½c a pound and solids for 21¼c-21½c. Western butter delivered in Montreal was also quoted. Quebec No. 1 pasteurized in wholesale jobbing lots made 23¼c. Receipts: Nil.

AT THE McCARTHY

"BLONDIE MEETS THE BOSS"

"Minute for minute and inch for inch this second film fashioned in the format of Chic Young's comic cartoon matches the family series on the market laugh for laugh," reports Motion Picture Herald of Columbia's "Blondie Meets the Boss," now playing at the McCarthy Theatre with Penny Singleton and Arthur Lake featured as Blondie and Dagwood Bumstead. The film, which was sneak-previewed in Hollywood has been hailed as a brilliant successor to last season's "Blondie", in which the same actors appeared.

Motion Picture Daily, another trade paper, reports: "ENTERTAINMENT, in capital letters, is the essence of 'Blondie Meets the Boss'....to say that a continual gale of laughter swept the theatre would be merely reporting a fact."

"It winds to a slap-bang finish," says Hollywood Reporter, third of the trade papers to catch the pre-release screening. That "slap-bang finish" is the literary sequence which pairs Arthur Lake with Dorothy Moore, another important member of the cast. Others in the film include Larry Simms, as Baby Dumpling, Daisy, the pooch; Linda Winters and Jonathan Hale.

Don't miss "Blondie Meets the Boss." As a co-feature on the program, Warren William, Ida Lupino, Rita Hayworth, Virginia Weidler and Frank Morgan pack plenty of thrills, romance and comedy in "The Lone Wolf Spy Hunt", one of the best detective feature attractions to come from Hollywood in many seasons, which is also presented at each performance with "Blondie Meets the Boss", and two excellent short subject attractions "Screen Snapshots" in which Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy, Dorothy Lamour, Don Ameche, Charlie Ruggles, Edward G. Robinson and many more screen celebrities are appearing and "More Power To You" an educational subject which explains in fun detail the refining of gasoline and oil.

AT THE BELLE

"GOING PLACES"

"Going, Places," the Warner Bros. picture now playing at the Belle Theatre with Dick Powell and Anita Louise heading the cast, is a hilarious farce whose action is interspersed with some highly original and tuneful song numbers. In this production, Powell is given another fine chance to demonstrate the talents as a comedian which he revealed to such good effect in "Cowboy From Brooklyn", and the supporting cast is largely made up of actors whose fame as funny-men has long been well established, notably Allen Jenkins, Walter Catlett, Harold Huber and Thurston Hall.

Playing slightly more sedate roles are Ronald Reagan, Minna Gombell and Larry Williams, while the musical burden is shared with Powell by those two great colored stars, Louis Armstrong, the world's premier hot trumpeter, and Maxine Sullivan—making her debut in motion pictures—who is the reigning sensation among swing singers.

Among the four new songs written for the production by Harry Warren and Johnny Mercer, one is a romantic ballad, while the other three are all highly diverting novelty numbers. In the presentation of one of these numbers, "Mutiny in the Nursery," Powell, Armstrong and Miss Sullivan all collaborate and are backed up by a colored swing band and chorus.

The humor of the piece revolves about the masquerade by Powell, really a timid sporting goods salesman, as a famous steeplechase rider. He is forced to make good on his boasts by riding one of the meanest and wildest horses ever foaled in the Maryland Steeplechase. Naturally—for this is a farce—things get very complicated, but he does make good by calling sweet music to his aid. How this is done constitutes one of the funniest episodes ever filmed.

"Nancy Drew Trouble Shooter" Ronita Granville gets her man again—two men in fact—and they are appropriately punished for their misdeeds in the latest episode of the adventures of the shrewd and intrepid Nancy Drew, entitled "Nancy Drew —Trouble Shooter," which is announced as the companion feature attraction.

The new Nancy Drew picture is the third of the series starring little Miss Granville which is being made by Warner Bros. from the popular stories by Carolyn Keene.

As in the first two pictures of the series, Frankie Thomas is again Nancy's boy friend, and her father is again played by John Litel.

Among the newcomers to the series cast are Aldrich Bowker, Edgar Edwards, Renie Riano and Charlotte Wynters, and the last-mentioned introduces an entirely new factor to the background of Nancy's life, for she represents the coming of romance to Nancy's father, who is, as series fans will remember, a widower. At the end of the latest film, Nancy has not yet acquired a stepmother, but it looks very much as if that will happen soon.

In the new picture, Nancy and her boy friend succeed not only in exonerating a close friend of Nancy's father from suspicion of having committed a murder, for which he has been arrested, but they pin the guilt on a pair of men who are the real culprits.

The popular Belle News of the Day will be exhibited on the same program.

Three Are Rescued and One Swims Ashore at Joliette, Quebec

Joliette, Que., July. 4—(CP) — Search was continued today for the bodies of Charles Auguste Desromeaux, 23, and Gerald Charbonneau, 14, both of Mascipeal, drowned last night when a boat containing six persons overturned in the Assomption River five miles north of here.

The boat upset when all six leaned to one side to avoid being splashed. Charbonneau, thrown out of reach of the boat, went down immediately as Desromeaux tried to reach shore but was unable to make it.

Three others in the party, sister and father of Carbonneau and Desromeaux's father, were rescued clinging to the boat. Another sister of Charbonneau, swam to a log near shore and walled for help.

Accidental Death

A verdict of "accidental death" was returned later at a private inquest presided over by Dr. P. V. Marceau, district coroner. Announcing the verdict to newspapermen afterwards, Dr. Marceau said: "The victim died from traumatic shock, due to multiple wounds caused accidentally by bears at the zoo at a moment when he was feeding the animals, contrary to zoological Garden regulations."

Usual precautions are observed at The party was rowing across the river to visit a neighbor when the accident occurred.

The coroner's jury has submitted certain recommendations and everything will be done to supplement the precautions."

Zoo attendants said visitors rarely ventured beyond the guard rail. Recently, however, a small boy had his clothing torn by the animals when he climbed under the rail but he was not injured.

Dr. Germain graduated from Quebec Seminary and Laval University. His widow, three daughters and two sons survive.

The famous Sweet Caporal Girl

● Her charming face and figure have long been symbolic of the largest selling brand of cigarettes in Canada. The spectacular popularity of Sweet Caporals is due both to their quality and to the consistent newspaper advertising done for them over a period of 25 years — the early advertising is still remembered by many smokers.

Mr. Picobac

● Picobac Tobacco was introduced through the genial "Mr. Picobac", to sell high quality Canadian Burley tobacco to Canadian pipe smokers. This was accomplished almost entirely through newspaper advertising, and today Picobac is Canada's largest selling pipe tobacco.

The Two Old Chums

● Old Chum smoking tobacco, popularized by the famous "Old Chums", has for half a century held a steady place in the affections of Canadian pipe smokers, and this position has been consistently fortified by newspaper advertising.

Faces made Famous by

NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING

● One of Canada's oldest and largest users of newspaper advertising, Imperial Tobacco Company has found the employment of "trade characters" a very great aid in promoting the sale of these leading brands. This success also affords ample testimony to the effectiveness of Canada's daily newspapers as a medium for productive advertising.

Imperial Tobacco Company of Canada, Limited

The growth of Imperial Tobacco Company is the result of the adoption of progressive policies which are fundamental to success. These include (1) the making of high quality products, (2) pursuing broad-visioned and enlightened sales policies, (3) doing sincere and constructive advertising. Waukegan, Ill., July 5—(AP)— More than 50 persons suffered bruises or other injuries when wooden bleachers collapsed at the climax of a pageant and fireworks show.

Approximately a thousand spectators fell to the ground in a tangled mass when the structure gave way last night.

The bleachers collapsed without warning when spectators rose to sing the National Anthem during a pyrotechnic display of the American flag.

Groaning and shouting in the darkness the crowd fought to extricate itself. Many were trampled in the rush for the open field. Quick action by police, firemen and national guardsmen was credited with averting a panic among the 20,000 spectators at the scene.

INCREASE SEEN IN POWER COSTS IF HYDRO TAXED

Commission Chairman Hogg Refers to Agitation to Tax Hydro-Electric Profits

POWER LOAD UP

Ottawa, July 5—(CP)— Delegates to the Ontario Municipal Electrical Association and the Association of Municipal Electrical Utilities Conventions continued deliberations today after listening yesterday from Dr. Thomas H. Hogg, Chairman of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission, that taxation of Hydro-Electric properties as proposed in some quarters is certain to increase the cost of power to consumers.

The cost of electrical energy paid the cost of their service, he told a joint session of the two organizations last night.

"Neglecting that rental bonds there is nobody else to pay it or pay any part of it," he said, "and if added local municipal taxes are levied on Hydro properties, over and above the $400,000 now paid by the provincial commission alone, therefore increasing the wholesale cost of power as well as the cost of municipal operations the consumer will ultimately pay the increase."

No Comment on Right of Taxation

Dr. Hogg carefully refrained from comment on Right of Taxation or, to whether taxation was right or wrong, should be imposed or should not be. He said, however, he was certain to increase hydro costs.

The commission's efforts to hold the delegates results of a campaign for the sale of electrical energy were satisfactory. He urged municipal utilities to co-operate with the commission's efforts in that direction. The purpose was to increase the use of power and so bring in more revenue and reduce power costs.

Dr. Hogg reported all systems were showing a satisfactory increase in power load. The primary load of the combined systems in May was 7.3 per cent greater than in the same month last year.

The commission paid $700,000 year in water rentals and in all about five per cent of its revenue went in taxation, he said.

Storm Troopers on the March in Tense Danzig

This photograph, telephoned to London, cabled to New York and telephoned again to Toronto, gives proof of the tenseness of the situation in the Free City of Dantzig, and also proves the statement of Prime Minister Chamberlain, who told the House of Commons that German storm troopers are moving into what is presumed to be a demilitarized area. Nazi troopers are shown marching through Tregenhof, a town in the Danzig territory, on route from East Prussia. They are moving into the fortifications which line the boundary—again in defiance of Dantzig's status—facing the Polish Corridor.

DR. J. M. SMITH MAY SOON END HIS RETICENCE

Resigned President of University Arrives in Baton Rouge by Plane

$50,000 BAIL ASKED

Baton Rouge, La., July 5—(AP) —An assertion by Dr. James Monroe Smith that he was "not going to be the goat" indicated today the resigned President of Louisiana State University soon would end his reticence concerning charges he embezzled $100,000 from the institution he headed for nine years.

Unable immediately to raise $50,000, Dr. Smith spent the night in the Parish jail. With his wife, who was indicted as an accomplice, he was returned yesterday after a trip under guard from Brockville, Ont. Mrs. Smith was released last night under $7,500 bond.

After refusing to talk with federal agents or District Attorney Dewey Sanches, Dr. Smith suddenly asked near midnight to . speak with Sanches. Jail officials said he then said: "I am not going to be made the goat in this thing."

Sanches had, by that time, retired and Sheriff Newman H. De Bretton did not call him.

An automobile journey from Brockville, where he surrendered early to authorities, Smith was brought by plane from New York to New Orleans. Thence by police car to the jail here.

Glad to be Back

As he was being led to a police car he said into a microphone thrust at his face:

"I'm glad to be back. I'm sorry I went away. I was ill advised to leave. I will have something to say later."

As Smith and his wife were escorted through the dense crowd

The Japanese asserted this encounter involved 150 airplanes and lasted for 1 1-2 hours late Tuesday. The Japanese indicated they suffered no losses. There was no report of such a clash in Moscow.

Earlier the Japanese Army spokesman reported that their airmen staged a dozen raids on Soviet positions south of Lake Bor, shooting down nine Soviet airplanes.

The Kwantung Army, Japan's Manchoukuo garrison, asserted that 365 enemy planes had been shot down since May 20 in addition to 26 planes destroyed on the ground in a raid June 27 on the Mongol air base at Tamsak (Tumaskumu). A communique at the time said 96 Soviet or Mongol planes were destroyed at Tamsak.

ANGLO-JAPANESE TALKS LIMITED TO SINGLE ISSUE

Sir Robert Craigie States Talks Will be Confined to Tientsin Controversy

MUST CHANGE POLICY

Tokyo, July 5—(AP)—The British Ambassador, Sir Robert Craigie, indicated today that forthcoming Anglo-Japanese talks would be limited to the Tientsin controversy, Japanese wishes notwithstanding.

At a press conference the Envoy said "it is definitely understood that the conferences will be confined to local issues connected with present conditions in Tientsin" where the Japanese imposed a blockade June 14 of British and French concessions.

Japanese sentiment, apparent everywhere, demands some guarantee of "British cooperation," not only in the North China port but with Japanese "aims" throughout China.

Autos Kill 70 Times as Many As Fireworks in U. S. Celebration

New York, July 5—(AP)— The motor car killed 70 times as many persons as did fireworks as the United States observed its independence anniversary with a fourday celebration marred by more than 600 violent deaths.

The survey today listed only four lives lost by exploding fireworks to 271 sudden deaths in automobile accidents throughout the 48 states. The toll was at least 612 compared with 317 reported for the three-day celebration last year.

Thronging at beaches by merry-making millions accounted for the second highest number of fatalities—123 drownings. Trains killed 29 persons. There were 36 fatal shootings, eight plane deaths and 79 dead in miscellaneous accidents.

Two fireworks deaths were caused by the premature explosion of home-made bombs or firecrackers. Hildred Bowders, 14, of Marlin, Tex. died after a piece of tin, blown from a can placed over a firecracker, severed his jugular vein.

Ironically, Forrest Father, 21, of Chicago, who was studying to be a safety engineer, was killed when his auto skidded off a road in Michigan, his father, Dr. R. E. Fisher, is Secretary of the National Safety Council.

In the largest group tragedy six West Virginians, including three children were killed when their light sedan and a bus collided near Washington, Pa.

At Quinton, Okla., a 28-year-old pilot and two high school students were killed when their plane crashed.

Lightning took several lives. It killed two bathers—man and wife—at Bay City, Mich., but spared their baby, who was in the father's arms.

Returning to their automobile after bathing in Bay City state park, Bernard C. Mayville, 36, Flint, Mich., and his wife, Alice, 36, were struck by the bolt. Their 18-month-old son, Bernard, Jr., was not believed seriously hurt.

Two Canadian National Railway employees were hurled from the gasoline jigger they were riding on near Glen Ross and sustained severe injuries when the jigger was struck by a motorcar driven, it is said, by George G. Montgomery, Frankford, shortly before noon today. Montgomery was proceeding northerly down a steep hill one mile south of Glen Ross and approaching the crossing. The two men on the jigger were James W. Risk, 24, of Trenton, roadmaster of the C.N.R. Trenton-Maynooth division and Mr. Todd, Toronto, railway accountant, who was accompanying Risk on his weekly inspection of the tracks between Trenton and Maynooth. The two injured men were attended to on the scene by Dr. McMullin of Frankford, and later rushed to the Belleville General Hospital where it was stated that Mr. Risk had sustained a fractured leg and severe facial lacerations as the result of being thrown from the jigger. BURK DEFEATS NORMAN MOFFATT IN HEAT OF SCULLS

HAD BRIEF LEAD

By JACK BRAYLEY

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Henley-on-Thames, England, July 5—(CP Cable)—Norman Moffatt, former Toronto Argonaut, was defeated by Burk of Philadelphia in the opening heat of the Diamond Sculls at the Henley Regatta today.

Moffatt bowed courageously before Burk's expert blade work but the American, who finished in slow time, did not use the much predicted rings around his inexperienced adversary.

Bucking a sharp wind all the way down the historic course, Burk had a lifty 20-foot lead over Burk at the front of the hard-rowing Canadian for the first half of the tough 1 1-2-mile course.

Had Brief Lead

Moffatt's long sweep at the start gave him a brief lead over the short stroking of Philadelphia Burk. The record holder nosed slowly up to within the early progress from Moffatt, could only return the time of 9 minutes 20 seconds compared with the record of eight minutes, two seconds he established here a year ago.

Why the Weather!

By Major A. H. Tobcsen

Science Service Meteorologist

Heights of mountains! To measure the heights of mountains there is a regular scientific pastime soon after the invention of the barometer. It was then deduced that the air would get thinner and thinner with increasing height; and as the air pressure at the foot of and at the top of a mountain should be a measure of its elevation. But the law of decreasing pressure with altitude is not a simple arithmetic one, and the true (but approximate) law was not proposed until late in the 19th century.

Now the law is quite complete and with observations of pressure, temperature and humidity, elevations may be very closely determined.

'Something About Canadians Makes Us Want to Come Back'

Dr. and Mrs. W. J. Lieberman of St. Louis, Mo., Have Been Returning Every Year for 20 Years

For over twenty years Dr. and Mrs. W. J. Lieberman of St. Louis, Missouri, have been making a regular summer pilgrimage to Canada and this part of Ontario, spending the summer months in leisurely trip by motor through the more scenic sections of the province.

This morning the welcome visitors called at the local office of the Chamber of Commerce to renew friendships gained during their recent years of regular visiting.

Belleville district and Hastings County compare favourably with the best we have seen in other parts of Canada and the United States during our trips, said the visitors, glad to get back here where it seems just like home," commented Dr. Lieberman as he signed the visitor's register in the office.

"There is something about Canadians which makes us want to come back year after year," echoed Mrs. Lieberman. "We don't find that something in our own country, nor do we find the warmth of greeting and the hospitality so evident in Hastings and Belleville in the other places we visit."

The visitors this year will travel north to Algonquin Provincial Park and will continue on to Ottawa where they expect to view the famed quintuplets.

"In all the many years we have been coming through this section we never did get to call on the record of that is about the first question that is asked us when we get home. 'Did you see the quints'. This year we are going to be able to say 'yes', they stated.

Industrially speaking, conditions in United States have shown considerable improvement, said the visitors in the south particularly appear a little better. And from the looks of Canada, I would say that this country is not suffering from the doldrums, either, remarked the visitors.

DELEGATES GIVE REPORT OF TRIP

Kiwanians Hear of Fine Trip to Boston for Convention

President Dr. R. A. "Dick" Flynn and Bill Anderson, delegates to the Kiwanis International Convention at Boston, Mass., gave to the club at their weekly luncheon on record of day at the Queens Hotel a report of their trip and the highlights of the convention. Both agreed very much appreciated the two fine excursions solos given by Bobby Young. This youngster, the son of "Scotty" Young, a former Montreal and the Nationals of baseball fame, is following in the footsteps of his father and is a clever little entertainer. A ship circle, the youth winning a gold medal at the Waterloo festival in late June. Bobby is another sport showing boy, who some day will carry the name of his native city to distant corners in a musical way.

Despite the extreme heat number of the attendance was fair and nearly all clubs in this district have a long way to go to equal the record of a club spoken of by Bill Anderson, which had one hundred percent attendance at the convention meetings. Both members enjoyed the fine motor trip over the Adirondacks from Albany and also the district drives as far south as the World's Fair. There were 6,000 delegates in attendance, said Mr. Anderson, and good fellowship was the keynote. The Belleville party was well represented as well as the whole Canadian division and ladies were royally entertained with sight seeing trips around Boston. Both delegates stated the trip was worthwhile and work of Kiwanis would be "first to them in the future. "It is a great incentive to go to one of these conventions," said the President.

Jack McIntosh led the community singing, while Leo B. Riggs accompanied on the piano and also assisted while Bobby Young gave his solos.

AMERICANS HERE CELEBRATE '4TH'

Visiting American Boating Parties and Tourists Heartily Mark Day

The Fourth of July, the anniversary of the signing of the American Declaration of Independence 163 years ago, was celebrated in Belleville very much as ever, evening by the voluntary exiles of the United States in mildly explosive and hilarious fashion.

Two small cruisers which churned up and down the waters of the bay, direction of the Murray Canal emlivened the quiet scene on the waterfront with the display of Roman candles and sundry other fireworks flared and shone briefly in the darkness. From the deck of the boats came the sounds of firecrackers and torpedoes. Happy shouts and merry laughter also floated across the water to mingle with the staccato beat of outboard motors made by the power craft.

On the grounds of the city tourist camp other fire crackers popped and flailed and flags waved briskly from cars and trailers as owners entered into the spirit of the observance.

United States visitors to the district did not let the fact that they were away from home dim the heartiness of the observance.

In the meantime, storekeepers of the city reported the first steady business of the season with the visitors. Over the week end the numerical strength of the tourists and they in the Belleville district week according to the local Chamber of Commerce the summer peak of the visitors will be about reached.

Little Miss Audrey Smith, of the Quinte Playhouse, in her rendition of "Bob-o-link," quite captured the hearts of all.

Mr. Jack Wright, of Belleville, added to the evening's enjoyment with solos in fine baritone voice. Mrs. Lee Grills was the piano accompanist and Rev. Scott, the chairman of the evening's program.

This social was held under the supplies of the Women's Missionary Society and the president, Mrs. Thos. Irwin, on behalf of the society, expressed appreciation to the visiting artists in presenting the program.

DECLARATION OF WAR

"Mr. Prober!" Catherine was on her feet in an instant; she stood suddenly, calamitously still, the newspaper crumpled in her hand.

"What does he want with me? What does he know about me?"

The hope came that he already knew how she hated him, but it was impossible that he should know.

"Yes, I'll see them," she said in a low and steady voice, and went slowly from the room.

Nothing stirred in her mind now; she walked across the hall without so much as a tremor of her heart, her mind an ominous blank. It was like the moments of prayer before a battle. She entered the sitting-room, and instantly saw him; he leaped from that old and gentle back-ground of blonde woodwork in the Council office, as something superbly alive and powerful. He could not be ignored. For several minutes she scarcely noticed Mickey Dennis in her preoccupation with Adam Prober.

He turned from the window as she came in, and took one step towards her, and met her eyes again with the same intimate shock of dislike, as if each were trying to annihilate the other. She did not sit down, nor invite them to do so, but stood facing him, with her body braced against the polished edge of the table, which was oak blackened like ebony, and older than the house and almost as inhabitants. She said, spreading her slim hands upon the dark glistening surface.

"You wished to see me, I am Catherine Court."

"You don't know us, Mrs. Court" said Adam Prober, in the same quiet, illusionless tone which so much irritated Councillor Washburn, "and probably don't feel the slightest desire to know us. But of course you'll have heard my name, I suppose?"

"Of course!" said Catherine, an acid sweetness making her voice bite like a knife. She smiled, for a moment only, and no less utterly. He was right to value himself high; Court Brandon was putting a high rate upon him, too.

This is Michael Dennis, my agent in Glandchester."

Mickey received the coldest and most impersonal nod of his life, and felt like a quenched candle. He came to Adam's chosen and his partisan face already scented the battle which would ignite out of her calm; he watched her in purpled but admiring awe, for she was singularly handsome now that he saw her closely, and pathetic in her way, now that the illusion of height was gone in near measurement against his own bulk. Catherine's eyes swept over him like glittering glance, saw only a muscular young man, and returned steadily to Adam Prober, who was much more than that.

"You'll be wondering, of course, what our intrusion means. Wouldn't you rather sit down?"

"Thank you, no; but sit if you like. I suppose there is a reason for your visit? Business men like yourself are not in the habit of calling on me, Mr. Prober. I've nothing to offer them. You'll find cigarettes in the cabinet on your left, if your care to smoke, and the match-stand is on the table.

"Thank you," said Adam, and lit a cigarette before he spoke again. He was completely at his ease, the hand which tore off the match as firm and hard as a rock, and the deep-set eyes which peered here through the curling smoke as unperturbed as if she had been the visitor, and he the antagonistic host; almost as if, indeed, he had expected just such a reception as this. But there had been something too elusive and distant in his grin down to earth, something in the voice and eyes, which had given his coolness the lie. She had the ability to discount him, then, if only within his citadel; he was not invulnerable, if he could not be forced to confess his wounds.

"You've got something to offer me, Mrs. Court", he said. "They tell me you're the owner of that natural glen in the valley opposite my new house."

"Yes. It's mine. What of it?"

"Is it for sale?"

Catherine took her hands from the table very slowly, and stood looking at him silently for a long moment. Then she said, quite gently:

"It's a nice piece of ground, isn't it?"

"Very. The most beautiful in the valley, as a matter of fact."

"The slope not too great, and the soil particularly good, if the pool were drained, and the stream prevented. It would be a splendid building site, wouldn't it? A pity about the trees, though! They're rather massive, and very old, so they'll take some blasting out, and that will make the scheme rather expensive, won't it? Still, the timber must be worth quite a bit—between you and me, Mr. Prober."

"No," she said, simply and deliberately.

"Thank you; that is all I wanted to know," said Adam easily, and rose to his feet briskly, as if the interview had reached a natural and satisfactory conclusion.

"Wait one moment, more. I have something to tell you." She stood between them and the door, facing him squarely as he crossed the room. "I don't know exactly what your intentions are with regard to Court Brandon, Mr. Prober. I suppose there must be something like a hundred houses planned out already, and only you know how many more to follow if those come up to expectations. But make no mistake, none of them will ever be built in my glen. They tell me you're still buying ground as fast as money can pass; but believe me, that is one piece of ground all your money cannot buy."

She was striking blindly, and knew it, and felt helpless already against his mask of calm; even the eyes, narrowed against the smoke of his cigarette, betrayed nothing. But he inclined his head with the most composed submission, and answered quietly:

"You have a right to your viewpoint, Mrs. Court."

"Perhaps, but that is not altogether what I meant. Let me make it plain: It will not be. . . to either of us to be closer for years to come, if then. Mickey Dennis touched his chief's arm, and was shaken off as impatiently as a bowling fly. He shrugged his large shoulders, and turned his eyes to heaven, it was not his funeral.

"I loved Court Brandon," said Catherine, clearly and painfully. "All my life, Mr. Prober! It seems a long time. And if you understood what it was to love a place in that way, I think even now you would get out and leave it and mine alone. But I know that you don't understand. You can't expect you to. I'm simply warning you that I'll move heaven and earth to stop this program of yours. I've plenty to lose now. You want this cheap red-brick vulgarity, this miserable mock-Eden of yours; everything in it will be obvious and out of place. I want this country and the streams to which this valley was born. Well, go on with your progress; but you had better leave the kopjebie uncovered. I shall fight you to the last ditch. That's all I have to say."

She stood silent again for a long while, the ash piling unheeded on his cigarette, as he said:

"I see. I'm sorry. If I had known—if I had even suspected how deeply you hated land and my pursuits—at least all my public works—believe me, I should never have come here to distress you."

"I'm glad you came. I'm glad that we understand each other at the outset. Now we know where we stand. Either you will succeed in driving me out of Court Brandon, or I shall succeed in doing as much to you. Good day, and say nothing for both of us."

"I see. You prefer that it shall be war openly declared, between us—"

"Between your money and my love, if you like to have a formula for your warfare."

"It may be useful," he agreed; and bowed gravely, and left her standing there. She heard him cross the hall, the bold, unhurried steps like the close of his voice; she heard the door, and he was gone. Mickey Dennis distantly audible at his heels. She put up her hand, and touching her forehead, was startled to find the fingers shaking.

CHAPTER V

PROBERT IS PUZZLED

"Why did you let her get away with that?" demanded the angry Mickey as they went down the slope of the tree-haunted road. What right had she to jump to the conclusion that you wanted her mouldy land for building? And, for heaven's sake, why didn't you tell her the truth? Don't you care what people say about you? Hang it all, I wouldn't go running round courting people's good opinion myself, but I think I should protest like that going about. Why didn't you tell her what you wanted with Wray John's pet meadow?"

Adam Probert walked with Catherine's cigarette between his fingers, under Catherine's beloved trees, and with Catherine in his mind. She had somehow, confound her, infected his sight so that wherever he turned his head he seemed to see her fronting him squarely, the large and very aloof eyes fixed on him with that expression of cool hate which was becoming almost familiar now, the straight lips uttering simple antagonism more potent than any scorn.

He had no misapprehension of her importance; she was not a woman with whom to trifle; even now, in this impossible position, with apparently no weapons and no power, she had the gift of appearing formidable. Perhaps it was her awful singleness of mind which gave her that quality; there was something hypnotic about a mind which concentrated upon so much intensely upon the desire of one thing. He pictured with surprising pleasure upon the origins of her face; an odd study for one who had so recently been discomfited in her. There was in Catherine something more than something as elemental as the waters of the river, and as ancient as the city of the hills. That was, he supposed, the secret of it; she was temperamentally nothing but a distillation of this valley, her blood drawn out of its soil, her soul—hooded at the portholes there his imagination fainted — compounded of its air, steeped in the paganism of its forests. And yet, whether it was the dress—she had changed her dress since the morning, for a black embroidered house tunic, fastening at the neck like a Cossack coat—or her own person, she called up to him other things as well.

In fact, Adam Probert was puzzled, and where there was material to puzzle him, there was fascination also.

"Why," persisted the importunate Mickey frantically, "didn't you explain yourself?"

"Because," said Adam equably, "I am not in the habit of explaining myself to anyone, much less to my opponents."

"You can't seriously take that line?" Mickey laughed; his contempt for her resource matched his admiration for her courage. "Why, what can she do? She hasn't a leg to stand on, there, but what could she do if she had? And you don't suppose she's really meaning what she says? I can't see much hope for her, short of that Act of God you're so fond of, but in a temper, that's all—"

"Magnificent so long as a temper controlled to the nth degree, as even you may have noticed. I don't know what she can do; all I know is that if there's half a chance left for it, I have a superstitious feeling about our Mrs. Court, Mickey. She's the first person we've encountered in Glandchester who's been in the opposite camp; she's honest, and if ever a face told the truth, she's clever, too."

"All the more reason," said Mickey Dennis, sensibly enough, "why you should have put yourself at ease with her as you could. And instead of that, you've been as theatrical as she, and taken up this stupid challenge of hers. I can't understand you."

"No," admitted Adam, smiling to himself, "I don't suppose you can."

"Mind you, that's all eyewash. She knows she can't stop you; except, of course, from touching her own property. But after all, she's a Court; the name still goes for something round here; and if by any awkward chance Dan should be say hitch, she'll be able to make the very most out of it."

"I wish her luck," said Adam, as they passed her gate. The red rawness below soared boldly out of the nest of green; his eyes lingered pleasantly with a rarer kind of critical interest, as if he was trying to see it from her viewpoint, and failed. Little Benny's Note Book

I was suppose to go down to pop's office this afternoon and then we were both suppose to meet me, and this morning at breakfast ma said, Now for goodness sake Benny try to be promply on time at half passed 4 because your father will be waiting for you, so if you expect to come home with a new pair of shoes just keep reminding yourself that the early bird catches the worm, or the shoe in your case. It's a very useful proverb to always bare in mind, she said.

Yes mam, I said, and pop said, All the proverbs was made up. For instants if a bird just manages to miss the worm, he can tell himself, Better late than never, and then look around and perhaps at most catch a little bug or 2, he said.

Now Willyum what kind of advice is that when I'm trying to get him down to your office on time? ma said, and pop said he was trying to show him that a proverb can be wrong, like a chap who started out to do great things and then failed for success, and his motto was Nothing ventured nothing lost, but every time he was offered his first million dollars he'd never would say, Look before you leap, and the result was the firm never even got far enough to go bankrupt, and another chap I knew was a great believer in foresight, and he was always saying to himself, A stitch in time saves 9, but then in the next breath he was always saying, But why should I worry, never cross your bridges before you come to them, and do you know what became of that fellow? He of course not, and neither do we, he's clean disappeared so remember, young fellow, procrasts or no procrasts you better be on time this afternoon for the good of your own health.

Wich I pritty near was but not quite.

MILLIONS SAW THE KING AND QUEEN

Eight and a half millions of Canadians saw Their Majesties when they were in Canada. That is the estimate made by Hon. Vincent Massey, Dominion High Commissioner. That means that three persons in every four saw the King and Queen.

Such a stupendous fact shows the world what the royal democracy means, and what the kingship means to the Empire. In the King and Queen it was pointed out by the Marquess of Lothian at the Dominion Day dinner in London, the monarchy stood for unity, independence in the individual and national friendship and responsibility at home and abroad.

The monarchy stands above racialism and therefore is a practical lesson in human brotherhood. The kingship as it has developed in Britain is a most wholesome force in the world today, while nationalism is the foe of every good principle.

Canadians will agree with the Marquess who is the ambassador-designate to the United States, that it was a fine act of courage of Their Majesties to come out to Canada, after having just mounted the throne, to go to quite unfamiliar conditions and face quite unknown difficulties and never escape the most pitiless spotlight the world knows—the western spotlight. Yet they never put a foot wrong, never faltered in their courage and friendliness and they stood the test and home a triumphant success." Lord Lothian pointed out the fact that the kingship today is not a military despotism, trampling its way to domination over the rights of people, but a symbol of the friendship which is offered all nations and the liberty which we claim for ourselves.

Canadians did appreciate the kindliness and grace of Their Majesties who honored Canada by their presence. They can never forget the royal couple, to entertain whom made the Canadians supremely happy.

It was no wonder that seventy-five per cent of the Canadian people did see Their King and Queen, even if they had to cross mountains or paddle down rivers, travel from the hinterlands or the nearby agricultural areas to the cities where royal stops were made.

RELATIVITY

A man living normally 60 years would have a life span of 2,000 years if he could fly as fast as a particle in the air, one of the constituents.

But if a man did live thirty-three and a third times as long, probably according to relativity he would not seem to live any longer.

The article in the air is a mesotron, which lives thirty-three and a third times as long in flight as at rest.

Man, of course, has other means of measuring life and time, by success in the family life, by success in the world of commerce, by advance in science and engineering, by the expansiveness of the spiritual life and in many other ways. Everyone says a child's year seems long, a man's day short and his life "like a dream that is told."

WAR NOT EVITABLE

The average Canadian citizen would be well advised to go about his business and not take WAR as INEVITABLE until the armies are actually on the march!

This is not mean to the smallest extent that the Canadian nation should not prepare as rapidly and effectively as possible to play its part in any mighty conflict of the world forces in which not only the continued existence of the British Empire would be at stake but as well the survival of our whole modern civilization, the perpetuation of our free institutions dearly bought by our fathers and handed on to us as a sacred heritage, and the rescue of the human race from a resurgence of barbarism that would thrust Europe back to the black days when rival tyrant kings fought for the right to exploit a hopeless population of serfs.—Montreal Star.

RISING BIRTH RATE IN U.S.

Persons inclined to become gloomy over the declining curve in the American birth rate will find comfort in figures just compiled by th United States Census Bureau. These show that the birth rate has risen for the second consecutive year and has now reached 17.6 per 1,000 of population, as against a low point of 16.5 registered in 1933. Since 1933 the census birth chart shows 17.1 per 1,000 in 1934, 16.9 in 1935, 16.7 in 1936, 17.0 in 1937 and 17.6 last year, for a six-year gain of slightly more than a full point.—New York Times.

Had known but alley ways;
Came to a field where buttercups
Bloomed in a golden maze.

"GHOST WRITERS" ARE HAVING THEIR DAY IN THE SUN, or the Spotlight of Publicity rather. "Ghost Writers" are those clever but inobtrusive lads who write articles and speeches for others to author and voice. Recent revelations show that important political speeches, at least in the United States, are not the work of one man, but several men, and are subject to the closest scrutiny and revision, so that the man who finally makes the speech, particularly if it be a "key" speech, is protected against blunders which would provide election ammunition for the enemy. Time magazine relates what it calls "One of the most tragic episodes of ghost writing" which occured when a ghost writer, who was employed to write a farewell address for Hon. John White, Speaker of the House of Representatives in the 27th United States Congress, . . . copied copiously from the farewell address delivered by Vice President Aaron Burr . . . Mr. White being unable to laugh at the comic position into which the ghost writer had placed him, was, on the contrary so overcome with mortification and disgust that he committed suicide."

"GOD MUST HAVE LOVED THE COMMON PEOPLE because He made so many of them," a saying of Abraham Lincoln's, is the slogan chiseled across the front of the $10,700,000 building which houses the New York Daily News, which has a daily circulation of 1,848,320, employs 3,500 people with a payroll of $8,000,000 a year. The News appeals to that great mass of the public called "common people," who like their news served up several times a day highly spiced with human interest and pictures, and is a decided community builder anywhere.

"WE DIG OUR GRAVES WITH OUR TEETH," remarked someone who certainly was not a gourmet, or an epicure, or a Diamond Jim Brady, or other celebrated or obscure lover of fine food and plenty of of it. However, experts are paying more and more attention to diet these days and counting calories and vitamins and what have you to the mystification of the layman who just wants his meals on time, well cooked, and plenty of what he likes.

Recently the American Association for the Advancement of Science met in Milwaukee, and here again diet was the chief topic of discussion, featured by the participation of Dr. Victor Heiser, author of "An American Doctor's Odyssey," a "Best Seller" and very interesting to all classes of readers.

Dr. Heiser told the delegates "A well balanced diet fortifies man against most of the common diseases. If a diet is correctly balanced a small quantity of food will suffice." Continuing Dr. Heiser said there is no standard diet to fit all ages and classes. A hardworking farmer or laborer needs an abundance of fuel foods such as bread, potatoes and meat. A growing child needs almost twice as much as his sedentary father. A deskbound business man needs practically no white bread, potatoes, cakes and pies, according to the assembled scientists.

But for health and longevity, eaters of all ages and classes MUST TUCK IN ONE QUART OF MILK EVERY DAY, a variety of vegetables, fruits, fresh red meat, fish and eggs several times a week. Also essential are whole wheat grains (in bread). Eat plenty of foods containing vitamins, said the assembled scientists.

United States Public Health Service stresses as of vital importance the right kind of cooking. Violent boiling or prolonged frying kills delicate vitamins. Safest for stomachs are light meals, simple cooking, liberal portions of rare meats, raw vegetables.

All of which brings an ancient quotation which may or may not have some truth in it that what is one man's meat is another man's poison.

Treatment of Heat Exhaustion And Sun Stroke

There was a time when heat stroke (heat exhaustion) and sun stroke (heat exhaustion) and sun stroke and the same treatment was given in both conditions. Today it is known that the heat exhaustion is not usually as serious as sun stroke, and needless to say patients die with heat exhaustion.

The history of a case of heat exhaustion is that the individual is working in a close hot place—laundry, bakery—when he feels a slight dizziness, throbbing headache and nausea, followed by a cold, clammy feeling, exhaustion and restlessness. Pulse is weak.

Treatment of heat exhaustion is to remove patient from the heated place to a cool room or shaded spot. Clothing should be removed and although the heat has caused the exhaustion, he does not need heat, and heat in some form should be applied to the feet. When he is able to swallow, hot coffee should be given.

In sun stroke—heat fever—the face will be red and swollen, skin hot and dry, and temperature very high. Treatment for sunstroke is removal to a shady, cool spot and clothing removed. If temperature is very high (103 to 105 F.), he should be placed in a tub of water at temperature of 80F. to which ice should be "gradually" added, and ice is applied to the head. When he is able to swallow, hot coffee should be given.

While the patient is in the tee bath, he should be massaged vigorously to bring the blood from congested deep tissues to the surface of the skin, and relieve the heart. The temperature should be taken by rectum every half hour and when down to 102, the patient should be removed from the tub to prevent chilling. Ordinarily this bath should not be continued longer than twenty to thirty minutes."

If temperature is not high, or ice bath not available, the patient may be laid on a cot and a sheet wrung out in cold water, wet sheet applied.

Patients who have once had a heat stroke or a sun stroke should avoid prolonged heat. Sometimes the these conditions often leave the patient more readily affected by heat or sun.

The above information gathered from three twenty page booklet issued by the American Medical Association, should be known to everybody.

WAR IN CANADA

An unidentified submarine may or may not have been in the harbor of Halifax.

The real point of the thing at this time is that a submarine could come to the harbor of Halifax.Could come and go.Could.

In other words, if war broke out tomorrow, supplies from Europe, undoubtedly would, come to Halifax. They would come to destroy Canada's war supplies, munitions, ships carrying our products.

Numerous submarines appeared in Canadian waters in the last war. Today Germany has more submarines than that war, and more powerful; submarines with a greater cruising radius.

Which tells what? Simply that talk about Canada's being secure from a war in Europe is nonsense. Germany could—and would—send submarines across the Atlantic. just as she could—and most likely would—send bombing planes across the Atlantic. Our seaboard cities, Halifax, and Saint John and Vancouver would be under attack—and perhaps our northern mining areas. These attacks would probably be by members ann school attaches, and left the jail on the arm of her 19-year-old son. The latter, with his brother-in-law, Owen W. Ware, is so charged as an accomplice but free on bond, were allowed to talk at length with the Smiths.

ALIEN BILL

A system for registering aliens, so thorough that not a single alien will be able to live or move about in the Union unknown to the authorities, will be introduced in the Alien Enemy Registration Bill.

The Bill is said to have two objects. The one is to stop the illegal entry into the Union of aliens who come from the north by evading posts under the supervision of the Immigration authorities.

The other object is to enable the Government to know immediately in the event of an outbreak of war, just where certain subjects are and particularly those suspected of being politically dangerous.

The register will be confined to aliens of more than 17 years of age. The bill classifies all people except British subjects, Union nationals and naturalized Union nationals as aliens.

Naturalized British subjects are thus included as aliens.—South Africa News Letter.

The Science of Gate-Crashing

The limitation of bids to the Royal garden party at the British Embassy almost puts it up to the Fourth Estate to revive the ancient art of gate-crashing, which has become almost extinct in journalism.

This thought probably has occurred to other members of the craft, and it may be taken for granted that efforts already have been made to use the telephone and learn who delivers the groceries, and bakers and whether any of these persons would like to lay off and go to the ball game on the day of days. The possibilities are not exhausted by the closing of the guest list and the knowledge that there will be detectives from the federal service as well as Scotland Yard men guarding the portals and pouring grog in the guise of butlers or lurking the same in the guise of deserving Democrats.

An American fly cop might be willing to tie his shoe while a particular friend passed in, and it was a detective from Scotland Yard, no less, who made it possible for your correspondent and Mr. Floyd Gibbons to crash the gate at the lying in state of the late father of the present King Emperor in London a few years ago and not only made it possible but initiated the idea.

You never know until you try, and if you miss the worst that can ever happen is a quiet leave into the alley. They wouldn't be likely to bend any blackjacks over a man's head in such circumstances, and a good gumshoe could give them the old "sir, how dast you!" and threaten to lie down and scream when they put their pre-couple hands on your collar. They couldn't let that happen.

But that grocer's boy and butcher's boy business is long-overworn stuff, and the true art of crashing calls for a dignified entrance through the front gate, and that calls for nerve, poise and

SLEEP COAT

It was with interest that we learned of a successful crossbreed between pyjamas and the old-fashioned but practical "nightie" and that the promise is called a "sleep coat for men." We have not heard this described but we rather imagine it is a night shirt with legs, that is, we expect it will turn out to be one piece pyjamas.

If this is so, then the chief objection to a night shirt will have disappeared. The presence of legs will keep it from wrapping around one's neck like a scarf after a night of rolling and tossing. The new sleep coat can combine the cosy comfort of a "nightie" with the smarter appearance of a pair of pyjamas the inventor has a genius waiting for it.—Lindsay Post.

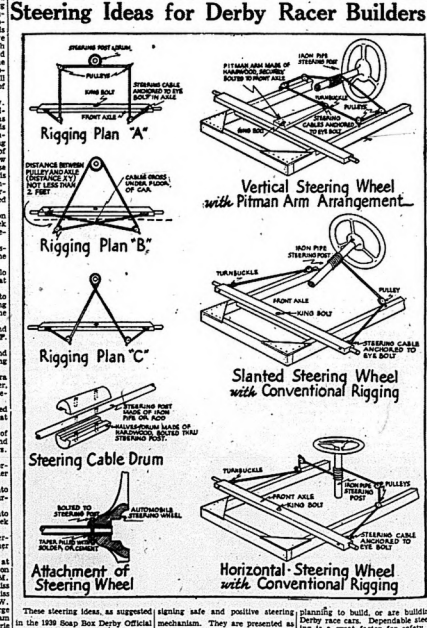
Steering Ideas for Derby Racer Students



These steering ideas, as suggested in the 1939 Soap Box Derby Official Rule Book, may prove helpful in designing safe and positive steering mechanism. They are presented as suggestions to the boys who are planning to build, or are building, Derby race cars. Dependable steering is a great factor for safety in the race.

Additions to Ontario's highway police patrol were urged today as the province counted nearly a score of deaths and many injuries in a Dominion-wide week-end accidents.

While July the Fourth motorists still trooped home to the United States after the holiday, H. G. Mackay, Provincial Police and Ontario Safety League, sounded an appeal for an augmented police force. He declared the cost of additional constables would be made up to advantage in reduced hospital bills and insurance.

Attorney-General Gordon Conant agreed more officers would be desirable but insisted on the taxpayer.

The succession of fatal accidents which began as motorists headed out to celebrate Dominion Day last Saturday was topped by a crash on Provincial Highway Toronto Monday in which five persons were killed. The fifth, John Lang, 69, died in hospital at Toronto yesterday.

All last night United States cars poured through customs and immigration channels at border points after visits to Ontario. Customs officials at Fort Erie and Niagara Falls called the amount of traffic a record while at Windsor the influx of American tourists was called the greatest in 13 years.

Members of Forces Attend Police School

Police officers from the R.C.M.P., Ontario Provincial Police and the Belleville Police Departments attended a police school at the city police station yesterday where Col. J. Thomson, of the R.C.M.P. headquarters, Ottawa, spoke on the Modus Operandi of criminals.

Col. Timmerman outlined the characteristics of the criminal classes and their mode of operation, which invariably never changes throughout the life of crime. The speaker introduced the new system of identification of criminals as carried out by the Dominion Federal police and available to all operating police departments in the Dominion. The present system of card-indexing criminal finger-prints was adopted from that of the famous Scotland Yard of London, England and has become quite extensive throughout the Dominion. The R.C.M.P. already have 5,000 criminals finger printed and indexed at Ottawa.

(In London yesterday Sir John Simon, Chancellor of the Exchequer, said that the British government has no intention of complying with demands of Japanese spokesmen that it cease supporting Chinese currency in favor of currency of the Japanese-dominated federal reserve bank.)

Policy Must Change

A Domei (Japanese) news agency dispatch from Mukden, Manchoukuo, quoted a Japanese spokesman as reiterating that a complete change of British policy regarding the Chinese General, Chiang Kai-Shek, was prerequisite for a settlement.

The "Tientsin trouble derives from British pro-Chiang policy," he said. "This must be changed or a settlement is impossible."

Sir Robert expressed moderate optimism about the possible outcome of the arbitration negotiations and said: "I am convinced there are no problems at hand which cannot successfully be solved if approached by both sides in a spirit of good will." He warned, however: "I believe if forceful tactics are attempt ed a solution will be impossible if they might, on the contrary, lead to serious trouble."

Unofficial information in Tokyo indicated the blockade had proved a severe handicap to Japanese trade in North China.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Why Men and Women Quit at the Altar

From all over the country have come letters to Patricia's advice column asking for help. Patricia is the girl who wrote to this column that her fiance went back on her at the last minute—saying he felt he didn't love her enough to marry her.

Men who have acted like Patricia's fiance and deserting girls at the last moment, had told the reasons they gave. These alibis are strange—enlightening. Most of them do not necessarily a villain, it would seem, because he deserts a girl at the last moment. But he is needlessly cruel if he doesn't state his reasons and give her a chance to "save face."

One man writes, "Three weeks before the day set for my marriage I discovered I was incurably ill of tuberculosis. I wanted to die instead of facing the horrors that confronted me. But I couldn't make that decision with my girl. I knew she'd want to sacrifice herself to the bitter end, and I didn't. I decided that Arizona swallowed me up, and here I've dragged out a miserable existence, wishing I knew if I told my girl she would have gone with me, and I didn't have the nerve. I'll do her any more harm than I had done her already. A coward's way, but it was the best I could think of."

Many other men have written to this column saying that discoveries regarding their health left them no choice but to quit. One told the girl and she thanked him. The girl was allowed her to draw her own conclusions.

Still another correspondent, whose interesting letter was already been given in this column, cites the case of Abraham Lincoln's desertion of Mary Todd on the date for their wedding. Self-disregard, to his ability to make a woman happy, will often cause a man to quit at the last moment. This seems to have been Lincoln's case. On the second date set for the wedding, he did not fail Mary Todd.

The attitude of their mothers break their engagements. One boy wrote frankly, "My mother gave up too much in her life for me to disregard her wishes, but this would have made life unbearable for the girl I love." Another wrote that it was a question of whom he should support—mother or wife. And he chose his mother. A third said his fiancee declined to live under the same roof with his mother. Both ladies were hot-tempered, and one hot-tempered in a house was enough for him. His mother was in possession.

Why Women Desert Men at Altar

"It was after a big party, and I did this mad thing which I have regretted all my life. I still love the man I went back on.

Sometimes a girl will forswear her life's happiness for the most unselfish reasons. "If I had married, the whole family would have gone on pinching and saving to give me pleasures and failure, my sister and her two children—and none of them are grateful or seem aware of the sacrifices I have made for them as the bread-winner, still it seemed a clear case of duty at the time."

More men than women have gone back on their promises to marry on account of religion. To them the way they worship God seems more important than the way they are to be worshipped by an earthly love.

Some women seem to be deserted by reason when it comes to marrying. They are deeply in love but so full of doubt in regard to making a go of their marriage that they keep putting it off day after day until at last the day puts them off too.

Dr. Dafoe's Column on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Children Afflicted With Bronchiectasis Cannot Progress Normally

Rheumatic fever is not the only disease following in its wake of repeated infections. Another such disease, not so prevalent as rheumatic fever, but as deadly, perhaps, is quite serious and all too common. This disease bears the rather formidable name of bronchiectasis.

As the name actually indicates, it is a disease of the bronchial tubes which convey the air to the lungs. It is sometimes referred to as a bronchial tree because the healthy system of air passages resembles an inverted tree. The wide tube leading from the mouth, called the trachea corresponds to the tree trunk. As this tube passes down into the chest, it divides into two branches one to each lung. These branches divide again and again until they become small vessels leading to every part of the lung.

When the individual is healthy, these branches become finer and finer as they go deeper into the chest. Bronchiectasis is the condition caused when sacs of pus gather in these tubes, causing dilations. Here is how they come about.—

Around the top of the nose are situated our sinuses. Some children suffer from inflammation of these sinuses, pus forms in them, and much of this pus comes out as a discharge from the nose. Not all of it is gotten rid of in this way, however, for the child swallows some. Any that goes to the stomach has its virulence destroyed by the acid there. But some that is swallowed doesn't go to the stomach, but passes down into the lungs.

As you no doubt know, pus is composed of dead blood cells and waste material from broken-down tissue. Pus is just the way the body trying to get rid of poison and its contains germs. When these pus cells pass down into the tubes, it injures the delicate lining.

This tube is lined with a peculiar membrane, the surface of which is covered with fine hairs

"An Ounce of Prevention—"

ANN MORRIS....knows preventing beauty ills is easier than cure.

By HELEN FOLLETT

PREVENTING beauty ills costs nothing but time; curing them costs millions of money to the frail sex every year. Let us trust that all members of this beauty-loving, fair-seeing eyes, are attending strictly to their beauty duties.

Hair that has proper care is likely to retain its pristine color and abundance. Brushing gives it vitality, the fortnightly shampoo keeps the scalp healthy. Too frequent permanents are not recommended because the shrits should be given a chance to relax between bollings.

A complexion that is kept scrupulously clean and lubricated every night isn't likely to flake and fall in accordion pleats. Takes only two minutes to get it ready for bed. A cold cream in the morning tones tissues and fibers so they won't lose heart and go sagy.

Like the complexion, the finger-nails and surrounding tissues need a bit of loving attention.

To hang onto the youthful figure, daily exercise is required. And faithfulness to the balanced diet. Be a lazy loafer all among the others, they will put on pads of adipose tissue.

Posture forget that some digestive ills are due to slack posture that permits internal organs to drop from their normal positions.

Though skirts be ample and circular cut, there is still room for smooth, perfectly-fitted undies and foundation garments. Prominent hips, proud of their svelt shapes, have undies made to order of sheer fabric that fit like a glove, fitting suits.

Be fussy when getting a corset fitted. Seek the services of a reliable, experienced corsetiere. She can find the bumps of it by magic, taking tucks here, letting out the garment there, molding the figure to harmonious and graceful lines.

The thin girl, who through poor posture has developed a tabloid bay window, will look as flat as a flounder in a foundation garment of the right kind.

THE LUNAR aspects bearing rule on this day point to rather perfect harmony with Mercury. Although on the whole there may be strange goings, with fair people. The obscure or mysterious developments may relate to the personal affairs of parents, in which some subtle chicrm or captivating personality plays a prominent and decisive role. The affair is not entirely baleful, but discretion and forbearance would not prove amiss. Private disruption is possible.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared to find their affairs resulting in an undercurrent of the curious, unaccountable or mysterious, with the possibility that you may be called on to be manipulated by vigilance, sagacity and considerable energy and tact. Intimate relations may be most subject to this sway, not disastrous but severely test. Domestic or romantic affairs are involved. A child born on this day may have a difficult nature to understand, is quick-tempered, unreasonable, emotional, shrewd and subtle, but also friendly, considerate and of captivating personality. GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Etiquette Notes From Here and There

Mrs. William Allan Neilson, wife of Dr. Neilson, who this year is retiring after twenty-two years as president of Smith College, is beloved and admired by all Smith College students and alumnae for her fine character, her charm, and the grace of her hospitality. At this year's Commencement, the college committee conferred an honorary degree on this distinguish lady, "Doctor of Laws." Neilson, presiding genius of the president's house of Smith College and dispenser of its hospitality who has supplemented the labor of the faculty and administration by her unofficial and unobtrusive interest in the human and esthetic sides of the college and influenced potently the tone and quality of its life."

Good manners are due not only to a fine woman who has a superb sense of her responsibility to human relationships, and who, as the Bible phrases it, is "given to hospitality."

The word "etc" isn't very commonly used by adults in this country, but I was brought up to use it and still do, as a natural and proper way of showing respect or appreciation of a courtesy. In most European countries "ein", or its equivalent in the language of the country, is very frequently used.

Did you observe how many times the queen, acknowledging a courtesy or a pleasant comment, said "I thank you, sir." Also the queen's frequent "I thank you" can so often be said more graciously than the shorter "thank you."

Everything comes into the field of etiquette....and now hot dogs

We've been told officially the "correct" way to eat them. Use the American overhand grip to consume hot dogs. Grasp them firmly with the right hand and convey them to the mouth end first, with the palm underneath.

What, no cutlery?

Courtesy Tip

When you offer someone a second portion of anything, do not use the words "more" or "second" or "another." This isn't necessary, and it isn't tactful.

Instead, say, for instance, "May I give you a piece of cake?" or "Will you have a cup of tea?"

(Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on Good Manners submitted by readers.)

'Old Man With Knuckle Ball', Dutch Leonard, Biggest Noise In Twin Bill at the Stadium

Beats Yankees 3-2 With as Neat a Piece of Hurling Seen This Year

YANKS WIN SECOND

Giants' Drive for the Top Halted by Boston Bees Twice in Afternoon

(By Bill White Associated Press Sport Writer).

It seems that Emil (Dutch) Leonard, the Washington Senators' "old man with the knuckle ball" was just about the biggest firecracker in baseball's whole Fourth of July package.

The 3-2 conquest of New York Yankees came in the first game of the doubleheader that champions had dedicated to their pal and retired first baseman, Lou Gehrig.

With the season's biggest crowd there to honor the "Iron Horse" with the Yankees determined to make it a gala occasion, old Dutch stood up and mowed the Yanks down allowing six hits in what must rank as one of the most courageous pitching performances of the year.

That job must take precedence over some other magnificent baseball doings in a day when 366,934 holiday makers watched their favorites in both ends of bills.

Four Homers For Taber

Such doings, for instance, as Jim Tabor's four homers for Boston's Red Sox—two of them with the bases loaded to tie the Major League mark; or superb elbowing by Danny Gardella and Mike Sheffner of the Bees in stopping the Giants' rally; or Tal Gray's son's shutout of the Cleveland Indians—only one of a dozen other feats.

But acknowledging them all stands old Dutch, cooly, winning his third game from the champions, holding them to four runs in the 10 innings he has toiled against them this season.

The champs won the second game by 11-1 at Ebbets Sunday, shelling the Senators with a six hit job that was no slouch itself.

Tabor's home run feat was only part of the show as the second place Red Sox slammed the Athletics all over the lot in their twin engagement, by 17-7 and 18-12. He had ids of home runs in them.

The White Sox made the most of a big fumble in each of their games with St. Louis Browns to win 7-3 and 6-4, while Mel Ott's Giants were touching the spark to the Chicago-ans's game-winning five run clinging in the fourth frame of the second game, for the best bit of fireworks.

Newsom Beats Indians

Big Buck Newsom's "Sunday pitch" was good enough to stop Cleveland Indians in their tracks and the Tigers won 4-0 in the biggest crowd 56,272 howled its approval. Rain washed out the second game.

The New York Giants title drive in the National League went temporarily glimmering when MacFayden and Shoffner handcuffed them twice in Boston, holding the Jints to a total of 11 hits in the two games and coasting in to victories by 3-1 and 10-2.

The Cincinnati Reds stayed right where they been since May 26 (first place, in case you haven't been reading the papers) though they bowed to Mace Brown of the Pirates 4-3 in the second game. It was his first full game and he made the most of it. The Reds combined seven hits and Lee Grissom's shutout relief knitting in the first game to win 7-4.

Dodgers Win Two

The Dodgers won two in a series marked by more fireworks than base hits. They beat the Phillies 6-3 and 8-6 to stretch the Quakers' losing streak to unseemly proportions.

And Hank Leiber had a day of it, out in Chicago. He belted three homers in the first game but the Cardinals outdid him in run producing and won 6-4. Then the Cubs turned around and won the second 3-2 when Gus Mancuso singled home the winning tally in the 10th.

Yesterday's Stars

(By The Associated Press)

Lee Grissom, Reds and Mace Brown, Pirates—former pitched six hit shutout in relief role as Reds won opener and later hurled first complete game, enabling Pirates to win nightcap.

Danny McFayden and Milt Shoffner, Bees—Danny allowed Giants only six hits and Milt gave up five to stop Giants in doubleheader.

Mort Cooper, Cards and Gus Mancuso, Cubs: Cooper's homer won opener and Mancuso's single in 10th won nightcap for Cubs.

Dutch Leonard, Senators and Steve Sundra, Yankees: Dutch baffled the Yankees with a neat six hit while Sundra did same sort of elbowing for champs and won the second game.

Jim Tabor, Red Sox: Homered only in the first game and three times in the second (twice with bases loaded to tie major mark) as he slammed the Athletics 17-7 and 18-12.

WINGS GAIN ON GIANTS

Rochester Wins Twin Bill While Jersey City Splits With Bears

(By The Associated Press)

In the kind of race they're having in the International League this season, you can't put much faith in the baseball tradition that the team that leads the pack through July 4 is bound to be the pennant winner, but Jersey Giants probably hope it's true.

The holiday bargain bills caught the Little Giants in the middle of a bitter battle with Newark Bears and Rochester's second-place Red Wings in the midst of one of those heady winning streak that cost them the lead a couple of weeks ago. The Jerseys got an even break, belting out a 5-1 victory in the second game after being blanked 2-0 in the opener. The Red Wings won two tight ones from Montreal, 3-2 and 2-1. And as a result the Giants' lead was cut to half game—too small for comfort.

Increase Margin

The third-place Syracuse Chiefs also won a pair, whipping Baltimore's Orioles 10-9 and 8-1 to increase their margin over Newark—a game—while Buffalo split the other twin bill at night, the Bisons losing 6-5 in the opener and taking the last-place Maple Leafs the nightcap, 4-3.

Sparkling pitching performances marked the race for the lead. First Earl Cook, ex-George Washburn, who blanked Jersey City's league leaders with three hits in 6 shutout innings in the second (twice with bases loaded to the maker mark) as he stamped the Athletics 17-7 and 18-12.

Eighth of Year

Ken Heintzelman and Mike Ryba did the honors for Rochester, the former giving Montreal seven hits and the latter relief when the Red Wings collected 21 in all. Heintzelman's win was his eighth of the year.

At Buffalo it was Earl Cook, who had allowed only four runs in 21 innings since joining the Bisons, who blanked the Leafs in the first, the five twilight innings he worked. It went on to a pitcher's battle as the Bisons scored three runs in the fifth, then sewed up the ball game with a four run fourth's 13th homer. Tom Drake also did some good relieving for Buffalo after relieving Red Wings collected 21 in all. Hafferkamp's win was his eighth of the year.

As the tempo of the major baseball races increases—counting the Dodgers-Cardinals race a major one—the boys are getting steamed up a little earlier and the No. 1 battle of the year so far took place in a game between those old rivals, New York Giants and Brooklyn Dodgers. While running out a hit that was converted into a double play, manager Leo was fined $50 and Durocher $25.

Ford Frick Will Harridge

These two gentlemen, Ford Frick and Will Harridge, presidents respectively of the National and American Leagues, appear to be in for more than the ballplayers themselves for the rest of the summer if the present tale of dissipation and holus-bolus continues. What with the team and individual feuds, trouble over gloves, ejections from games almost every day, protests from managers and owners, and six or seven other items, the league bosses seem to be heading into a busy July and August. Harridge, at least, probably figures it helps maintain interest in the league, what with the Yankees grabbing off the pennant almost as soon as the season started.

GLEN ROSS WINS FIRST GAME 14-8

Canal Team Well on Way to Win Rawdon Township League

Stirling, July 5 (Special)—When the first game of the final series for the championship of the Rawdon township softball league was rained out on Friday night last the Ross squad had every comfortable lead. Starting again last night they scarcely let the Bethel leads by a six run lead after seven innings and the final score of the highlights of the game was a snappy double play in the fifth by the Glen Ross boys. Merrill to Brown to Pyear, that was really nice to watch.

Bethel lads according to their supporters, and they have plenty around here, and they have plenty, suffered an off night, they were below par in every division, fielding was weak and batting also. Runnells, looked upon by many as the leading pitcher of the league was off color and the boys from the river smacked his offerings plenty. Pyear turned in a good effort for the winners on the mound, A. Fraser acquitted out a real smart homer for one of his three hits in four trips to the plate leading Glen Ross batters.

Score by innings:

Glen Ross	126 021 0—14
Bethel	021 110 3—8

ATHLETICS RUN AWAY FROM FIELD

Champions Have Lost but Two Games in Thirteen Played

(By The Canadian Press)

St. Catharines Athletics are to Ontario senior baseball what the Toronto Goodyears were to the senior "A" division of the Ontario Hockey Association. The same Goodyears were so powerful they ran away from Stan Rice, and the Athletics are doing the same.

The league-leading St. Kitsmen, Canadian champions last season, pulled six points away from the second-place Hamilton Tigers last night with a 21-13 win over Minto. The champions have lost but two games this season in 13 played.

Over at Fergus the Lyon Thistles beat Kingston 15-7 to jump into a fourth-place tie with Bucko McDonald's Grilles. Terriers, Minden are on the third rung and the hapless Brampton team is mired in the cellar with but one win in 11 games.

The slashing passing attack of the Athletics, which has practically buried their games thus far, was again the big factor especially in the last quarter when they rolled over the eight goals. The largest crowd of the season, 2,000 paid customers, saw Henry Green, Indian-forward, tally six of the Athletics' goals.

Backed by brilliant work of goalie Tott, Fergus displayed a clever combination attack in spite of the scrappiest senior games of the summer with the visiting penalties rushed out for roughing. Rusty White and Cyp England scored three goals each for the winners.

TRADITION HELPS THE RUGMAKERS

Amsterdam Team in Driver's Seat on July 4th and May Wi n

(By The Canadian Press)

As if a baseball umpire's duties weren't finding it hard enough to push Amsterdam Rugmakers from the driver's seat, baseball tradition stepped in to the aid of the New York Yankee's farm club in their quest for a second straight Canadian-American League pennant.

The Rugmakers have been in front for almost a month now, never by a wide margin but always by enough to be safe at any time. They held a two-game edge over Utica Braves on Monday when the date tradition concedes the pennant to the club in first place.

Amsterdam protected the margin in one of four Independence Day doubleheaders by three bases on balls in the opener but Glovers evened up with 10 hits and a 12-1 verdict in the nightcap.

Meanwhile Oswego held the pace by breaking even in two with the visiting Cornwall Bisons. After capturing the opener 9-6, the Keds went down 11-4 before Cornwall's 18-hit attack in the nightcap.

Syracuse Chiefs settled temporarily on another front when the Onondaga entry split a pair of close decisions from Ottawa Senators. Ottawa's Gendron twins turned in 2-3 and 9-8 victories to send the Senators scurrying back into fifth position.

Rome Colonels and Utica Braves played a double-header in each of their series with the Colonels winning both by a one-run margin. In the first game afternoon, Colonels downed Braves, 6-5, then in the second game, after a floodlight match with Colonels captured 7-6 after 10 innings.

New York, July 5 (AP)— Jack Dempsey has received $2,000 wires from all over the world since he became 55 years old, according to figure—Babe Ruth excepted—could have received more. Ruth was guaranteed $78,000 for 18 months as a pro, has passed the $56,000 mark.

There is only one recorded instance of a player being knocked unconscious by a tennis ball. The victim was the Frenchman, Jean Borotra, who was floored by a drive from the racket of Gerald Patterson. Borotra, however, was out for only a few minutes and resumed play.

Down in New York yesterday $2,000 baseball fans gathered to pay homage to one who had helped to make the Yankees the powerful ball machine it is today. Well, they were "Lou Gehrig Day" in the Yankee stadium—a day on which they presented the retired "Iron Horse" with everything except the stadium in which they were gathered. Everett Scott, who held the consecutive games record now played before Gehrig stepped at that mark, was on hand along with Babe Ruth and other members of the famous Yankee '27 team. The band played "I Love You Truly" as Ruth openly hugged and kissed the ex-idol and with a roar with cheers. Emotion overcame many of the fans and fans of baseball, but who could blame them? Gehrig was standing on "Old Dutch" Leonard, of the Washington Senators, then pennant winners, when the first "knucklehalfer" the Yanks into the ball park. Gehrig responded with 11-1 in the second tussle.

Over a quarter of million persons passed the turnstiles during the six contests yesterday, 56,000 jamming their way into Navin Field in Detroit, the largest baseball crowd ever seen there. With the exception of the Gehrig and Ruth names in the Bees, there wasn't much change in the National League race yesterday, as the leaders split. Traditionally the Reds and Yankees should meet in the fall classic, but actually, as there is an old and tried saying in the baseball game, the clubs leading the majors on July 4th will meet in the world series. Here's a good one if tradition is followed to the future, especially in the National League.

Sport Spice — After idleness since last Friday, the local softball league will resume tonight this evening with Corbys at Dracups and Canadas at Rose. In the National League where the seventh place Boston Bees are only ten games behind the league-leading Cincinnati Reds.... Apparently Western Canada is a fertile ground for junior hockey, as the N.H.L. clubs are looking in that direction to sponsor junior amateur teams.....Ripley Feltz, Bill Cook and company. What's Brandon got Belleville hasn't!.... Asa Holmes, who never would be—hockey players — was a prospect.....Frankie Parker of the Geraldton Miners, will get a shot with the Montreal Canadiens.....Why all this hockey chatter?..... Just to steal the world weather.... If Al Meagher could get some ice in the Rome arena for hockey these days, seals would be at a premium.

Along in 1935 efforts to organize a canoe club in Belleville were put through with Bill Pye, former football prominence, as chief promoter, but like other worthy sports ventures attempted in Belleville, the proposition fell upon deaf ears. Along comes Pye as a German-born lad by the name of Carl Gruber landed in Belleville and who was quite interested in canoe or paddling races. Gruber had been an expert canoeist in his native Germany and played with the Belleville club during the 1936 Canadian championships at Ottawa, we believe it was. Gruber returned to Germany after the last Olympics, took a position as a German-born lad by the name of Carl Gruber landed in Belleville and who was quite interested in canoe or paddling races. Gruber had been an expert canoeist in his native Germany and played with the Belleville club during the 1936 Canadian championships at Ottawa, we believe it was. Gruber returned to Germany after the last Olympics, took a position as a Nazi-ruled hitlerland and immediately returned to take up residence in Vancouver. I want to get as far away from Hitler and his gang as possible," Gruber is reported to have stated. We lost sight of the little German lad for a while but since taken out his Canadian naturalization papers. Over the holiday Gruber turned up at the Dominion Day canoe regatta in Toronto and won the paddling singles. Now we hear Carl is appointed to win the 1939 Canadian Canoe Championship singles at St. Catharines this summer in hopes of representing Canada in the canoe events of the 1940 Olympics. Knowing Gruber as I do, I assured he would prove as fine a specimen of true Canadian youth as one could find.

During the progress of a softball game played recently at the Coleman Plate, Umpire Don Thomas called a close decision at third base after the player had been struck by a fairly batted ball, when Geyer was a base runner. At the time there were considerable and heated arguments, with the result that Thomas gave Coach Ted Townsend an order to leave the gate. Thomas stated Geyer jumped into the air, off third base and was struck by the ball. (Ouch, that must hurt). He was standing on the bag at the time and therefore could not be declared out as well as long as he stood on any base. We were consulted regarding the matter and Umpire Thomas, as rule 49, which defines a base runner as one who, never by a wide margin but always by enough to be safe at any time. They held a two-game edge over Utica Braves on Monday when the date tradition concedes the pennant to the club in first place.

Umpire Thomas was undoubtedly right.

"Pop" Cooper, the veteran from Kansas City in his Top 3rd. 223 cubic inch displacement Hydroplane boat, broke the existing world's speed record for that type craft in an official test and run at Picton yesterday. Cooper's Top 3rd attained a speed of 67.485 miles per hour over a two-way run over the measured mile American Power Boat Racing officials were present and officiated at the trials, which make them official and now Tops 3rd is the top racing craft in the class. Incidentally Cooper will race his championship craft at Massenas on the 4th Holiday in connection with the Belleville Rotary Club's regatta.

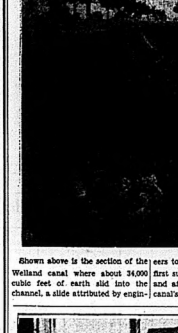
Three Countries in Finals

Boys who hail from three different lands raced against each other in the international finals of the All-American and International by beating the challengers from Panama and Canada, who had placed first and second, respectively, in the preceding international heats, eliminating the other champions from foreign lands.



Shown above is the section of the Welland Canal where about 14,000 cubic feet of earth slid into the channel, a slide attributed by engineers to natural erosion. It was the first such disturbance in four years and affected about 600 feet of the canal's bank. Navigation was not affected and dredges are now at work clearing up the damage. Only expensive grading of the banks can prevent similar occurrences, it is said.

Hundreds of extra police are on guard in England's capital following a series of bombing outrages by members of the fanatical Irish Republican Army, recently banned by the Irish Free State government as an outlaw organization. Many were injured and thousands of dollars worth of damage was done in the first outbreak of terrorism at the end of June and recently there have been intermittent reports of package exploding in post-offices. This form of crime supposedly exposes the I.R.A.'s opposition to English domination in Ireland. Shown here are two scenes from London after explosions. TOP, firemen are seen cleaning up in the shattered window of a fashionable Piccadilly shop, while in the LOWER picture another fireman knocks broken glass out of the clock over a doorway, while policemen hold back the curious.

SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK

By R. J. SCOTT

The bedroom was bright with morning sun. He threw back the bed-clothes and planted his feet on the floor. He was between his bed and Lanny's. A blob of crimson over a chair caught his eye.

He looked down at the face on the pillow. His heart stopped. The little white face, as sweet as a child's. The cream face had been framed with chestnut curls—and he couldn't see them.

The eyes opened. The gray trusting eyes with the soft shadows in them. An instant like that, and then a vivid mask seemed to settle over her face.

Lanny sat up quickly in bed, and a laugh cut through Tony's concentration. A blatant laugh that clanged in his ears.

"Well!" Lanny greeted him gaily. "Oh, my boy, you were priceless last night. You didn't even know me...."

Tony sat on the bed beside her, his sensitive fingers gently over her mouth. "Don't laugh, Lanny," he said quietly. Then he stopped and just looked at her. He saw the mask lift from her face and her white skin take on a transparent quality. "Last night," he said, and his low voice filled the stillness of the room, "a man fell in love with a woman—"

"A Painter-man with a nun?" she asked softly, and the shadows returned to her grey eyes.

"Oh, Tony—" her arms were around his neck. He held her close, buried his face in the chestnut curls.

A laugh like the sweet low rumble of a fluttering heart. "And I was so tired of being gay," she whispered.

called him Painter-man.

The face faded. He looked at his watch. Quarter past nine. He'd better be getting ready for that fat old woman. "Old fool," he muttered. "Got to take off twenty years and fifty wrinkles and still make the portrait look like her. I wish I could paint her just as she is, the homely old fat thing. Isn't a job for an artist, it's a job for a laborer. False notes, that's what portrait painting is. Not art—false notes."

Now he remembered what he had been saying to that girl last night. That was it—false notes and true.

He had said to her, "You have a dainty face." He remembered her eyes as he told her that. They had opened in surprise, "Yes," he had continued, "dainty. And your colors are pink and pale blue. That dress you have on is all wrong." He remembered looking with disgust at the crimson blob below her face.

False notes. All of his life was that! He who thought he had dedicated his life to beauty. It was all wrong! Now, that girl last night. She would understand . . . But was she? He remembered tears in her eyes once. What was that about? Oh, yes, he had said, "Had you lived long ago, you'd have been consecrated to the church and spent weekly for your beating from the priest."

"And because it's now," she had said—and that was when tears had trembled in her eyes—"I am consecrated to a purpose—and take no beatings, but not from a priest."

"If some man beats you," he had called the swagger with which he had said it, "I'll fix him. You tell me and I'll fix him."

She had leaned over very close to him and said, "You could do it Painterman."

He seemed to remember trying to kiss her, then, but she had receded from him as her image receded now. He had to find her!

False Notes

By Catharine Foss Allen

Tony Galwey sat up in bed and rubbed his fingers through his thick black hair. "God! What a head!" he groaned. He swallowed for a few minutes in morning-after misery. His mind held only a picture of dark brown waves with a white disc, small and oval, which advanced and receded, drifting up and down.

"What a fool," he muttered. He looked at the watch on his wrist. Nine o'clock. There was something this morning ... Oh, yes, Mrs. Longsfelt coming for the final sitting for her portrait at ten. You'd think a wife would see to it that her husband didn't get plastered the night before an appointment like that. And he looked around at the twin bed next to his, a cluster of chestnut curls on a white pillow and a mound of covers—that was his wife. The very thin voice which suggested to the back of his mind that she, Lanny, had protested often against his drinking, only served to increase his irritation.

"Quite," they had agreed. "Suits me fine," he had told her, "and now I'm going out to celebrate — along thank God."

The little white disk rose again from the brown waves before his eyes. It looked something like a face. A girl's face. He began to see it now. Those round, trusting eyes. The delicate mouth. She was saying something . . . "Painter-man."

Oh sure, it was a girl at the party last night. He remembered now. He had called her by some name and she had laughed and

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, July 5 —(CP) — The market looked steam today and volume dropped back to around 100,000 shares. Prices showed practically no changes.

Consumers featured the golds by moving at an advance of 20 to 25. Sicoe was another gainer. The rest of the golds, Wrights, Hargreaves ruled higher. Other senior golds were unchanged. Base metals actives were Falconbridge, Nickel Bay, Noranda, Pend Oreille and White-Aemidt.

Industrials posted scattered gains. Walkers common firmed a point and Canada Malting a point or more. Senior oils and utilities were firm. Steel and foods were weak. Home and Anglo-Canadian were the only gainers in the western oil group.

WALL STREET

New York, July 5 (AP)—Buying in selected issues gave the stock market a push forward today in answer what broader trading following the Independence Day interval.

Some dozen rails and industrial specialties were up more than a point around the fourth hour, although an early buying flurry quickly petered out, leaving trading quiet.

Major commodities again seemed more eager to climb than stocks. Most staples were generally higher. Corporate bonds edged ahead, too.

Strong strain in the share list included Bethlehem, Chrysler, Union Carbide, Douglas Aircraft, Industrial Rayon, Johns Manville and Radio, man, which was up three at one time.

International Nickel, Hiram Walker and Gooderham small fractions and Canada 25 to 8 higher. Abitibi fell back a little. Most others, including Dominion Tar in the bond market, were neglected.

KING AND QUEEN

cnation two years ago, and their third visit abroad. Last summer they spent a week in France, cementing the ties between Britain and Canada in the friendship of a neighbor across the Channel.

Invited Some Time Ago

The visit to Belgium is expected to demonstrate a new Anglo-Belgian friendship, and recall the warm ties which bound Britain and Belgium to the little country lying also just across the English Channel.

Formal invitation to visit the Belgian capital was tendered by King Leopold some time ago, according to early reports. King George and Queen Elizabeth will arrive in Antwerp Oct. 24 aboard a British warship, and inspect the Liege International Exposition before returning to England. But details of the program remain to be announced.

It will be the second exposition of this kind they will have inspected this year, since they saw the World's Fair in New York during their momentous visit to the American metropolis last month.

King Leopold the Great Londoni frequently since the death of his father, King Albert in February, and Leopold's trips were connected with political affairs arising out of Belgium's foreign policy, they were purely private and one was a state visit to King George in London, Nov. 16, 1937.

Leopold Decorated

Prior to the state visit, Leopold came to the British capital on Dec. 2, 1935, and was awarded the insignia of a knight of the Order of the Garter.

On March 20, 1937, he came to London to attend the British Cabinet Ministers on Belgium's neutrality policy, and on Dec. 4 of the same year he came to London incognito with his mother, Queen Elizabeth of Belgium. The trip was linked by some observers with the abdication crisis and was not a mandate over the Belgian Congo.

On Oct. 20 last year, Leopold and his bride, the former Princess Lilliam, went to the heir to the Italian throne, paid a brief visit to Their Majesties.

Succeeded Father

King Leopold III ascended to the throne of Belgium following the tragic death of his father on Feb. 17, 1934. Tragedy still haunted the royal family. Six years ago this week, the beautiful Princess Astrid of Sweden in an automobile accident.

Thirty-eight years old, King Leopold, like his father, has the love and love of the Belgian people. Democracy and simplicity were the keynotes of his upbringing and this was further enhanced when he went to school in Belgium's famous Eton.

Despite his royal position, King Leopold, then Crown Prince, was a private in the ranks when the Germ hordes over-ran the country. He did the same work as his fellow soldiers and only in one respect did he differ from them; he was not allowed to do output guard duty. He emerged from the war as a sergeant.

A FLASH FLOOD

virtually isolated as the flood waters of Triplett Creek roared out of the banks shortly after midnight.

Crutcher estimated that the flood waters struck a residential area in the town of 2,500 slept, had washed 12 houses from their foundations.

Morehead, Ky., July 5—(AP)—A "flash" flood inundated this eastern Kentucky mountain town today with a reported loss of life and heavy property damage.

Emery McMillan, manager of the Ashland Home Telephone Company, said he talked briefly with the manager of the Morehead branch who reported 27 persons drowned and 25 in the flood waters. Also about 60 miles east of Morehead.

And also in other Rowan County towns, Farmers and Clearfield, virtually were isolated after the waters of Triplett Creek, flowing a cloudburst, roared out of their banks. Motorists and telephone wires "went out" a few minutes after he talked with the Morehead manager.

A single telegraph wire from the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad depot was operating but was jammed with requests for rail tickets between Ashland and Lexington were being routed by way of Cincinnati. Highways through Morehead and County were reported covered by water.

Cloudburst at Midnight

The cloudburst struck shortly before midnight as residents of the town of 2,500 slept. Triplett Creek was a seething torrent.

W. E. Crutcher, Morehead postmaster, in a hurried telephone conversation before the wires went out said "at least 100 houses" were swept from their foundations.

At Cincinnati, W. C. Devereaux, United States meteorologist, reported heavy rains throughout northeastern Kentucky yesterday. The Licking River at Farmers, he said, rose 19.8 feet in the 24 hours ending at 8 a.m. Farmers is a small town west of here.

Governor A. B. Chandler at Frankfort ordered state patrolmen and state highway department crews into the stricken county. The Governor termed the flood "a terrible thing."

The flood was the second disaster to strike Morehead in 24 hours. Yesterday fire threatened to sweep the business district. Claude Caskey owner of the property damaged, estimated his loss at $75,000.

LIGHTNING HITS

the place. The audience jumped to its feet, almost as one person. Somebody shouted, "sit down! all sit down!" and the crowd did."

Town in Darkness

Immediately following the crash of the thunder bolt and the flash of blue-white light, the town's electricity failed, stalled, and the theatre, along with the rest of the town, was in darkness for a minute. The patrons continued its good-humored chatter, and by the time theatrical services were restored to normal the program continued.

Mrs. Ruth Hall, theatre manager, reported that only nine patrons asked for refunds.

Alderman Yeo and his wife were at the theatre that night, following the crash, lighting actually did find its way into the theatre. They were sitting in the front. Flash of lief that the blue light that momentarily illuminated the place came from lightning somewhere under the roof of the structure.

"It was in the theatre all right," declared Mrs. Yeo. "There was that terrific flash. There was that blue light that seemed to be everywhere, and then darkness. The whole building shook. We sat there in the darkness, hearing the crashes of lightning booming outside. It wasn't very nice."

RESCUE 3 BOYS FROM DINGHY

Two Men in Fishing Dory Effect Rescue After Three Hours

Collingwood, Ont., July 5—(CP)—Three boys were rescued from a crowded from a floundering 16-foot dinghy on a bay near here in their boat wildly on Georgian Bay yesterday, Walter White and William Parrish effected the rescue in their 23-foot fishing dory.

The fishermen took three hours to travel three miles out to rescue the weeping boys, Alvin Bell, 15; Donald Hamilton, 15, and Sammy Walters, eight.

The boys made the boat for a joy ride and soon found themselves in difficulties when a wind and electrical storm developed. They bailed water as fast as they could with tin cans.

Raging Sea

White and Parrish were forced to buck their gasoline launch through a raging sea for about 20 minutes before they were at the dinghy, and several times the water rolled over the low sides and threatened to swamp them.

The alarm was first sounded by Fred Hamilton, father of the owner of the dinghy, who noticed the little craft drifting through the waves about a mile and a half off shore. "I saw the lads struggling with the waves for a few minutes before I saw the first squall struck her. The rain fell in sheets and I could see nothing for a few seconds and it was then that I saw the boys huddled under the crumpled canvas.

"I immediately got into three young men, who later turned out to be Walter White and Parrish and headed in the dinghy, and together we managed to take captains in a small outboard motorboat.

Harry Nobes waded out into the water, jumped into the motor launch and managed to get over the lee-ward side of the harbor to sound the alarm at the fishing dock.

Arrival Property Timed

"A few minutes later, White and Parrish were on their way out to the dinghy, and they reached it perfectly. Thirty seconds more and the three youngsters would have drowned in their boat in 15 feet of water," said Mr. Elliott. "The boys had been drifting about for a long time. They just paddled out into the bay, hoisted the sail and trusted to luck."

Bell, eldest of the trio, who only last year received a bravery medal from the Humane Society for assisting in the rescue of a drowning chum, said he did not realize the danger when the storm ripped the canvas from the mast.

"We hooked the boat about three in the afternoon," he said. "Sammy started to cry and Donnie and I tried to cheer him up. I tried the sail on the mast. Then it started to rain. We thought it was going to last for about 15 minutes! The water began to come over the sides and I guess we all thought we were done for. We did not see the fishing boat until it was almost upon us. I was sure glad to get into that boat. It was a long time from home for awhile. The folks were certainly glad to see me alive, but I figured on a licking for taking the boat."

BURK DEFEATS

Nevertheless, the last stage seemed easy for Burk who finished four minutes and fifteen seconds away during the last 200 yards he seemed to be taking things fairly easy.

Burk's pal, Jack Shirk, behind the cars all the way and did what he could, according to the "pit reports".

Moffatt's plucky display won him a round of applause from the crowd and from Burk, who said:

"Nice work, Norm. You made me step for a while."

A Tough Grind

"Boy that was a tough grind," said Moffatt, grinning as he stepped from his car.

"Joe didn't fall out as I hoped he would, but I'm glad he didn't make me look like a bum, a plumber."

Moffatt said the wind constantly slowed him down and declared he was going to adopt Burk's short, staccato style of stroking "because I think it takes less out of you."

Moffatt's first heat defeat did not reduce his enthusiasm for the Diamonds.

"I am going to tackle it again in the next couple of years. Perhaps Joe will age meantime and I will be able to lick him finally."

Last year a speed of 20 miles per hour was attained on Derby Hill, however, it is said that this year's race promises to see that speed greatly increased, as the machines being constructed by the youthful builders are much speedier and more modern in the matter of streamlines.

The Kinsmen entries are again being sponsored by the Kinsmen Club, with the winner of the race in the 12 years of age and the Canadian champion of the event for boys ages from 13 to 15 years of age. The Canadian Soap Box Derbies are actually a boon to the automobile steer racing events in the world", as each event is purely amateur and the racing "stars" the ingenuity of their builders, the driver, they must manufacture and construct his own kid car with the sole exception of the wheels, which may be purchased at small items such as cables and steering wheels, which may be purchased.

Keen interest and competition has marked the two previous derbies, and the finest prizes now available for the construction of the boys cars are being displayed in a store-room at the 1939 event. Last year's derby was a huge success, and Hill in Belleville, but this number is expected to be increased next Tuesday.

Toronto, July 5 (CP)—This has big game hunting and airplanes beaten for pure thrill," said 28-year-old Robert Jaite today. Monday, at Picton, he won the Prince Edward County Gold Cup in the Picton Bay as Cooper's, and I could do the same thing." He may not wanted to risk ruining her," he replied.

"Now does your wife like this pastime?" the reporter asked. "I guess she has been hanging up crepe paper for some time, but I always fool her," he replied.

"Do any of your children or grandchildren intend to follow you?

"I have three grandchildren, but they are too young to say yet. I only hope they don't. I have a daughter 16 years old.

"I have always wanted to race against Cooper. He is one of the best drivers in the game and is almost 70 himself. At the factory they told him that they were not going to let his fall', and he got the shock of his life when I tapped him on the back at Picton last year and he smiled Mr. Jaite. "He was a game boy. Incidentally, his motor stopped in the third heat.

AT THE BELLE

"Yes, My Darling Daughter"

Boasting one of the greatest comedy casts ever assembled, "Yes, My Darling Daughter", the Warner Bros. screen adaptation of the sensationally successful stage comedy of the same title, will open next at the Belle Theatre.

In the romantic leads are those two charming youngsters, Priscilla Lane and Jeffrey Lynn, who won such a heart-warming pair of young lovers in the memorable "Four Daughters." Their romance again travels a rocky road but this time there is no tragedy about it. In fact, it's the merriest sort of which all the amusing complications of a hilarious story evolve.

The more mature members of the cast have the delightful task of furnishing much of the fun and it's a mere recital of their names is sufficient guarantee that this cast is well performed, for they include such past masters of the art of comedy as Ian Hunter, Mary Robson, Fay Bainter, Genevieve Tobin and Ian Hunter.

The screen play written by Casey Robinson and directed by William Keighley is faithful in spirit to the stage original by Mark Reed. As matter of fact, it is one of the few stories on people who have "advanced" on the screen.

Yes such are Priscilla and Jeffrey, who plan to run away to be alone and which everyone in the whole household except her father, who has just left, finds out about the youngsters' intentions.

Priscilla's mother, played by Fay Bainter, is a writer of two dozen best-sellers on the subject of "Child Psychology" and she has been dashing off books continuously on this and other such matters. Nevertheless she's shocked. So is her literary agent, played by Ian Hunter, who has always shrewdly suspects. Miss Bainter's lover during a youthful rendezvous in Greenwich Village.

Mama's own arguments against marriage are rubbished when thrown at her by Priscilla, who points out that Miss Bainter was for Belgium in a couple of days, and mama reluctantly gives her consent to her daughter's running away ideas.

Soon after the youngsters leave, papa, played by Ian Hunter, returns home and, having a hunch who has never had any advanced ideas, he is furious when he hears about the elopement. Mama knows it. He dashes to his car and sets out after Priscilla and Jeffrey with dire things in mind.

In other cars, everyone else but Granny sets out to warn the young

First Official Office Performed By District Governor in Home Club

Mr. J. O. Herity Installs New President of Rotary Club, Other Officers—District Governor is First in This Area and in New District

Belleville Rotary had an unusual day yesterday, July 4th, when for the first time in its twenty-six years of existence, the Rotary Club was officially visited in his new office and in his own home town, District Governor J. O. Herity had taken over the Rotary office at midnight on Friday night, and he held that office until June 30th 1940.

Naturally it was a great occasion for the Rotarians despite the terrific weather, to have their new District Governor so honor the club at Belleville. Mr. Herity accepted the gavel from the retiring president Mr. Haig and handed it to the new president Mr. Arthur Clarke, with appropriate words. Other officers for the present year's day were one from Ottawa and one from Toronto.

The directors of Rotary are I. G. Heffey, P. C. McGuire, W. J. Morrison, M. E. Duff, A. Edmund Haig and Howard J. Clarke, Mr. Orland Pinkston is secretary and Mr. Howard Wills, treasurer.

Mr. Herity is the first District Governor in this area and in the new district which is to be formed on Nov. 1st, which includes 25 clubs, which extend from Belleville to Toronto, Lindsay, Oshawa, Orangeville, Shelburne, and other club centres in this part of Ontario. The most northerly Rotary Club in the new district is at Englehart, Ont. Seven districts are included in the area. The one Quebec Club in the jurisdiction is at Val d'Or.

the force of the impact was rolled it down an railway embankment and being struck by the motor car.

Mr. Montgomery, the driver of the motor car, escaped unscathed and uninjured while the motor car is reported to have escaped serious damage when it struck the train with the heavier jigger. Mr. Montgomery is employed at home only a few months prior to the accident and was enroute to Stirling on business.

Provincial Constable W. E. Smith was investigating the accident this afternoon.

Roadmaster Risk is 34 years of age and resides with his family on Dufferin St. in Trenton.

First U. S. Derby of 1939

First 1939 Soap Box Derby champion in the United States is Robert Clements, Tucson, Ariz., shown here receiving the M. Z. Coyle Trophy symbolic of his victory, from Gov. Robert T. Jones of Arizona. Since the temperature stood at 110 when young Clements won his home-town race, he's promised to set a "hot" pace for the more than 100 competing local champions who will meet in Akron next Aug. 13 for the sixth annual running of the All-American and International Soap Box Derby, co-sponsored by Chevrolet and the nation's leading newspapers.

A proud young man is 14-year-old Harry Doboard, of Landenburg, Pennsylvania, who displays his weapons and wears the crown that signifies he is the world's champion marble-shooter, a rather generous title bestowed on him after a tournament in United States that involved, 'tis said, more than 2,000,000 youthful "dead-eyes" before the finals were staged at Wildwood, N.J., where Harry shot his way to victory.

What Ruth was as a magnetic force in baseball so was—and is—Jack Dempsey in the realm of fisticuffs. You can still up plenty of arguments about the relative ability of various champs, but nobody ever disputes ownership of the box office and popularity award. One of the many tributes received by the former champion, and one he appreciated most, during his convalescence from complications that set in following an appendectomy, was a bunch of flowers from a group of boot-blacks. The boys collected 70c. for their tribute and a kindly florist gave them a bouquet worth twice as much and here they are as they handed them to a hospital attendant—"for the champ".

It should be practically no time at all now before the drums of ballyhoo are beating loudly on behalf of Max Schmeling (above), who apparently sprang back into fistic prominence by winning the European heavyweight title from his fellow-countryman, Adolf Heuser. Der Max took 47 seconds to K.O. Adolf and now all those Nova-Pastor-Galento-Louis plans may be scrambled. Maybe.

Here's the man who receives the least praise of all after every fight participated in by world's heavyweight champion Joe Louis. It's Joe himself, seen looking over newspaper pictures of his recent fight with Tony Galento, as he lolled around in Mike Jacobs' office. Customary reaction to Joe's short-lived title defences is to praise his opponents for even entering the same ring with him and then point out all the flaws the champ displayed. It doesn't worry Joe, however, and this picture illustrates the extent of the damage inflicted on him by the ambling barrel, a swelling under the right eye.

Who is the world's best sculler? That question may be settled this fall if Bob Pearce, undisputed world's professional champion, meets the king of the amateurs, Joe Burk, as he announced he would recently. Pearce, a native Australian, now makes his home in Hamilton and has defended his crown with consummate ease every time he has been called upon, while Burk, an American, has been riding roughshod over the best amateurs in the United States and Canada, and is currently laying for his second straight Diamond Sculls win in England.

Hans Adolf von Moltke (above), ambassador in Warsaw, Poland, was reported to have received a secret message by special messenger from Hitler's headquarters in Berchtesgaden, Germany. European chancelleries speculated on bearing the message might have on the tense Danzig situation.

But little of interest to North America will remain unseen by the members of this Saskatoon girls' pipe band when they get through their multiple travels to entertain citizens here, there and everywhere with their music. The band first made a big hit during a "motorcade" good-will journey to New Mexico last summer, and from July 24 to 29 they will be featured at New York's World's Fair, moving on from there to Cleveland for the World Poultry Congress. The girls are on their way to the New York playground at the moment. Founder and leader of the western organization is Miss Nellie Small, seen with the baton at the LEFT.

Feature of the all-England tennis championships at Wimbledon this year has been the play of Gene Smith (above), Californian school teacher playing "for the fun of it". The tournament as a whole has been on the drab side, but Smith perked things up when he defeated Roderick Menzel, former Czech star, now playing under German colors. Later in the tournament he injured his arm and his chances of defeating Ference Puncec, Yugoslavian star, were regarded as slim.

Billy Myers (rgarest camera) of Cincinnati Reds made a successful slide of second despite anything N.Y. Giants' Jurgess could do.

Britain Will Provide Credit for Allies to Buy Arms

Cabinet Approves Move of Gov't; Bill Introduced

Text of Measure Not Published but £100,000,000 is Set as the Amount to be Provided Britain's Allies

MAY MAKE SETTLEMENT

Britain's Position With Respect to Danzig and of Sending Air Force to Continent May be Made Friday

London, July 6—(CP)—The government introduced a bill in parliament today to set up a huge fund, probably £100,000,000 ($468,000,000), to provide credit for Britain's allies for arms.

The text of the measure was not published immediately but informed quarters mentioned £100,000,000 as the amount to be provided.

The government's move was approved at last night's cabinet meeting and was said to be intended primarily to permit Poland, Rumania, Greece and Turkey to place large orders with British merchants and industrialists.

The new bill is an extension of a measure adopted last spring providing a £10,000,000 export credit for political rather than purely commercial purposes. This was in addition to £75,000,000 already voted for regular export credits.

It was understood representatives of countries holding British guarantees had urged British grants to aid them in arming.

Explicit Statement

Other moves reported in some quarters to be under consideration by the government were an explicit statement by Prime Minister Chamberlain, perhaps tomorrow in the

TORONTO'S ARGOS WIN A HEAT IN GRAND CHALLENGE

Half Length Victory Scored Over Thames Club Eight at Henley

WATER VERY ROUGH

Toronto's Entry Will Take on Aussies Friday, Who Won from Kingston

By JACK BRAYLEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Henley-on-Thames, England, July 6—(CP Cable)—Toronto's hefty Argonauts pulled themselves to a half-length victory over the Thames Club eight in their first heat of the Grand challenge cup, modern rugby water which was more reminiscent of Lake Ontario than Royal Henley's usually placid setting on the Thames.

Air Was Very Thick In Thetis Says Man Who Was Rescued

Only Civilian Describes His Escape

London, July 6—(CP)— Frank Shaw, only civilian survivor of the submarine Thetis which sank in Liverpool Bay June 1, gave evidence at the fourth session of the official inquiry today.

Referring to the condition of air inside the Thetis just before he left, Shaw said: "It was very thick and I could hardly speak. I had a choking feeling around my throat."

"Arnold and I stepped into the chamber together. Just before the water came up to our mouths we put mouthpieces on. The chamber was then flooded and Stoker Arnold manipulated the catch on the hatch and went out.

"He told me to try to lift the hatch. I tried twice, and it did not go, obviously because the pressure in the inner chamber was not equalized. The door will not go any less the pressure inside is the same as outside.

"As soon as the pressure equalized I had no difficulty in pushing the door open. I immediately shot out of the escape chamber and I was on the surface in a very few seconds."

Roosevelt Pictured 'As on War Path' By Nazi Paper on Neutrality Act

Berlin, July 6—(AP)— Nazi publications expressed irritation today over President Roosevelt's July 4 comment on United States neutrality legislation.

Chancellor Hitler's newspaper Voelkischer Beobachter said that "Roosevelt again has dug up the war hatchet." The semi-official commentary Duetscher Dienst said: "The intention of Roosevelt in line his address to the anti-isolationist front does not lessen the danger of war. Rather, but on the contrary increases it."

Voelkischer Beobachter said the first policy of his administration was to prevent war in any part of the world, that the arms embargo section of the present neutrality law should be scrapped and that press dispatches from four major capitals and state secretary Hull's dispatches indicated Fascist and Nazi nations welcomed the action of the United States House of Representatives in writing a modified arms embargo into the American neutrality law.

The commentary service said that to maintain that Germany welcomed the action was a "biased falsification." The Morgen-Post picture of Mr. Roosevelt as "again on the war path." Voelkischer Beobachter referred to Hitler's answer to the President's April 15 cabled appeal to Hitler and Mussolini for 10 years of peace and guarantees for smaller European nations.

"Herr Roosevelt received for 2 1-2 months," Voelkischer Beobachter said, "and democratic politicians of the United States used this time to force out of the so-called neutrality law—which in reality would involve the United States in every European war—some of its most venomous fangs. . . .

"No reasonable man could really take it amiss that the (Rome-Berlin) axis partners are exactly sorrowful when some of the North American representatives do not join in the indecent war agitation of their President."

Floods Sweep Kentucky: 38 Reported Dead Following Cloudburst

Farmers, Ky., July 5. Flood, following in the wake of heavy rainfalls that reached near-cloudburst proportions, swept through northern and eastern Kentucky this morning, inundating several towns and villages. One report said that 38 persons were drowned at Hazard, Ky., when water rushed through the streets turning them into rivers. At Farmers, seven miles from Ashland, the Licket River rose 10.5 feet in 24 hours flooding business and residential areas and surrounding many families in the upper rooms of their homes. This air view shows Farmers as it appeared at the height of the inundation, with water several feet deep in the streets. Governor A. B. Chandler at Kentucky ordered state highway emergency crews into the area to aid in rescuing marooned residents and in supplying food and clothing to refugees. —Phonephoto

DEATH TOLL IN FLOODED AREAS NOW REACHES 50

Bodies of 25 of 36 Believed Drowned at Breathitt County Recovered

WATER 20 FEET HIGH

Morehead, Ky., July 6—(AP) Searchers poked into silt and debris today for bodies of the missing in the eastern Kentucky mountain cloudbursts that brought death by flood to about 50 persons.

Bodies of 25 of the 36 persons Postmaster W. E. Crutcher said were drowned here have been recovered. At Keck in Breathitt County—scene of many a feud in years gone by to give it the name of "bloody" Breathitt—Sheriff Walter Deaton and seven bodies were found but 20 still are missing. The sheriff said estimated property loss in Breathitt County at $1,500,000.

Fear Toll May be Higher

Red Cross and other officials fear the death toll may mount to 100, basing their views on the fact that many communities along the small creeks have not reported and won't until washed-out bridges are constructed or other communications by wire are restored.

Conservative Leader Brands Herridge as Common Slanderer

Hon. R. J. Manion Takes Sharp Exception to Herridge's Criticism

CALLS FOR ELECTION

Ottawa, July 6—(CP)—Political clashing of a year ago flashed back into the midst of Conservative party stalwarts today as a result of a sharp attack by Conservative leader R. J. Manion on Hon. W. D. Herridge, leader of the new Democracy Movement here last night.

In the same building and just two days less than a year after Mr. Herridge broke with the party, Dr. Manion made his first retort to Mr. Herridge's criticism of both the Liberal and Conservative parties on the ground that they are tied to reactionary financial interests.

"I brand him not only as a common slanderer of public men in general but as a spreader of falsehood, knowing it to be false," declared Dr. Manion.

In stating that the Liberal and Conservative parties had betrayed Canada by taking money from reactionary interests Mr. Herridge was slandering his own brother-in-law, Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett. It was Mr. Bennett who appointed Mr. Herridge to the Fifty Canadian and Minister at Washington, in which post he drew more than $121,000 a year and allowances.

Bennett Never Betrayed Canada

"I had many differences of opinion with Mr. Bennett but I do not believe he ever betrayed Canada," said Dr. Manion.

A year ago Mr. Herridge had told National Conservative convention: "You have lost a great leader. God help you."

Provincial Constable Ben Smith investigated the two robberies today and reported his findings showed two different parties responsible.

Family of Four Blind Since Birth Work 100-Acre Farm

Strathroy, Ont., July 6—(CP) — Blind since birth, the Pettie family of two brothers and two sisters, all over 60, has managed a 100-acre farm near here since 1901.

The two sisters, Caroline and Mary, recently left to live with Mrs. Cora Plumb of Kilchener, another sister.

Until a short time ago the farm was a going concern in every branch of general farming, but the aging brothers Frank, 70, and Samuel, 63, now work only a few acres of vegetables and use the rest of the land for pasture.

The brothers think blindness is no handicap to farming. The sisters did all the work of the farmhouse, keeping it spick and span in his busiest years.

Frank and Samuel have no difficulty in telling weeds from vegetables and can hoe and weed as well as any farmer.

A group of visiting friends one became lost near the farm and Samuel, who was with them, led the way right to their doorsteps.

MOSCOW PAPERS REPORT VICTORY FOR MONGOLIANS

Japanese Losses in Four Day's Fighting Said to be 800 Killed

FORCES DRIVEN BACK

Moscow, July 6—(AP)— Moscow newspapers today reported a victory for Russian-Outer Mongolian forces over Japanese-Manchukuan army units in an engagement described as the largest yet fought on the Manchukuo-Outer Mongolia frontier.

According to the Russian account the fighting lasted four days, with tanks, airplanes, artillery and infantry in action, ending only yesterday when the Japanese were driven back across the Khalka River with heavy losses. Japanese-Manchukuoan losses are estimated at 800 killed, Russian-Mongol casualties at 100 killed, 250 wounded.

The Moscow account asserted that after the Japanese had broken through to establish positions on the west bank of the Khalka the Russian-Mongol forces counter attacked yesterday and drove the enemy back across the river.

(Foreigners arriving in Shanghai from Manchoukuo gave the first independent confirmation of heavy engagements on the disputed frontier. They said hospitals in Hailar were "filled to overflowing" with wounded Japanese.

Concede Large Force

The army communique, distributed by Tass, official Soviet news agency, said that by last week end Japanese had concluded a considerable force of infantry, cavalry, artillery and about 100 tanks in the Nomon-Kan-Burd-Ooo area southeast of Lake Bor.

'Loathsome Conspiracy' Says Court Sentencing 4 Youths to Prison

London, July 6—(CP)—Four young men today were given prison sentences for what the judge characterized as a "loathsome" conspiracy to ply a woman with drink and steal her jewelry in a night club.

Victor F. C. Hervey, 23, son of Lord Herbert Hervey and a nephew of the Marquess of Bristol, was sentenced to three years' penal servitude. Sir Gerald Dodson, the recorder, termed Hervey the "mainspring" of the conspiracy, saying:

"How low you have stooped, you alone know."

William Goodwin, 30, was sentenced to two years at hard labor; Ernest Arthur Hering, 24, to 18 months, and Geoffrey Coop, 28, to nine months.

The judge predicted public opinion might ultimately wipe out night clubs and rebuked the woman victim of the jewel theft. He asserted her "drinking habits and her fatal idea of pleasure is to attain a state of semi-drunkenness and then, in public, to parade her degradation."

Foreign Buying Resumed at 36¾ New Low Level

No Restrictions Considered by United States Says Secretary

AGREEMENTS TO BUY

U. S. Will Buy from Canada Up to 1,200,000 Ounces of Silver Monthly

Washington, July 6—(AP)— The United States Treasury slashed its foreign silver price today from 36 to 36 3-4 cents an ounce.

Foreign purchasing was resumed at this lower level for the first time since last Friday.

The Secretary told reporters he was not now considering any restrictions which might curtail foreign silver purchases.

The first step in resumption of buying, he explained, was dispatch this morning of a state department note to Canada reinstating the treasury's agreement to buy up 1,200,000 ounces of Canadian silver each month.

Agreements

The treasury formerly had similar agreements with Mexico and China. The Chinese agreement lapsed and the Mexican agreement was suspended a year ago after expropriation of American oil properties there.

The only immediate change in foreign silver buying, the secretary said, will be to refuse from time to months to four the period which sellers of foreign silver have for refining their metal in this country after the treasury buys it. Morgenthau said the re-refining provision was intended to give work to American smelting employees and also to make sure the foreign silver meets American specifications.

WAVE OF HEAT ENTERS 4TH DAY, RELIEF IS SEEN

Sweltering Citizenry Employ Many Means to Woo Cool-ness

CARS ARE USED

Belleville and district entered its fourth day of the sweltering heat wave today after an unsettled night of high humidity and warmth, but with the promise of relief and freshening breezes from cooler breezes and misty cloud banks in the western sky.

Many were the means employed by a sweltering citizenry last evening to get relief from the steady, boring heat and humidity. Parks of the city were filled early with coatless men and lightly dressed women and children who sprawled out on the grass.

Car owners sought the cooler winds of the bay bridge, and long lines of darkened automobiles stood on this road, while others were content at the guard rails of the bridge as cooler breezes fanned the perspiring brows. Boat owners were out in force on the bay, and hundreds of swimmers splashed at the end of Victoria Park the Institute dock, Bleecker Park, Zwick's Park Hatchery dock and elsewhere.

Prepare Frankford Paper Mill And 4 Residences; First Step Taken by Bata Shoe Company

Company Leases Properties in Village for Two Years

PLAN FOR BUILDING

Additional Staff of Men Put to Work Today at Paper Mill and Other Property

Frankford, July 6 (Special) — Clearing up of the old paper mill, restoration of the four houses nearby and cleaning up of the ground around the former paper board industry which employed a great deal of the labor of this village in years gone by, are the first steps which the people of Frankford are witnessing in the building of what they believe will be a great new industry in eastern Ontario, the Canadian plant of the Bata Shoe Company, which it is hoped will lead to the development of this portion of the county and to the Bata industry in particular. For weeks rumors have been current that a great factory would be laid by, its foundations near the village of Frankford. Little else has been the topic of conversation in village home, in the shop, and in the canal house on the Trent River area all the way down from Frankford to Glen Miller and on to Trenton.

Cane Mill For Two Years

This week for the first time has been seen best evidence that the company will locate at Frankford and south, the paper mill has been leased for two years, the documents have been signed taking over the entire paper mill plant and four residences, but the pulp mill portion of the former paper mill plans will not be required. Six men were at work yesterday clearing the mill, improving the houses, cutting away brush which has grown up about the place. The hand of the renovator will be felt everywhere in the plant and in these homes. Today there were ten more men working in the plant and houses at renovation.

From Frankford will start out, if and when the deal is given its final decision, the building of one of the greatest projects in Eastern Ontario history. The undertaking looms large and it also brings an air of romance because its founders will be the people of Czecho-Slovakia, the land known land in Europe or at least the most read of in the past, part Bohemia and the other provinces of the former empire are saturated in romance and the Bata Company while thoroughly businesslike is not adverse to a touch of romance for itself and its employees. Its officials are something of the romancers of their own terrain in the west and east bends of the Trent River from Frankford southward. They have optioned 1500 acres of land which runs from the highway along the Trent across the intervening land of Sidney township, and enters upon land in Murray township. And here hangs a story. The plant which, it is expected, is ultimately to rise will be built not far from the dam on the Trent, the source of cheap electric energy to operate the plant; and here to the west will be built their village of model homes for their workers and then west of all will be the park area which will cross into Murray township which contains forested hills which seem so dear to the hearts of the Czechs because of their resemblance to their native Czecho-Slovakia. The southermost portion of the land now optioned by the Bata Company is a little north of Glen Miller.

Jobs For Unemployed.

"There is no land now on Frankford under option," said Reeve Geo. Spencer. "All the land is in Sidney and Murray Township. The people tions on land start one mile south of Frankford."

It appears that the factory location will be immediately south of No. 5 dam some distance west of the highway.

Any effect the immediate work will have on Frankford seems of the most optimistic character. Local views were told that it would take up all the slack of unemployment in Frankford. Now Frankford village has from 135 to 150 unemployed boys and young men who are unmarried and many of whom have had little work to do since they came to live when they could work. The jobs will also take up all the local unemployed, the jobless married men in the village, it is estimated.

The proposed plant will be all on Sidney township. The factory will be built in one unit and will be added to under the five year plan until it reaches its completion. The factory is the first to be built, then homes, then additions to factory and additional housing.

Already signs are showing of the demand for shops in the village. There is sign of better prices for real estate and specialty of sizes. Reeve Spencer stated that in the way of real estate Frankford has always been reasonable. "There has been few empty houses. Today I do not know of more than two." Inquiries are coming in to the village.

Prospect Attracts Other Firms

The other day a representative of the tannery company was in the village looking over possible sites for possibilities for a tannery. This firm was a large one and seemed interested also in heavy hides as well as in sides for shoe leather. This company might possibly employ from 80 to 100 men if it should come to Frankford.

Reeve Spencer, speaking to the Ontario Intelligencer said that as he saw it the advantages for the time being were to give the people more money through work. There would be more money to spend in the village and district.

The Galr Co. of Canada Ltd., owners of the former paper mill, bought it in 1932 from the Canadian Paperboard Manufacturing Company. The lease of the Galr Company to the Bata Company is for five years. The competitive bids call for use of the mill for two years only. It will take some time to get the new plant under way. If the company has decided as it is reported expected to make Canada the hub of their world export trade and the Trent the artery of their plant, all activity will be moved down from Frankford when their the new factory is ready.

Housing of Workers

Frankford has a population of 853 persons, to be exact, a healthy community as to size and variety of interests. With the new interest nearby, its future looks many times brighter. There are two hundred houses in the village.

Present plans are to board out the unmarried workers when preliminary manufacturing starts in Frankford and the married men in Trenton. These men will be the key-men who will come to launch the Canadian industry. If manufacturing starts the construction lower down on the Trent River will be begun so as to have the factory and village well under way a year and a half or two years.

One hundred men it is estimated will be employed with installing machinery, this operation taking a considerable length of time.

The arrival of the machinery now in bond in Montreal which is expected to be brought by boat for storage in bond, in a section of the mill, not used for manufacturing is expected today or in a day or so later. On the train river there are five looks on the way to Frankford. If the boat unloads its cargo south of Montreal it will not be necessary to pass through the Frankford swing bridge.

Reeve and Council Active

Reeve George H. Spencer of this village has been active in securing options, in making trips to Toronto and in local arrangements in the efforts to bring the Bata Company to the district. Some members of the village council, W. E. Lyons, George Montgomery, O. W. Dickson and Dr. E. Carl Ross have helped in the efforts to bring the project to Frankford's door.

The site of the proposed factory will be about one and a half miles south of Frankford, though it will not be that far from the boundary line of the village which has a very extensive area. The southern boundary of the land and model village will it is believed be about four miles above Trenton. The distance from Trenton to Frankford by highway is about eight miles.

Thus far has proceeded the project of which Frankford began to hear stories about the first of May last. It is generally considered the big things are ahead.

Mr. J. Robinson, accountant, representing the Bata Company is at present handling the work and contracts at Frankford.

Two Barges Carry Machinery

A tow with two barges in tow is expected to arrive at the mouth of the Trent River late today or tomorrow with the machinery for the Bata Shoe Company which has been in bond in Montreal. It will be placed in bond in Frankford in a portion of the former paper mill.

TRANSIENT "JUNGLE" RAIDED BY POLICE

City and Provincial Police raided the transient "jungle" immediately east of the city on C.N.R. property early last evening and dispersed a number of transients who were found loitering about and who could not give a good account of their actions. They were told to "get out of town."

The raid was conducted after information had been received that a suspicious character was seen in that vicinity. One man was held for questioning, but subsequently allowed to leave the city.

These transient 'jungles' where unemployed men congregate are nothing short of meeting places for transients and others crime is fomented. They are a menace to any community and such places should be cleaned up in the interests of law and order," stated Chief Kidd today.

No arrests were recorded on the city of Provincial police blotter to day, which left the cell block available for three transients, who slumbered peacefully on the cool cement floor despite the intense heat and humidity suffered by others.

LOSSES OF LIFE IN FIRE

Strangely people do not think of fire in terms of loss of life, yet the records are sad enough as far as human life is concerned.

The latest report of the Ontario fire marshal's department for the quarter, April, May and June is striking—eight persons died as a result of fires, three men, two women and three children, while a total of twenty-five persons were injured.

There were 4,179 fires in this quarter, an increase of 499, while the loss jumped over a quarter of a million dollars to a total loss of $1,815,079, against which is the insurance loss of $1,580,135.

The first half of the year also tells a picture of 8,262 fires, and a total loss of $3,809,475 and fortunately this is lower.

In the first half of the year there were 20 convictions for arson, with 6 acquittals and 5 cases pending. There were two convictions for fraud, one for attempted arson, one for negligence and four for other fire crimes, a total of 28 convictions.

There were four large fires, in three cases the cause was unknown and in one, the largest, smoking was given as the cause.

In a classification of causes, most of them read very simple—257 fires from chimneys, flues, cupolas and stacks, causing a total loss of $89,285. There were 309 fires from stoves, furnaces, boilers and their pipes; hot ashes, coals and open fires, 199; sparks on roofs, wooden shingles 206 and on fabricated roofs, 11. Exposure fires 11, smoking cigarettes, cigars, carelessness in smoking 973; matches 204, lights other than electric, 98; electricity 298. Lightning's havoc showed 61 fires in unrecorded buildings, 2 fires on buildings rodded before 1922.

Of interest to the rural section is the statement on spontaneous combustion in barns, no record, on all others, 29 fires. Petroleum and its products are reported causes of 124 fires, 25 are given as of incendiary origin, miscellaneous fires 220 and unknown 1,033, the latter loss being $929,952.

1,498 brick dwellings, protected, suffered a loss of $155,411, frame buildings, protected, 1056, brick dwellings, unprotected, 48, frame dwellings, unprotected, 276; all other dwellings and farm risks, 437. It is to be noted that there were 229 fires, mercantile risks, retail stores and contents with a loss of about a quarter of a million dollars.

Practically one quarter of the fires in Ontario in the second quarter of this year cannot be traced to their cause.

Fire is a strange master and hits heavily at times, but its most horrible losses are those of helpless human life.

ROAD FATALITIES

Premier Hepburn says that roads cannot be blamed for the motor toll, that good roads cannot make good drivers. He declared that careless drivers create a hazwhich no amount of legislation can overcome.

The Premier has been asked to increase the highway police numbers and put up better road signs. The week-end was disastrous with 21 automobile deaths. New appeals for safe-driving have been made by traffic organizations.

In answer to this Mr. Hepburn blamed the slow-poke driver who holds back others and causes cutting in. There is no doubt this driver is to blame particularly on busy days. He says that "it is true that the toll has been reduced on the dual highways but the fact remains no matter how good the roads are, you cannot make good drivers."

Will all drivers read that, stop for one moment to ask the question—"Am I the poor type of driver whom nothing can make a good driver because I am at heart a poor driver?"

Is it possible that some drivers take a fatalistic view and say, accidents will happen anyway?

But accidents are not inevitable. Sometimes stiff penalties will straighten a touch of recklessness in a driver.

There have been occasions when the toll of the roads have been cut down appreciably. It can be done again.

But it won't be done if every driver is thinking how fast he can make his way over the road and thinking mainly of himself. If drivers think in terms of others, the roads would not claim so many lives.

What right have cars and roads to take human life? Let every driver answer that.

THE LUXURY OF RELEASE

The quietness and comfort of this room
At eventide—the parlor lamps alight,
And unobtrusive music floating from
Piano wires accordant with the hum
Of conversation keyed to fellowship
And retrospection! Ah, this atmosphere,
Secluded, yet most hospitable, clips
The wings of Time! All datings are erased.
The past is present, and the present faced
With hope and invitation. We are what-
We were—and the cosmic potency of thought
And feeling.

As the evening stars come out,
The ghosts of other days come trooping in (Soft-sandaled and beribboned troubadours)
To re-enact the gayeties of May,
The games and pyrotechnics of July,
September's ripening pippins, and the haze
And frost-nipt foliage of October days:

The wildwood strawberries; the cricket field;
The bonfire on the green; the circus billed
For Saturday; the angling in the cove;
The boys and girls apprenticing in love;
The country school at luncheon hour; the sails
Of sloops and schooners on the bay; the trails
Of wild white rabbits in the glen; the trees
Where hickory nuts hung high; the husking bees;
The boys in Belleville, and the old, old men
With stories of the war! (I wondered then What war was).

Now the interlacing lines
Are silhouetted by the touch of Time.
Here, with the world shut out, the crystal
Of Memory, strung upon the rosary
Of Life, beguile me, and I give my hand
To absolute relaxation.

Dim the light!
I've had a session with myself. Good night!

"THE LUXURY OF RELEASE" titles the poem which heads this column, written by W.A. Taylor, of Detroit, Michigan. Mr. Taylor writes this G.F.J. with greetings to all Belleville Old Timers as an Old Timer himself. Sez he:

"I might call myself a Belleville boy, since I learned my trade in the Intelligencer Office when Hon. Mackenzie Bowell was owner and Mr. Shepherd editor. Among the employees were Moore, foreman of the composing room; London, of the job room; Baker, Caniff, Boseley, Bell, and apprentices—among them myself, Alfred, Sanderson, Shanks, and others. I am now on the retired list. Began my apprenticeship at the age of 16—September 3, 1870, the year of the Franco-German war and the great Chicago fire."

Mr. Taylor admits to having written many poems which have appeared in Detroit newspapers. He will be glad to hear from any Belleville Old Timers of his time—his address being 2145 St. Clair Avenue, Detroit, Michigan.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

July 6th., 1919.

Last evening in the Fair Grounds a fast and interesting game of baseball was played between the Red Caps and the Giants, two City Junior League teams. The Red Sox won the score being 7 to 3. The Giants defeated the Sox in a previous game by a score of 7 to 6. The following composed the teams: Red Sox—Cretney, Mosman, Baldree, Myles, Marazzas, Jose, Hertly, Ashley and Clark. Giants—Hurley, Anderson, Leigh, Wims, Harnes, Jeffries, Watts, Hibbard and Mills. Brins and Anderson umpired the game.

The total number of fish fry distributed from the hatchery in Thurlow Township during the season amounted to 134,500,000.

Farmers are busy at this time and the attendance on the market today was not large. Butter sold at 38 to 40 cents per pound; eggs 45 to 46 cents per dozen. A few lots of strawberries sold at 30 cents per box and raspberries at 35 cents per box. Green peas sold at 35 cents and 40 cents per quart. Chickens brought $2.25 to $3.00 per pair.

Mr. G. Roblin of the 3rd, concession of Sidney Township, exhibited at this office today a fine specimen of barley which was grown upon his farm. It measured 5 feet and 10 inches in length.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Should Patients Be Told Their Blood Pressure At Each Visit.

The story is told of a country physician who had wonderful success in treating pneumonia patients. It was stated by some who thought they knew that this physician called all heavy colds pneumonia and as practically all colds would recover anyway, this was the real reason that he was so successful in the treatment of pneumonia.

My own opinion is that this physician knew that if he told the patient that he "just had a cold" he would want to be up and about in a day or two, which would not only mean that the cold would "hang on" but might develop into broncho-pneumonia or pneumonia. In other words, the physician thought it was to the best for the patient, to prevent complications.

Now that blood pressure is so much discussed, some physicians, if blood pressure is high, try to "scare" their patients into living a "quiet" life, rightly stating that a quiet life may double the length of years on earth. I believe it will be agreed that this may be just the proper advice in some cases; if some patients were allowed to live their own lives they would overwork, overeat, and get over-excited.

Dr. Henry M. Thomas, Jr., Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, (in the Baltimore number of Medical Clinics of North America, states

"It is true that some individuals must be scared into being good, but among the high pressure group there are few and far between. Many, many more need reassurance and this comes in the form of optimistic explanation of the cause of high blood pressure. Most patients want to know the actual figures if the reading is a couple of points above or below the last reading they are relieved or distressed accordingly!"

Should the patient be told what his pressure is each time? Most physicians advise that as food excitement, fatigue, or any temporary condition can affect the blood pressure, the patient should be told that no one reading tells the true or whole story. To grant this to the patient it may be necessary to allow one or two visits to pass without even taking the pressure. As Dr. Thomas points out, physicians have called for years cases with blood pressure of 230 and 250 without any symptoms due to this high blood pressure.

The above should be reassuring to those with high blood pressure. When your physician puts you to bed for a prolonged rest, then you can begin to ask about your blood pressure.

LEOPOLD TO BE HOST TO KING AN D QUEEN

Leopold, King of the Belgians, and one of Europe's most democratic and popular rulers, will be host to King George VI and Queen Elizabeth when they make their third visit outside England since their coronation this fall. Following tri-umphal visits to France in 1938, LOWER RIGHT and to Canada and the United States, TOP RIGHT, They Majesties have accepted an invitation from the Belgian monarch to pay a state visit to his realm in October. King Leopold, LEFT, visited England officially in 1937 and frequently makes informal trips to London. Their Majesties three-day stay in Belgium will include a visit to the Leige exposition.

CONSERVATIVE

"Which Mr. Herridge are we to believe?" asked Dr. Manion. "The man who a year ago described Mr. Bennett as a great leader or the man who today describes him as a tool of the big interests and a betrayer of his country?

"How regarding myself, when Mr. Herridge states that I, as leader of the National Conservative party, have betrayed Canada—that I am not free—that I take campaign funds from reaction—he states what is untrue and what he knows is untrue."

Won't Allow Dictation

"Even if the party had to carry on without campaign funds he would not permit any selfish interest, big or little to dictate to it. He would not sell out the party to any selfish clique which might wish to dictate the actions of the government of Canada.

Mr. Herridge had accused both himself and Prime Minister Mackenzie King of being Fascists. This was "balderdash" but Mr. Herridge had not repudiated the public support tendered him by Tim Buck of the Communist party. Dr. Manion challenged Mr. Herridge to say where he stood with respect to both Fascists and Communists.

The Conservative leader spoke at the Ottawa West party nominating convention which chose Dr. T. H. Legget.

Past President of the Canadian Medical Association as candidate at the coming general election.

Election Must Come Claim

The election must come this year if the people were to have confidence in the government of Canada said Dr. Manion. He quoted Mr. King's speeches in 1935 to the effect the Bennett government had no right to remain in office five years because it had failed in its policies.

"I have been unable to find any Canadian, anywhere, who will say that the King government has succeeded in its policies," he said.

Mr. King had relied on foreign trade to solve the problems of the country and now professed to be influenced by conditions in Europe in deciding on the election date. It was not European conditions but fear of the result of the election which made Mr. King hesitate.

Recalling the National Conservative convention of a year ago, Dr. Manion said the party had seen a long way since that time. A national organization had been set up and was functioning efficiently. The spirit of the party had been changed from that of depression to one of optimism and vigor.

Despite the heat a crowd of several thousand turned out to hear Dr. Manion assail Mr. Herridge who, in private life, is a prominent Ottawa barrister. The hall was filled to capacity and perspiration rolled down the Conservative leader's face as he delivered his sharpest speech since assuming the leadership of his party.

Mr. and Mrs. James Irwin, Miss Garrett and Miss Wilma Garrett left on Saturday morning for a motor trip to Vancouver, B.C.

NATURALLY, I am away from home a great deal, but household expenses continue and must be paid each month.

This presented a problem to my wife and me until our banker suggested we open a 'joint' account on which either of us could draw in the absence of the other.

Now, when I am away from home, my wife can pay her household bills promptly, by simply drawing a cheque on our 'joint' account. She always has money immediately available, because I have arranged with my firm to deposit my salary on pay days.

Incidentally, the cancelled cheques are receipts for money expended, and the entries in our cheque book stubs help me to make up our household accounts when I get home again.

Should you or your wife wish to open a joint account for your mutual convenience, our local branch will be glad to arrange it for you.

White Sox in Fourth Place Tie As Southpaw Smith Yields 2 Hits to Defeat Cleveland 2-1

Jimmy Dykes Played a Hunch When He Secured Hurler

DONALD WINS 10

Former Newark Hurler Closing in on Record Held by Schoolboy Rowe

(By Judson Bailey Associated Press Sports Writer).

At the time Jimmy Dykes was elevated to the managership of Chicago White Sox five years ago he approached canny old Connie Mack for advice and reputedly was told just one thing: "Play your hunches, Jimmy."

It was a hunch which caused Dykes to pick up an unimpressive southpaw pitcher named Eppie Smith last May 1 when Mack gave up on him after he had won seven and lost five in the two previous seasons.

The 26-year-old New Jersey lefthander has proved the sagacity of the deal many times and yesterday came up with a two-hit pitching jewel which paralleled Cleveland Indians 2 and lifted the Chicago White Sox into a tie for fourth place in the American league.

Smith probably will never become one of baseball's great figures and his present record of five games won (including one—for Philadelphia) and six lost today are as shaky downs as ups this season.

Loses Three to Yankees

Nevertheless his first appearance in a decision was a credit to any big hit performance against New York Yankees but it is the only time the White Sox have defeated the world champions this season. And three of the five games he has lost were attempts to reasert his mastery over the Yanks.

His stunt yesterday was the 10th time this season a pitcher has given two or less hits—which put him in some pretty select company. Rollie Hemsley, who hit nine of Smith's singles (Julius Solters got the other) and Bruce Campbell, who walked, worked a double steal for the Cleveland run. But a homer by Eric McNair in the seventh decided the game.

The defeat which dropped the Indians into a tie for fourth at the same time raised the Detroit Tigers into third in the American League.

16th Straight For Donald

The New York Yankees beat the Washington Senators 6-4 to give Atley Donald his 10th straight victory of the season, which just about establishes him as the rookie pitcher of the year award. However, he gave up seven walks and a couple of homers in an unspectacular seven-hit performance which was won for him by the heavy hitting of his mates—including homers by Joe DiMaggio and Joe Gordon.

Boston Red Sox topped Philadelphia Athletics by the same score, 6-4, with a 14-hit attack led by Joe Williams who also put up a fielding show.

Cincinnati Reds had no trouble turning back St. Louis Cardinals 6-3 on Bucky Walters' five-hit pitching. The slugging Reds gave him an early lead which he protected for the effect except for a homer by Don Gutteridge. It was Walters' 12th win.

Hubbell Hurls Well

Carl Hubbell pitched three hitless innings in relief to take the sting out of Boston Bees in a pitching session which the Giants finally won 11-7 with a four-run rally in the ninth. Al Hubbell's mediocre year in of the year and his first in seven weeks.

Brooklyn Dodgers pounced on the Phillies in the ninth for a 6-4 win, 7-1, to move into fourth place as Pittsburgh Pirates choked off Chicago Cubs 10-1. First baseman Mong gave Brooklyn the benefit of six-hit pitching by Curt Davis who made the most of their 12 hits and the Phillies' four errors.

CRUCIAL SERIES ON AT ROCHESTER WITH TEAMS TIED

Jersey City Giants and Wings Start Battle for Top Rung

NEWARK BEATEN

Bisons Score Three Runs in Ninth to Win by 3-2

(By The Associated Press)

Jersey City Glan' and Rochester Red Wings, who have been waging a regular bar-room brawl for first place in the International League the last few weeks, open the crucial series at Red Wing stadium today.

Crucial, that is, if a series could be called that with something over half of the season yet to be played.

Each club has won 45 and lost 30 games so far, but as they wigh in the log Rochester must be favored, holding the home field advantage and adage in the knowledge that is brought about by six victories in nine previous contests.

Rochester made this series more crucial by swamping Montreal Royals, 9-3, last night to wipe out the half game which separated them from Jersey City was idle.

The Wings, led by Ratel Crabtree, Dusty Cooke and Sam Hairston who got three hits apiece, pounded Ken Burke, Royal hurler, for 14 safeties.

The big inning was the sixth and it was good for six runs and a clean sweep of the four-game series.

Grodzicki Goes Route

Johnny Grodzicki went the route for the Red Wings, allowing only eight hits for his fifth triumph of the season. Bill Greene started for the Royals and was charged with the loss.

While Rochester was taking its 12th game of the season from Newark, Jack Salveson fashioned a victory with a hair game of fourth hitter as Buffalo Bisons won, 3-2, in 11 innin;s.

The bears were leading 2-0 going into the last half of the ninth but Buffalo tied the score, sending George Earley to the mound. And that set the stage for Ollie Carnett, a pinch hitter, who came parked it over the left field wall for his 11th home run of the season, winning the game.

Roy Hughes got both runs of Cliff Dapper failed in a attempt of three doubles and a single on six official trips.

Syracuse and Baltimore were rained out and Jersey City and Toronto were not scheduled.

TWEED BEATS MARMORA 6 - 2

Winners Lengthen Their Victory Parade to Five Straight Games

Tweed, July 6 (Special)— Tweed defeated Marmora by a score of 6 to 2 in a thrilling softball game at Tweed on Wednesday night to lengthen their winning streak to five straight games. Davidson and Reynolds engaged in a smart pitching duel, with a latter blow up in the fourth and allowed six hits and four runs in those frame but settled with a hard shot through third. Davidson struck out four but issued four walks. Burroughs, Tummon and Elsbury followed up with safe-hits, the last named reaching third base safely, but was out at the plate on trying to steal home in the 4th. Only two batters were forced out at second. Davidson struck out in the sixth but hit driving S. Merav home. Ochawa had a chance to register a scoring in the 7th, getting both their runs, converting a walk in the first inning into a run and a long fly scorer for his team, getting both their runs, converting a walk in the first inning into a run and a long fly the co...plete circuit on the longest hit of the game in the second. His fielding also featured.

Staff Sergt. pitched the first two innings for the locals, striking out five batters. Lieut. Smith had three of the best exhibitions of hurling seen here this season. He also showed a change of pace which completely baffled the batters, his fast ball being particularly effective. He walked two and allowed five hits, Reynolds lasted no free trick to the initial sack, struck out four and was nicked for twelve hits.

Prevost, Lindsay, Osborne and McCall did some effective work in the field.

Tweed: Burrough 2b; Tummon 1b; Elsbury ss; L. Jerax 3b; Lindsay lf; Orr c; S. Merav p, cf; J. Wagar cf; G. Wagar cf; B. Laing lf; Davidson p.

CENTENARY YET UNDEFEATED

Defeats Marsh Hill Team 7-6 in Second Game of Playoffs

Foxboro, July 6 (Special)— Still undefeated throughout their stellar playing season and thus far in the playdowns, the Centenary softballers continued to dominate the Sidney softball playoffs when, on Tuesday evening, they eked out a close 7-6 decision over their Marsh Hill rivals and the series now stands two games to none in favor of the Centenary boys. After trailing throughout the first few innings by a 4-1 score, the winners turned on the heat in a mid-game batting spree to rapidly overcome the Marsh Hill lads' lead and despite shutout relief hurling by Ralph Campbell in the last two innings managed to hang on until the end.

Playing heads up ball behind the steady hurling of Ralph Campbell, starting pitcher for the Marsh Hill lads soon established an early lead as they pounded Wyatt, the opposing hurler, for five hits and four runs in the first two innings and appeared to have the game well in hand. Starting the fireworks early the Centenary team sent their old warhorse Shortz, to the mound and he got down on the count. Marsh Hill's lead tough sledding as Shortz settled the latter down and after two hits and as many runs for the balance of the game. During the early part of the game Wright just kept the winners well in check to limit them to one base hit in the first inning, but in the second inning, however, the Centenary boys opened up with a two-run rally and a clean sweep of the four-game series.

Riggs Established 2 to 1 Favorite

Wimbledon, July 6 (CP)—Britons today established Bobby Riggs as 2-1 favorite to beat his roommate and fellow-countryman, Elwood Cooke in the All-American finals tomorrow of the All-England singles championship.

First, they point out, Cooke has failed Riggs 3 times since he has been him yet, and they argue no player is "due" to overcome such a psychological handicap.

On the other hand, Cooke, by everybody's admission, has improved out of all recognition even in the last few months and it must be forgotten that nobody gave Don Mckinlay a chance to beat Riggs in the French championships three weeks ago.

Cooke's advantage over Cooke is not as great either as three straight victories suggest for the last few months these two have met they have been in the middle of some gale-to-five sets.

But the experts are convinced that Riggs is a "more complete" player than Cooke.

Cooke has come at the Wimbledon Club and coach of most of Britain's leading players, thinks Riggs will develop into "one of the really great little players of his generation."

But Maskell adds that Riggs certainly doesn't look like a typical American champion.

"Many players seem to have the manner or tactics of any of the great American players of the past. Riggs, however, is a product of continental tennis or even of Hamlah lawn tennis. He's fundamentally a baseliner but I think his game has developed into a new model of perfection," Maskell says.

BERGER SCORES SLASHING WIN

Atones for Two Defeats by Whipping Wes Ramey in Ten Rounds

Montreal, July 6 (CP)—With two previous defeats atoned for by one flashing performance, Maxie Berger of Montreal ruled today as welterweight lightweight boxing champion of Canada at the Montreal Athletic Commission.

The 23-year-old Welsh boy, twice a loser to Wes Ramey in bouts in the Montreal Forum, met the slick Ohio lefter last night with a unanimous decision in their 10-round match before a crowd of 4,000.

Berger, weighing 130 1-2 pounds, had Ramey, who weighed 131, down once in seventh boxing tie for 2-1 favorite.

Ramey gave the count of three to Berger's corner to hold out for in the fifth but the sixth saw Berger pursuing again. A left tore a cut under Ramey's eye and by the 10th both eyes were cut and his cheeks badly puffed.

Friday Dainard Holds Gibbards to Three Scattered Hits to Win 7-0

Picton, July 6—Picton Intermediates dropped a league 7-2 here last night when Gordon "Friday" Dainard threw but three scattered hits. The locals have lost but one game in the last two starts, this one coming when Stat to Belleville, while Napanee has been defeated twice, Dainard has not accured four times. Dainard struck out 12.

The locals garnered nine hits off Jocko, and he struck out three. In the first inning Ayres got a single, in the third, Wright and Shannon singled, in the fifth, Ayres doubled, in the sixth, Evans singled and Lookyer singled, in the eighth, Shannon, McQuaid and Leavens singled.

Dainard gained applause from the crowd with a spectacular one-hand catch. Church was absent. Wright took his place on first base. Hard hitting Raymie Hudgin was in centerfield. In the ninth, Napanee brought their pinch hitters to bat, but Dainard struck them down. Each team had six errors.

Score by innings:

"AFTER YOU 3rd"

WINS SAILING RACE

For the first time this season Monarch Sailing Club won more than one top honors in the "A" class sailing event on Lake Ontario Yacht Club as the "After You" soundly trounced Harry Semark's Alaska yesterday.

In the "B" class Harold Kellar's Senegal was the only craft to finish after You 2nd, with Dave Blackburn at the wheel.

Callaghan finished the course in 2 hours 4 minutes and 45 seconds in a slow race beating the others by over four minutes. The wind was mostly from the southwest and the shore breezes to speed up the craft at times.

Secretary Charlie Jeffs announced after the race that applications are being taken for all type of sailing boats for the Rotary Club regatta, to be held at Ameliasburg on Civic Holiday.

Races are being provided for all types or sailing craft. Secretary Jeffs announced that entrants intend to urged to file their entries as early as possible in order that the sailing committee may learn of all boats, thus assuring no disappointments to late entries.

SHANNONVILLE, CANNIFTON ARE ON TOP RUNG

"Hawks" Defeat Cannifton 8-0 While Latta Wins From Stockdale

Foxboro, July 6 (Special)—Still battling away for first position in the South Hastings league, Shannonville and Cannifton are staging a merry race for first honors this season and with the "Hawks" applying the whitewash brush to the Cannifton lads last night to win 8-0, Shannonville is again right up even with the leaders. Foxboro remains in deep league into the cellar as they journeyed to Latta last evening and came home on the short end of a 5-4 score as the homesters staged a belated last inning rally to pull the game out of the fire and advance themselves to within one game of the top of the league.

Meeting is Called.

Giving the locals a clean drive in the loop to understand that there is to be no fooling regarding the matter of violating playing rules set down last year, which strictly forbids "Farming" of players, Inter-Dist. President J. Ed. Shorry has called a meeting of the league executive for Friday evening of this week to which all clubs are invited. We approached last night regarding their bringing in outsiders, the "Farm" system, and he was pleased with the brilliant ensure that they were unplayable and that they had talent in spite of the fact, that one of Foxboro's players is the league Treasurer of the league. Giving as their reason for bringing in their players the fact that they were keeping the league more evenly balanced, the league executives frankly admit that their newly acquired players are not eligible to compete for the team's present good showing, but they apparently forget that it is the duty of every club to keep the league on an even keel and that all over again the practice which almost spelled ruination for the league three years ago, or whether the present rules are to be adhered to and to keep the league for the purpose it was intended—giving the local boys a chance to play ball—will be thrashed out on Friday evening.

Share Driver's Seat

After dropping back into second position for a day of only four days duration, the Shannonville boys are again back where Driver's seat is on day as they jumped on the Cannifton lads with both feet during last night to pound out a decisive 8-0 drubbing. Keeping the visitor's batting well in check throughout the game, Ken Judy pitched airtight ball, allowing but three hits and the second shutout of the season and fourth of the year to his credit. Batting for first place honors: Lorne Jarret done the hurling chores for the locals and allowed but one hit to the homesters' liking as they got to him for seven hits and a couple of pitcher of easy victory.

Latta, after being up to within one game of the leaders as in playing hosts to the Foxboro 5-4 setback, failed to finish to eke out a close 5-4 win over the visitors to a win, as the score of the winner was not decided until the last inning was over, when the locals made a desperate rally in the final inning to push across the winning run.

Cannifton, one of good Canadian riders would appeal to the patrons of the track. "Jockey Pepper of England, I'm sure," wrote Pepper Martin's brother-in-law, Bert Hall, a well known interested in Pallant's present and Ambassador rodeo crown, in dirt racing or riding, according to a letter recently received from Bert. "He has been Pepper's pet idea; since taking up dirt track riding with success. "Mac" McCarthy, former publicity agent for the Ontario Baseball Association, has been leaving in the sports department yesterday to renew old acquaintances with Fred Hobbs, publisher of a newspaper in Pentang but after a brief chat with Hobbs, the ball club trainer when Babe Ruth Canada was the club's ace hurler, McCarthy found that the Intelligencer Toronto find to the fore. "The lad is a French descent. His name is pronounced as "Be-Marshidaw", explained McCarthy who predicted great things of the Penetang lad.

Do you remember when Canada won the Diamond Sculls at Henley on the Thames? Well it was in the third time when Jack Guest of Toronto Argonauts rowed the event Lou Scholes had won in 1934 and 1935 and in 1936.

Stealing 100 bases in a season should be easy nowadays, with the average pitcher concentrating on the batter. Clarence "Ace" Adkins Mildred a great sportsrunner in his day, Toronto Argonauts, however, was the total with which Frank Crossetti year, the American league last year.

Chuck Barnett's Corbys A.C. proved powerful enough to defeat Picton in the city softball loop with a 12 to 10 win over Dracups last evening. The "Simmers" who report to Point Anne squad and knocked three circuit clouts last year, first Friday, rallied in the ninth last night to score four runs, failed to tally the equalizer. Corbys knocked "Cone" Dracup out of the box in the initial frame after scoring four runs with no hands down. Dracups came back three times, but Corbys pulled away later and were leading 10 to 6 when they rallied in the ninth to cause the only actually excitement in a drab affair. Incidentally the play-off positions are about settled in our softball loop, so why larry longer?

The fans at last night's game were always in a quandry regarding the score. A fine new scoreboard will be erected for the ballpark this spring, why not utilize it? Another thing, it would add a great deal to some old-time batting and jockeying. A little verbal checker-board cross-fire would, the contestants would do much to liven up the game.

Picton harness horse were well up in the picture when racing at Orangeville yesterday. Wilmer Hillock's Lastic Gration was the free-for-all class and in so doing paced a mile and a half in a time of 2.08 1-4. Lastic Gration has a mark of 2.01 1-4 and was not at races last season than any other harness horse on this continent. Hillock had another good horse last year in Victor Patch, but sold the Patch lass when he brought out Lastic Gration. The Healey-Herrington colt Widow Healey, finished second in the three-year-old class and Doc Herring-ton's Widower Gration too gifted money in the 2.22 pace, all Picton horses. Incidentally Widow Healey is eligible for the three-year-old futurity at New Hamburg this fall.

Hanging up the first shutout win of the 1939 Bay of Quinte season, Friday Dainard hurled Picton to a 7-0 win over the Napanee City nine yesterday. Dainard has whiffed an even dozen as he limited the Napanee batters to three safe hits. Jocko, hurling for Napanee, was touched for nine hits, as Picton mounted their scoring. Incidentally Belleville is the only team to have defeated the Picton nine this season. Roly Rorke's charges are running neck and neck with Burt Wilkins' nine are playing at the Air Ace city.

Did You Know That — Two Americans, Bobby Riggs and Elwood Cooke, will meet in the British tennis finals singles? as the Canadian netsters shouldn't be disappointed having to lose in the same issue at Windsor recently. Bill Hodder of the Reds were the Cards yesterday may prove costly, as the former Toronto star, Ted Goodman, sustained a blow on the head and may be out of the game for some time.....Huntsville" Selkirk has been put up a third place in the Yankees' batting order.... It's practically an assured fact that Joe Burk of Philadelphia, will successfully defend his Diamond sculls at Royal Henley this year.....Several local boxing fans are journeying to Toronto for the Castillom-Rodak bout - tonight and also to get a peek at Tony Galento.

"Bran must have come; there's another car by the office. How soon d'you reckon we'll be advised to break ground on the new scheme? Bran might help us there; he's full of big ideas. And we've got to take the season into account, too; this weather can't last forever."

But their minds were on her, and each of them knew it. They went on more quickly, Adam apparently lost in a philosophic cloud, Mickey palpably in one of gloom; he had seen Adam like this before, always and exclusively in regard to his private affairs; and this intrusion of the mood into his business life bothered Mickey with the unease of all unexpected things. For a business cloud it must be which rested upon the placidly smiling mouth and thoughtful eyes of his chief; for what had the woman Catherine to do with his private life?

"A queer creature, though, isn't she?" he said impulsively. "I mean, to wrap herself up so in a piece of woodland. Why, she's only a girl, and good-looking, at that. But what a spitfire!"

"Mickey," said Adam, with deliberation, "you have no sense of fitness. Virago is the word you wanted."

"Well, it would do; it means the same."

"To you, yes; but to the accurate—or shall we say didactic?—mind like mine— A virago, my dear Mickey, did not originally mean a screaming slut with an axe for using her nails; it meant a woman of heroic mind and consistable bravery, with a spice of the fighter therein in—a woman who was equal to a man, in fact. There was a certain lady by the name of Caterina Sforza, whose husband unfortunately fell foul of Cesar Borgia, with the usual results. She was left to defend what no doubt she considered his rights as well as his name, though as a matter of fact I believe he pinched the estate in the first place. Be that as it may, she held off two armies for months by her own courage laying seige to another Forli, and laying seige to another Forli, and here's another Catherine saying: 'Come on at your peril!' Odd that her name should be Catherine, too."

"You're not suggesting," said Mickey idly, not greatly interested in the allegory except as it revealed his friend's peculiar state of mind, "that the Courts pinched Court Brandon, are you. Or that we murdered her husband?"

"I believe not. What a literal mind you've got, Mickey, to play with the demure and droll smile which took ten years from his face. "Though, mind you, I suppose in the middle ages, when the Courts came to the top, like cream, or scum, according to the point of view, he pinched best who pinched last; and most of the possessions of this period have, shall we say, a faint smell of theft. But at least she thinks we have affronted what are her rights of soil even where she doesn't own the land. That's another parallel with my Caterina—that she should believe so deeply in rights which have no rights in them."

"Tell that to the land-owners, said Mickey, laughing.

"I'll do better than tell—I'll show it. What an ideal can't do, a couple of million ponds can do easily. Not of course, that ownership of the land can ever mean quite the same in England, as it used to mean; but it's symbol of independence is even at least the roof over you, and the soil under your feet. It's the last of a sort of earthly trinity which I admit to be pagan and elemental, and, if you like, unreasonable."

He looked down as he walked, not at the activities he himself had set in motion, but beyond them to the acres of green and gold about the distant farmsteads under Castle Hill.

He smiled, reflectively. "It's rather curious, isn't it? I was born on a farm. A farm we called it, but the skinny few of these sentry down here would have disdained it as a small-holding. We worked like navvies for it, and loved it like a child that never grew up. And now my chief occupation in life is taking away that feeling by acres from a few people, to pay it out by yards to many. Mickey, you can never be sure of your rightness in the world."

"You're not, I hope, weakening just because that woman wants the world to herself, so you?" said Mickey suspiciously, "I never heard you talk this way before."

Adam gave him a sidelong glance whose mischief he was at a loss to fathom. "She was certainly uncommonly handsome, you know, and desperately in earnest."

"You're not thinking of turning back and leaving Court Brandon for her bright eyes, are you?"

"No one," said Adam firmly, "neither man, nor woman, nor child, nor league of all three, is going to drive me out of Court Brandon." They had almost reached the foot of the hill, and the corn hedge stood up writhing on their right hand. "Come on, let's see what Bran and Britten have to say about our percentage ground. Bricks and mortar are your lines; you're out of your depth when it comes to feminine psychology."

CHAPTER VI
CATHERINE OPENS THE FIGHT

The business affairs of Geoffrey Court had long since been classified without Catherine's help, while she lay disabled and listless by the window of the Grange library, neither reading nor thinking, only half of her mind living; but there remained, and had been moved into the hilltop cottage with her, a great accumulation of the private letters which could not in decency be destroyed without her attention, and about which she was much too ill to trouble.

Now she set to work upon the melancholy task of reading through them, and burning such as were of no interest. A few she kept because they had some bearing upon her own dead life; she did not want to forget that one mistake of hers, nor the curiously pathetic person for whom she had made it. A few others because they contained references to business, and might be wanted at some remote date, though the probability was that they would be hoarded for years for without seeing the light of day again.

But most she burned; there was no sentimental touch in them to make her hesitate; he had been a typical Court in his correspondence, laborious, brusque and to the point, and had valued the same qualities in those who wrote to him.

The bulk of the letters were from tenants, business acquaintances, and his solicitors, a number also from his sister, Percy Adam's mother. It was over one of these latter that she was frowning when Mabel came to call her to lunch; kneeling upon the hearth over the blackened fire, flushed with the heat, the sheets spread in her hands. She looked up and asked, with a curious glitter in her eyes:

"Mabel, did you ever hear my husband say anything about the five-acre field by Holly Lane?"

"About what, ma'am?" said Mabel, astonished.

"You know the field beside the Council playground, with the hedge of very old hollies—at one end they're giants. Did Geoffrey ever, as far back as you remember, say a word about it, the field or the hedge? I mean about owning it?"

Mabel thought back desperately, but hopelessly; it was a subject in which she had never had any interest. "No, ma'am, not that I can remember, ma'am. Why, what is it?"

"Just a letter I can't understand. It's nearly ten years old, from Mrs. Dunsden. Most of it is matter of fact family business; then she refers to some joke of his about this same field." She bent her head, and read aloud: "I don't know what you mean by saying that part of the Holly Lane field is yours. Why part of it? And which part? I seem to remember there was some family joke about that dreary little strip, but I can't recall having heard anything about it for twenty years or more now. Bill Warwick has decided whether to sell his grounds, after all, you won't be put to the necessity of either protesting to him, or explaining to me."

"And that was all; the rest was all humdrum family gossip as ever she could collect; only that one paragraph stood out in Catherine's brain, on the alert for a weapon.

"I suppose you don't know, Mabel, before it spoils," urged Mabel considerably, "and then you can have a bonfire in the garden."

But all through lunch Catherine was busy among the ashes of dead and musty records of the Court Brandon. There were sources she might tap, though not in her car, who had been for thirty years the custodian of the local history of the parish, and though she had never satisfied himself yet with so much as one chapter, now the less had a fund of information at his fingers'-ends. There was the tiny museum reading-room, where all the old curios of the village were kept, though she doubted if the joke about the Holly Lane field had been sufficiently public to reach them. There was Massingham Manor-house, of course, but the same doubt held there; on the whole, the vicar was the best hope. But in the afternoon she went to him, and found him poring over a very old, annotated Cæsar in his study, and making some quaint and typical notes in his own edition, since the one he was borrowed from a fellow-enthusiast in London. He was a small, dried, brisk man hidden behind glasses of particularly wide and square rim, more the popular idea of a lawyer than of a cleric. Catherine told him her errand, but put the urgency which informed it in her mind, as that he believed he was sitting opposite an unexpected enthusiasm kind to his own.

"Aha, it's me see!" he said, striking his chin. "The Holly Lane fields, at the upper end at any rate, were Council property until a week ago, when I believe this man Probert bought them. The Council had them, I think about five years ago, from Kerwin, at the Stone Farm. Now if there is anything in this idea of a sale, it must obviously be much older than Kerwin; and before him the farm belonged to the Green family—had done for several generations. I should say it's among the Greens we should have to look. As luck will have it, I bought up all the old family books I could lay my hands on at the Green sale, before Kerwin came in. Mind you, I don't say there is any reference; I certainly don't recall any but of course I've never read with that idea in mind. We'll have a look through them together, shall we? And if that fails, I fear I'm a broken reed."

They looked through them. There were not many. The Greens had been farmers, not book-lovers. Many of them were old manuscript account-books full of past records of business, several elderly dog-eared volumes of "The Gentleman's Hour" and "The Miscellany," full of virtuous stories and curious patterns for still more curious garments, and instructions for making various articles in knitting and crochet.

One was a massive family Bible whose records went back over two hundred years, on account of the picturesque career of Sampsyde Moore Carew, the king of the beggars, once a manual of the wonders of the world, many of them taller by inches than any authenticated cases warranted, one—they came to it towards the end of their researches—a small and very old pocket diary punctuated with the changes of the moon, details of crops, tides, fairs, and markets.

The find—at the end of it was torn unsteadily across the middle, and the lower half was missing; but on the first leaf there was also some writing in blunt pencil, not easily to be deciphered but clear enough to invite its own effort.

Catherine turned back to the title-page, and found the year of the book to be 1864. She bent her eyes closely over the faded writing, and it seemed to her that only careful cherishing had kept it readable at all, or decreed that the book should be preserved. No doubt there had been many such year-books, and none of them kept but this one. The answer to the riddle was under her eyes. She made it out with great difficulty:

TORONTO STOCKS
Toronto, July 6 (CP)—Industrial issues were up slightly on Toronto Exchange at noon today and higher prices were posted in the early afternoon for the base metal stocks, bringing net gains for the day to Noranda, Smelters, Sherritt, Wale Amulet and others. Gold shares were off narrowly but these also commanded better bids in the fourth hour.

Coniaurum churned about under profit-taking and it was down about 10 cents at early afternoon. Prices were firm to strong for Chesterville, Kerr-Addison, Aunor, Pamour and Sylvanite.

Steels, banks, liquors and senior oils edged upward narrowly. Ford "A" was strong at better than 20. Hamilton theatres Preferred added three points or more.

Minor losses predominated in the western oil group. Home, Calgary-Edmonton and Davies were off slightly and Royalite firmed a fraction.

WALL STREET

New York, July 6 (AP)—Buying in metals and specialties today helped put prices under a generally weakening stock market.

With dealings sluggish throughout, and a number of leaders inclined to hang back from the start, prices were slightly mixed near the forenoon hour. Most of the business news was on the side of improvement and less uneasiness was exhibited over European affairs.

Howe Sound got up about four points and lesser advances were posted for Sunshine Mining, Anaconda, Cerro De Pasco, American Smelting, Vanadium, U. S. Rubber, American Airlines, Boeing, Du Pont, Eastman Kodak, J. C. Penney, N. Y. Central, Great Northern and Procter and Gamble.

Hanging back the greater part of the time were U. S. Steel, General Motors, American Telephone, Reading, Nossbuck, North American and Allied Chemical.

Lake Shore and Hiram Walker advanced small fractions in the Canadian group but Penne and C. P. R. fell back as much.

Moves to reinforce such a declaration and to provide definite assistance to countries in the Anglo-French anti-aggression group in preparing their defences also were reported under consideration.

One was the extension of export credit facilities to enable those countries to buy arms and munitions in Britain, including any surplus airplane stocks.

Fourth Explosion Since Sunday Damages B. C. Electric Railway

"Several Ties" Broken and Some Wire "Knocked Down"

POLICE INVESTIGATE

Vancouver, July 6—(CP)—Fourth explosion in the Vancouver district since Sunday, a blast damaged the property of the British Columbia Electric Railway in the eastern part of the city last night. It occurred in the Grandview district, not far from other blasts.

A preliminary police report said several ties were damaged a short section of the British Columbia Electric Railway Company's Kingsway Lake interurban line to New Westminster. Company officials, however, said they were advised that the line was intact, although several rails were damaged.

The police report said that in addition to breaking the line, the blast "knocked down some wire," blew a fuse, and that the force of the explosion threw one tie into the ground. About eight feet of rail were raised but cars were able to proceed slowly.

Saw Person Running

A resident told the police he heard the blast and rushed to the track which runs through a section of bushland at that point. He said he saw a person northward with a flashlight" running down a nearby street but the light went out and the person disappeared.

The large power substation operated by the B.C.E.R. is within a few hundred yards of the place where the explosion occurred.

The first blast Sunday night wrecked a bridge and a shed used garage. The second ripped open a culvert. The third damaged a Canadian National Railways tracks and the third was a small blast which did practically no damage at an unused brass foundry.

Yesterday Chief Constable W. W. Foster, told itterviewers he believed the first three blasts were the work of "some mentally deranged person who likes to hear the bang." He did not think they were "acts of wanton destruction."

Police Court

Joseph Chajkowski, Point Anne, appeared before Magistrate J. F. Ponton, K.C., in County Police Court charged with assaulting one Jessie Jean Bryan, Point Anne, Bertha Smith, Francis Shaughnessy, Evelyn Fleming, Dorothy McCue Murphy, and Marjorie Pascoe. Also in consideration of their fine showing the following group were selected to form the Hastings County group in the Canadian National Exhibition Competition and demonstration. Margaret Pigden, Grace Robinson, Jean Strebe and Helen Lane.

Honorary Certificates Presented

The outcome of the day was carried on under the direction of Miss Great Pollard, Queen's University Home Economics for the Women's Institute Branch for the Ontario Department of Agriculture and fine examples of the work taken in the project were displayed by girls from the following clubs —Latta, Melrose, Wallbridge, Tamworth, Deseronto and Madoc. During the afternoon, Honour certificates were presented to Misses Doris Pigden, Margaret Pigden, Florence Walker and June Strebe. These certificates signify the completion of studies and works in not less than six projects, and where further study or achievement were presented in the form of diplomas signifying completion of two or more projects.

Part of the afternoon was set aside for the planning of work for the season of 1939-40 and the prospective title of "Hospitality" was selected as county project for the coming season.

Hastings County girls have made excellent progress in the various projects undertaken in the past and under the guidance of capable leaders they are given the opportunity to broaden the knowledge in home building. All classes in such are considered a great help to those who avail themselves of the chance to take the work.

Trophy to Compete at Peterborough

Selected to represent Hastings County in the Inter-County demonstration and competition to be held in Peterboro were the following young ladies of Melrose Club: Misses Jean Bryan, Bertha Smith, Bertha Smith, Francis Shaughnessy, Evelyn Fleming, Dorothy McCue Murphy, and Marjorie Pascoe. BITTEN TWICE BY SQUIRREL

As she walked in the garden of her home in the unpeopled territory, Miss B. Wallace was bitten twice by an inquisitive squirrel which inflicted such deep wounds that medical attention was required. The little animal had evidently dropped on her shoulder from the limb of a tree and in the excitement, which followed the resident's attempt to brush it off, sank its teeth deeply into her shoulder.

Unspeakably Vulgar

By VIC VARDMAN

Mrs. Evangaline Brendlinger was in a highly wrought-up mood.

That is to say she was mad, angry, distressed, upset.

"Think of it!" she wailed. "Just think of my poor little lambkins being out in this dreadful wilderness alone with that unspeakably vulgar person! What's his name? Lindsay? Oh, yes, Tom Lindsay. How common!"

Mark Kenyon, owner of the Circle B. dude ranch, where Mrs. Brendlinger and her "lambkins" were making a brief stop on their tour of the country, made the only civil answer that he could think of.

"The storm," he said, "won't last long, ma'am. It's one of them freak Californian cloudbursts that get over with in no time, besides," he added, trying hard to keep his voice above the level of common courtesy, "Tom Lindsay's O.K."

Mrs. Brendlinger shuddered again nevertheless.

"But, even an hour with such an unspeakably vulgar person! Why, they've probably had to take refuge somewhere in a deserted cabin. And all alone."

Mark felt an insistent urge to upset Mrs. Brendlinger's applecart, so to speak.

"That unspeakably vulgar person," he said quietly, "besides being an all-round square-shooter, happens to be worth a million dollars!"

Mrs. Brendlinger gave a little start.

"A million dollars!" she declared incredulously. "Him? Mr. Lindsay?"

"Oh," said Mark. "They spudded in on a tract Tom owns last week and struck it."

Mrs. Brendlinger demonstrated how completely possible it is for a person to change her facial expression, feelings, manner and tone of voice all in a single breath.

She smiled. She cooed.

She even tried to act gracious and apologetic toward Mark, in a blundering sort of way.

And Mark snorted with disgust, silent satisfaction, and turned on his heel.

Meanwhile, in a little shack on the side of a distant mountain, Mary Bridinger's "lambkins" whose name was Anita, was making fair progress with the "unspeakably vulgar" Tom Lindsay.

Three hours before, Anita had learned all about Tom's oil well. She hadn't told her mother, but had accepted Mr. Lindsay's invitation to ride with him into the hills.

Her plan was to hook Tom for a sizable amount, even marry him, temporarily, if need be, and then fairly take mamma's breath away with the news.

She was making progress, too.

For the rain had stopped, and Tom hadn't suggested that they start along home.

This was a good sign.

He had become too deeply engrossed in her to notice the weather.

Anita tapped a cigarette on her thumbnail and Tom leaned forward with a match.

For an instant their faces were very close together, and Anita took advantage of the moment to smile bewitchingly and look at him from beneath drooping lids.

More than one young man she had thus tantalized to a point of eagerness in that manner.

Tor grinned his faint embarrassment, and sat back.

"You know," he said, "you're a great girl, Miss Brendlinger, I—"

"Now, Tom," Anita interrupted in mock admonition, "all my friends call me Nita. Or Anita, call me Nita. And that's what I want you to call me."

"Okay!" said Tom, and grinned boyishly, "I like that, Nita."

"I'm glad you do, my dear."

She leaned toward him, and Tom, for some reason, was speechless.

"And now," she went on, "tell me all about the oil well, Tom. I'm just dying to hear."

"Shucks," said Tom, there isn't much to tell. They just spudded in and were lucky enough to strike it, that's all."

"But is it really worth a million dollars?" Anita wanted to know, her eyes gleaming.

Tom nodded and scratched his head.

"Guess it is." he admitted. "Doesn't seem possible, does it?"

"Oh, Tom, I thing that's grand! Simply grand!" Anita crushed out her cigarette and moved closer. "Whatever are you going to do with all that money?"

"Well," said Tom, "I was going to ask you that! Is—it's kind of hard to say."

Anita caught her breath.

She hadn't thought it quite so soon, hadn't dared hope. But since it was here—well, wouldn't mamma be just too amazed.

"Say it, Tom." She leaned over until her mouth was within a bare three inches of his, and her eyes were deep, limpid pools of light. "Say it, Tom," she repeated barely breathing the words.

Tom took a hold on himself and a serious expression came into his face.

"Well, it's like this, Miss Brendlinger, I—I didn't think you were such a perfectly swell girl I wouldn't ask you. Miss Nita, can you wouldn't mind. You see, ever since the gusher came in, Rose has been planning a trip to New York. But never having been there and all, and never before having enough money to buy all the clothes she wanted, she thought that maybe you, being in society and rich and all, might up there and, as an agent in where to go to buy clothes. The smart shops. I think she said. You'd know all sorts of things. Well, um, and she was sure—"

"Rose!" said Anita, when her speechless apparatus got into working order once more.

"And just who is Rose, may I ask?"

"Rose?" said Tom, surprised. "Why she's—but shucks, you never did meet my wife, did you? We was married a month ago. Gosh, you'd like her, Miss Brendlinger. Tell you what, I'll bring her up to the ranch tonight. She thinks you're swell, and she'll probably ask you all sorts of questions."

But Anita was suddenly on her feet, and the way she looked down at him made Tom wonder if he'd said something wrong. It came to him all in a flash that he had no right to ask such a favor, even for Rose.

No, sir, he was still a cowhand working at $60 a month.

That oil gusher has gone to his head.

He was taking too much for granted, just as he'd heard and read about other people doing when they came into money. Acting as though money made a difference. Gosh, he should have known better. Here she'd been nice to him, and he'd just taken too much for granted. He didn't blame her for being mad at him. Ought to have his head punched.

He stood up, flushed with guilt and shame, trying to mumble an apology.

"Listen, Miss Brnd—Nita. I'm mighty sorry I shoulda known better. I—"

"Don't you dare call me 'Nita! Don't dare even speak my name, you unspeakably vulgar person!"

And with this Anita turned on her heel and flung out of the cabin.

By the time Tom reached the door she was already mounted and headed down the trail.

And at the rate she was going he knew there was no need to follow.

Saddened, he turned toward his on mount and clumbed into the saddle.

Idiot, he thought.

Ignorant fool! His thoughts were dark as he jogged back toward the ranch. He rode straight to his cabin and dismounted. Rose came out to greet him and sight of her cheered him immensely.

He swept her into his arms and they kissed.

"Oh, Tom, I wish I hadn't asked you to do it, I just saw Miss Brendlinger and she's terribly mad. They are leaving tonight, though Mark says he's glad of it. Anyway, I decided it would be a lot more fun finding the shops, ourselves. Spending our own money."

Tom grinned.

"You bet!" he said. "Spending our own money." And then, all in a flash, a frown came in his face. He thought of Anita and repeated half to himself: "Yes, spending our own money—ourselves."

COUNTRY FARMERS STANDING GUARD TO ASSIST POLICE

Vast Expanse of Swamp Surrounded in Effort to Capture Wanted Man

THREE CAPTURED

Walkerton, Ont., July 5—(CP)—Bruce County farmers stood guard today over a vast expanse of swamp awaiting the appearance of the last member of a gang of four alleged automobile thieves still uncaptured.

Fifty farmers, aroused early yesterday by a wild police chase down a country road, surrounded the swamp and watched for a man said by Provincial Police to be Stephen Sietz, 18, brother of one of the three arrested men. All four are from Toronto.

Earl Hopper, 21, and Joe Sietz, 19, were captured by farmers yesterday after during a rain of police bullets and swimming the Saugeen River. Jack Stuart, 20, was arrested in the wreckage of one of the two cars allegedly stolen by the quartet in Toronto and Riverton, a village 20 miles west of here near Lake Huron.

Brought to the county jail here, the three were charged with breaking and entering and theft of an automobile. Two other warrants charging them with theft of Toronto cars were sworn out in Toronto.

Came From Riverton

Walkerton was in the midst of an all-night search and Provincial Constables Ott McLevis and Robert France were busy keeping the celebration under control when word came yesterday that four men in two stolen cars were coming here from Riverton, where one of the machines and a quantity of tires had been stolen from a garage.

The road from Riverton was blocked by a police car, but when the occupants of the stolen machines saw it they swung down a side road and headed directly into Walkerton. Constable France fired his revolver twice after the fleeing machines and Constable McLevis swung the police car down the road in pursuit.

Chased Through Town

Through the crowded town the chase led and out into the country again to the fifth side road of Brant Township. There France opened up with his revolver, riddling the back of one of the stolen cars and piercing the back window with one shot.

At the blind end of the road the first machine piled into a fence and the other rammed up against it. All but Stuart leaped out and made for the fields. The officers pulled Stuart from the wreckage and arrested him.

France and Hopper and Joe Sietz tried to steal a car from a neighboring farm, while Stephen Sietz ran into the swamp. Here farmers chased Hopper and Joe Sietz off the land and down to the Saugeen, where the pair took off in their heavy rubber boots and swam across the river.

Held For Police

Weighted down by their soaking clothing, Hopper and Sietz were unable to escape a posse that met them coming around a bend in the river. The farmers held them until police arrived.

France had to leave the pursuit to attend to police duties in connection with old home week, but McLevis directed the farmers who gathered to search for the single fugitive.

"We've got every farmer in the district out looking for him," France said. "This is the best part of the province to work in as far as people are concerned. They all cooperate. All you have to do is tell one and they all come out."

TORONTO'S ARGOS

The Argos did what they were supposed to do but they were not expected to have so much difficulty. A strong wind, blowing at a slight angle, up the 1-0-35-mile course gave them more trouble than the less exposed Thames crew.

Nevertheless their time of seven minutes, 46 seconds was not as bad as that of their opponents of tomorrow, the Sydney, Australia eight who just managed to squeeze out a three-foot win over Klingston in 7:36 under better conditions.

Record for the course is 6:44 established in 1934 by Leander.

Race Close All The Way

The race was close all the way but the Thames crew, striking faster at the start, took a half-length lead in the first minute. Argos drew level at the end of the half mile, and a moment later passed their rivals and from there on maintained their advantage.

"Naturally I am pleased with the boys but, given better conditions, I know they could do much better," Coach Ted Punchard said. "I am confident we can take the Aussies tomorrow."

One mighty gust lifted the Argo bow in the path of the Thames shell but cox Jack Donnelly recovered in time to prevent damage or protest.

"That was the roughest ride I ever had anywhere at anything," Donnelly said "Half way down the wind pushed our bow over towards the Thames boat and I had a heck of a time correcting our course."

In the other semi-final Harvard University, which won easily, 7:32 from the London Rowing Club, will meet Jesus College, Cambridge, victors over Leander, 7:28.

Burk Wins Another.

Joe Burk, unorthodox sculler from Philadelphia's Penn Athletic Club, polished off another victim in defence of his Diamond Sculls title when with a phenomenally fast stroke he defeated L. D. Habbitts of the Barclay's Bank Rowing Club.

Burk, who turned back N. D. Mofatt of Toronto in his opening heat yesterday, was clocked in nine minutes 20 seconds to the 1 5-16 mile as he finished five lengths in front of Habbitts.

Tabor Academy of Marion, Mass. scored its second straight victory in the Thames Challenge Cup, defeating Twickenham by two lengths in 7:46.

DEATH TOLL

Mountaineers, their wives, children and children's children went to bed Tuesday night—as they have done for generations — unmindful of the impending treachery of streams that ran past their door, merely trickles at times.

About midnight the rain came in torrents. A few hours later walls of water estimated by some to reach 20 feet in height moved down upon the sleeping communities.

There was not the slightest warning of the flood, survivors said. When it came it sounded like thunder. It swept over houses, sweeping humans, livestock and automobiles alike. People trapped in their homes didn't have a chance of escaping the onrush of the water.

Watch For Looting

Armed deputies and state police cast a watchful eye on the area because Mayor Edward Kelly of Flemingsburg, 26 miles to the north, after a trip to Morehead said "some looting already has been going on."

At Jackson, county seat of Breathitt, W. H. Peifrey, hill country shopkeeper, told how he watched his store and home swallowed by a 20-foot wall of water. His son and daughter lived with him along with their year-old son. When the house washed from its foundations his son took the baby in his arms and tried to swim to safety. Driftwood knocked the baby from him and has not been found. The father and mother made their way to safety.

MADE ROYAL VISIT PROFITABLE.

It was a rare stroke of luck for Ted Underhill, sophomore at the University of British Columbia, when the procession of the King and Queen in Vancouver was routed past his home. With his camera Ted secured a picture—like thousands of other Canadians—of their Majesties passed by, but no ordinary snap was his. Less than a month after the big event Ted had sold more than 20,000 copies of it, made about $500, and turned the Underhill homestead upside down making room for his developing and dying processes. The lucky young man is shown ABOVE as he put the picture he secured, which has what the photographer says is possibly a special smile from the King in it to distinguish it from many others.

ONCE RELIGIOUS, NOW WARLIKE

Until this year the picturesque and beautiful Feast of Corpus Domini in Gennano, Italy, was devoted exclusively to religious subjects. Huge carpets of flowers, each worked into a picture of some sacred scene or object, blanketed the streets. This year, for the first time, the Rome-Berlin axis was glorified in the Gennano festival as shown here. The floral scene depicts two mounted warriors one with swastika on his shield, the other Italy holding a flaming torch between them. The title at the bottom of the design reads (translated) "the people . . . one flame."

H. DUCE FROM A CAMERA ANGLE

Proud of the fact that he is an expert pilot, Italy's dictator never passes up an opportunity for flying when making hurried trips to various parts of Italy and this unusual camera study of Il Duce shows him at the controls of one of the new planes he used during a recent journey.

CROP PROSPECTS IN WEST CANADA NEVER BETTER

Grasshopper Damage Has Been Stemmed by Generous Rains

WHEAT IN SHOT BLADE

Winnipeg, July 5—(CP)— Bright new crop prospects continued to cheer Western Canada farmers today as precipitation figures remained well above normal throughout the prairie grain belt.

Despite a less than normal rainfall during the past week, total moisture available to the thriving grain crop remained 16 per cent above average. Conditions at the same time last year were only 86 per cent of normal.

While some damage has resulted from hail storms and slight traces of stem and leaf rust, crop conditions are reported as promising in most districts. Recent high temperatures have encouraged rapid development.

Many fields are now in shot blade and some early seeded grain is beginning to head out. Most wheat stands are late although the new crop is more than a week behind average growth in Alberta and Saskatchewan and three days late in Manitoba.

Apart from a few sections of central Manitoba, new crop growth in that province is reported satisfactory. Grasshopper damage has been stemmed by the continued generous rains.

Wheat is heading out in practically all parts of Saskatchewan. Rye crops also are reported in excellent condition.

Hon. J. G. Taggart, Minister of Agriculture, predicted there would be no grasshopper menace in Saskatchewan next year if the present plentiful rains continue to send farmlands during the rest of July and in August.

Satisfactory headway is reported from Alberta although new crop growth has been retarded in parts by the persistent rains which have given some parts of the province sufficient moisture reserve to last two or three weeks.

In the Peace River District, wheat stands are more than 18 inches high. All crops are coming along well although some damage is being done by cutworms.

ANNOUNCEMENT EXPECTED SOON

Appointments to Long List of Vacancies Considered by Cabinet

Ottawa, July 6—(CP)—Selection of appointments to the long list of vacancies in the government services and commissionerships of the new public bodies authorized at the recent session of parliament is proceeding slowly but definite announcements are expected shortly.

A four hour cabinet council yesterday was devoted in part to work of organizing the Defence Purchasing Board of four members, and the central mortgage bank whose first officers will be officers of the Bank of Canada but for which three directors must be appointed.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King said the government was moving with care in selecting those who will be appointed to these and other high positions. Justice Minister Lapointe is handling the organization of the penitentiaries commission which will require three members, and which will replace the old system of administration by a superintendent.

No Mention of Election

The Prime Minister had no further information on the question of a general election this fall. He asked for comment on the announcement of Major W. D. Herridge, leader of the new Democracy Movement that he was willing to run federal candidates in the Prime Minister's riding, Prince Albert, if he could get united support of the C.C.F., Social Credit and Independent groups in the electorate.

"I think the electors of Prince Albert will know what is in their best interest," Mr. Mackenzie King said. "The electors decide who will be their candidates."

Although he had hoped to take a holiday following his return from the royal tour, Mr. Mackenzie King said that hope had not yet been realized.

"Supported by bombing and fighting airplanes," the communique continued, the Japanese-Manchurian forces again violated the border of the Mongolian peoples' republic and at dawn of July 3 launched an offensive, . . . attacking positions of Mongolian-Soviet troops east of the Khalka River and attempting to break through west of the river."

The communique said one Japanese infantry division and an infantry regiment, two tank regiments and six cavalry regiments, participated in the offensive.

The communique said 45 Japanese-Manchoukouan airplanes were shot down in the four days while Mongolian-Soviet forces lost nine. (Japanese dispatches yesterday and today said 65 Soviet planes were shot down in two days and 277 had been downed since May 20.).

NEW EFFORT MADE TO BRING RUSSIA INTO BLOC

Three Critically Injured Near Chapman's Corners

Headon Collision Drives Motors Back into Seats

Three Buffalo Residents Proceeding to Belleville Meet Headon With Car Going to Tweed on Top of Knoll

CANADIAN NOT HURT

Rushed to Belleville Hospital Where Physicians Diagnosed Internal Injuries as Serious — Two May Not Recover.

Three Buffalo residents, Charles H. Holt, 68 Otis Place, Frank Lamm, 160 Best street and Charles Steitenbeck, 194 Dodge street, were critically injured in the final two miles not being expected to recover when the car which was driven by Holt and was allegedly travelling on the wrong side of the road crashed head on into a car driven by Ralph Hollefriend, representative of the Goodrich Oil Company and resident of this city on the brow of a hill directly in front of the home of Harry Foster, three miles south of Tweed shortly after 11:30 o'clock this morning. The injured men were attended at the scene by Doctors M. O. Dales and R. J. Gordon of Tweed and rushed to Belleville General Hospital in ambulances completed by Martin and Son and the Bellamarsh Funeral Company, where they were attended by Dr. C. S. Cronk, W. Harvey, Austin Walters and Ralph Dafoe. The accident was investigated by Provincial Constables Smith and Stacks, Traffic Officer Irvine and Chief Constable Hayes.

Dr. Cronk announced this afternoon that Mr. Lamm was in a critical condition and it was possible he would not recover. "He had severe lacerations on face and hands, was internally injured and unconscious from concussion," said Dr. Cronk. "Mr. Holt is also in a serious condition from lacerations and internal injuries as well as concussion. He also has a fractured leg and arm. Mr. Steitenbeck, riding in the rear seat is badly injured but his condition is not as serious as the other two.

It is understood that Charles Holt was the driver of the American car and he was proceeding south when Mr. Hollefriend was riding alone and driving towards Tweed. The cars collided headon on the top of the hill and the motors of the two vehicles were forced back a distance and driven through the instrument board into the front seats.

Hollefriend's car door was ripped off and he fortunately was thrown clear of the wreckage and although bruised and badly shaken up was not seriously injured and was able to proceed to Belleville after the accident.

The road where the accident happened is not a dangerous place on the highway but there is a very steep hill in front of Foster's barn and drivers of cars coming from opposite directions cannot see each other until directly on top of the hill. The police investigating the accident believe that the American vehicle was on the wrong side of the road when the driver approached the top of the hill and was unable to pull over to his own side before the headon collision happened. The cars were badly damaged and taken by tow trucks to Tweed garages.

3 CASES DYNAMITE REPORTED STOLEN AT THOMASBURG

78 Sticks Taken from Magazine Near Quarry, Provincial Police Reveal

NO SOUNDS HEARD

Three cases of dynamite, containing 78 sticks of that powerful explosive, were stolen from the powder magazine of the Stringer and Beatty Construction Company, operating in a stone quarry near Thomasburg last night, Provincial Police revealed today.

The dynamite was being used to blast stone from the quarry, which was being crushed for highway construction work. The dynamite was removed from the magazine sometime between darkness and daylight last night.

Entrance was gained into the magazine by means of breaking the padlock and hasp on the door leading into the powder house, which is situated about 1,000 feet from the place where the company is crushing the stone.

No Noises Heard

Provincial Constables W. E. Smith and A. A. Starke investigated and were told by both Mr. Beatty and Mr. Stringer that no unnecessary noises or disturbances were heard during the night.

"We employ a capable night watchman, but as the powder magazine is located at least one and one quarter of a mile from the scene of our crushing activities it would be quite easy for robbers to break into the powder magazine while the watchman was engaged at the opposite end of the company premises," Mr. Stringer told Constable Smith today.

All powder magazines must be erected at a sufficient distance from any crusher or machinery that might cause a temporary explosion of high explosives, such as dynamite, according to law.

With the repeated stealing of dynamite being prevalent throughout the province, there is much concern being held over the 78 sticks of dynamite which were stolen at Thomasburg last night.

New Direction Finder Will Help Ships Get Bearings With Little Interference

Ottawa, July 7.—(CP)—Ships at sea will be better able to get their bearings, with a minimum of interference from electrical storms and overlapping radio stations, when commercial use of a new type of a new direction finder developed and being perfected at the National Research Council Laboratories here.

The new direction finder has the advantage of being instantaneous and depending on the eye rather than the ear for precise results. It utilizes a cathode ray tube such as has become necessary in television reception.

At present most ships depend for direction on bearings given them by two land radio stations. The navigator has to allow in his operate on the principle of the loop aerial when pointing toward the sending station. From two such stations he can find his ship's sea can calculate its position.

Unfortunately, interference from other stations provide difficulties which may destroy useful reception under this system.

Created by Flow of Electrons

The new cathode ray direction finder visually indicates the exact direction of the sending land station by a streak of florescent light on the face of the tube cathode ray tube or "bulb." That finger of light is created by a flow of electrons against the crystalline end face which makes a fluorescent screen of the inside surface of the bulb. Its position on the bulb "face" changes as the position of the sending station changes.

Around the tube face is a dial calibrated into 360 degrees, like a compass, which enables the operator to take the bearings of a few seconds.

In an electrical storm, this finger of light becomes extremely momentarily funny as static is discharged. If two or three stations are overlapping, they will usually be registered as two or three separate and distinct light fingers on the dial not interfering with each other as in radio receivers.

Started in 1924

Work on this form of the cathode ray tube was started in 1924 by Major-General A. G. L. McNaughton, now president of the Research Council, and Col. Arthur Bleeke now chief of the Department of National Defence. They took cut patents two years later.

The Research Council started work two years ago on using the cathode ray tube as a direction finder for marine work and consequently Dr. E. T. Henderson, H. R. Smyth and J. W. Bell, its chief engineers, applied to aviation is being studied.

Doukhobor Families Are Evicted From Communal Home

Nelson, B.C., July 7—(CP) — Three Doukhobor families were evicted from their communal home at nearby Winlaw yesterday when province's deputies served foreclosure writs.

An abortive nude demonstration was staged but the demonstrators rescinded themselves when their protest failed to check the proceedings.

The writ was one of those issued recently after the Sun Life Assurance Company had been granted foreclosure proceedings against mortgaged Doukhobor lands. The mortgage amounts to $250,000 and is held against the assets at least one quarter of a mile from the scene of our crushing activities it would be quite easy for robbers to break into the powder magazine while the watchman was engaged at the opposite end of the company premises," Mr. Stringer told Constable Smith today.

PREVENT DISEASE IN STRICKEN AREA

Identified Flood Victims in Kentucky Buried as Soon as Possible

Jackson, Ky., July 7—(AP)— Health authorities today hastened disease-prevention work in eastern Kentucky mountain sections where at least 48 persons perished in sudden death" floods early Wednesday.

With 48 bodies recovered in Breathitt, Rowan, Lewis and Lee Counties, the search continued in the mud and silt for other bodies as 47 persons still were reported missing. By order of health officers, identified bodies were buried as quickly as possible.

Sheriff Walter Deaton estimated 75 persons drowned in Breathitt County's Frozen Creek Valley. Searchers expressed the opinion bodies of some of the victims might never be found.

Mayor Warren Lapplin of Morehead, Rowan County, estimated the property loss in that college town alone would approximate $1,000,000 and Dean Thomas Jones of the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture and reports from his field agents indicated damage to crops and farms in that county would be about $500,000.

Heavy Fighting Rages Along Mongolian Border, Mongol Guns Accurate

By RUSSELL BRINES
Associated Press Foreign Staff

With Japanese troops at the Mongolian frontier, July 7—(AP)—Severe fighting apparently had halted Japanese - Manchukuo troops today in a drive against the centre of the Soviet-Mongol line, but the Japanese pushed both Mongol flanks back across the Khalka River.

Heavy fighting was in its fourth day and the border hostilities had potentialities of becoming worse. The Nomonhan region (southeast of Lake Bor near the Khalka River) is the centre has become a no man's land, where troops face each other 50 yards apart.

Region Mosquito Infested

I reached the front after a hard 30-hour automobile drive without food. The hot, mosquito-infested plain had become a marsh-land after a sudden cloudburst. Continuous streams of Japanese troops were travelling to the front along routed roads.

Both sides are well equipped with light artillery and tanks. Both have plenty of manpower, but communication lines from the bases across the sticky plains are long.

I was driven to cover by accurate Mongol fire while watching a steady artillery duel near the confluence of the Khalka and Khorsiley (Holsiein) Rivers. Approximately 1 1-4 miles away a continuous clatter of machine-guns indicated the front lines around Nomohan, with the Mongols apparently holding Nora Height. This meant they had retreated some six miles of the 12 they previously had held.

Foothold on Height

The Japanese obtained a foothold on Baimogol Height, bordering the Kholsten River. They had a number of trucks at the base of the low, sweeping hill. The Mongols apparently were behind the crest.

The front stretches some nine miles along the Khalka, through an area to which both sides claim title.

I listened to shells screaming overhead while watching four Japanese planes bomb the far side of Baimogol without retaliatory anti-aircraft fire, or aerial action by the Mongols.

(A Japanese dispatch to Tokyo today said that in a new aerial encounter Japanese had downed 24 planes over Lake Bor and lost one. Previously they had reported shooting down 65 in two days.)

Spotting this correspondent's car, the Mongol artillery within five minutes dropped six shells near it, but landing only 30 yards away.

Storm of War Rolling Over China Showing No Signs of Breaking

By CLARK LEE
Associated Press Foreign Staff

Shanghai, July 7—(AP)— The storm of war rolling over China reached its second anniversary today with signs of intensification.

China, though terribly punished, fights on.

Her government has been driven more than 1,000 miles from the coast. A third of her population and area, including her richest provinces, hand most of her modern machinery of industry, commerce and communications, are in Japanese hands—some $80,000 square miles with 170,000,000 inhabitants. Her losses cannot be counted by the millions. Japanese place the Chinese military dead at 1,000,000. Neutrals put the total Chinese killed at 2,000,000, including civilian victims of air raids. More than $5,000,000 Chinese have been driven from their homes or reduced to destitution.

Figures on the money cost to China are not available, but it is known that nearly all the available treasure of an already poor country has been thrown into the struggle.

With the fall of Hankow last Oct. 25, at the end of nearly 16 months of war, the phase of major army operations—an almost immobile stage of Japanese victories—ended.

Test of Endurance

Now it is a test of endurance and nerves, of China's will to resist against Japan's ability to withstand the constant drain of money and men and the nervous strain of pursuing final victory.

Clearest evidence for either side of current unlikely under present conditions.

China cannot now muster the offensive strength to drive Japan off the land she has taken. Without greatly increasing her present army of some 1,250,000 men, Japan cannot reduce China further into China's interior to crush General Chiang Kai-Shek's forces.

In contrast to her military triumphs, Japan's political maneuvers in China have been conspicuously unsuccessful.

Japan needs above everything else today a strong Chinese government under her control, and she is still seeking, somewhat despairingly for a Chinese statesman or general of sufficient stature to head such a regime.

British Attitude Clarified Over Danzig Problem

British View is Explained as to What Would Happen if Germans Accomplish an 'Inside Coup' in the Free City

PREMIER DELAYS SPEECH

Any German - Supported Change in Status of Danzig Would Doubtless be Considered Act of Aggression by Germany— Poles Must be Satisfied

By J. F. SANDERSON

London, July 7—(CP Cable) Great Britain and France today made another effort to bring Russia into the European peace bloc. Fresh instructions were sent to Sir William Seeds and Paul-Emile Naggiar, the British and French Ambassadors in Moscow, which the two western governments hoped would break the deadlock.

Meanwhile Prime Minister Chamberlain postponed until Monday his parliamentary statement on the Anglo-Polish guarantee, the reason being that Count Edward Raczynski, Polish Ambassador to Great Britain, is returning to London over the week-end after consultation

Eden Not Wanted In British Cabinet By London Paper

London, July 7—(CP)— Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express (Independent) said today that Anthony Eden, former Foreign Secretary, the man who "created the Italian menace" was not wanted back in the cabinet.

"No, Eden, we do not want you back again," the newspaper said.

It added: "Not in a thousand times no!"

The newspaper said there was something to be said for the men "who warned us of the German danger" and not only meaning Winston Churchill, but it saw nothing in favor of the man who created the Italian menace."

TEACH DEMOCRACY IN HOME, SCHOOL AND IN CHURCH

Col. George H. Drew Speaks at St. Henry's Church at Massanabora

WORLD PHILOSOPHIES

Col. George Drew, spoke in St. Henry's Church at Quesnelboro last evening before a large and appreciative audience. His speech was as follows:

"Humanity stands today at one of the greatest crossroads of all history. A hundred years from now people will look back on the present decade as a period during which the life of mankind was shaped and moulded in a pattern to be followed for many decades, perhaps even centuries. They will disclose mighty struggle of two conflicting philosophies between which there could be no compromise. They will recount the steps by which most of the democracies as well as the most backward nations adopted the political doctrine of collectivism. They will tell their children of the reawakening of those nations which sought to preserve religious and personal freedom under the democratic form of government. They will describe the increasing international tension which broke in the world war 1939 and will remember the lessons of the ultimate victory of one of those theories of life during the following decade. All this will be told in history. For us, however, those mighty events still lie ahead and what the future will be depends on the way we live. There is still time for all of us to play some part in shaping that pattern so that life may be worthwhile today for ourselves but for all mankind.

"If we are to do our share we must know what the issues really are. The words Democracy, Communism, Fascism and Fascism mean little to themselves unless we understand what the effect of each of these forms of government really is on those who are governed.

Dr. Melnicis, who was fishing nearby, waded to the island and worked on the two small girls until he brought them around. Then he went back to his fishing.

2ND ANNIVERSARY OF CHINESE WAR COMMEMORATED

Perplexity and Resignation Run Through Japanese Services

GREAT SOLEMNITY

By RELMAN MORIN
Associated Press Foreign Staff

Tokyo, July 7—(AP)—An undercurrent of pain, perplexity and resignation ran through quiet services with which Japan commemorated today the second anniversary of the war with China.

The traditional moment of silence was observed at noon. Solemn services were conducted at all national shrines and Emperor Hirohito and Empress Nagako offered prayers at palace shrines for the souls of the dead in the conflict.

An atmosphere of great solemnity was heavy over the capital. The attitude of the people is one of "it cannot be helped." It is not mean approval. Many seek eagerly some sign of peace, finding rumors of peace moves, trying to forget higher taxes, increased prices, restrictions on manners and customs, the death of sons, fathers, husbands.

THEFT CHARGE BRINGS 6 MONTHS

Those Implicated in Theft of Junk from City Dealer Sentenced

"If any other citizen or company left their goods and property exposed and free from protection they would get little thanks for consideration. There is no reason why the junk dealers of this city should use our police department for the protection of their junk.

"Individuals must protect their property to a certain degree, why do they look to the police to protect goods open and a practical invitation to petty thieves?" asked Allan Thurlow, K.C., counsel for the defence of Samuel Way, who appeared before Magistrate C. H. Butler, along with three others, charged with the theft of scrap iron and metal from the C. G. R. and Company premises.

Prior to the appearance of Way, Horace Bowler, Belleville, pleaded guilty to the above charge and was given a six months' suspended sentence, after he had agreed to break up his junk dealing business. Herman Cass, Thurlow, was also given a one year's suspended sentence on a charge of receiving stolen goods, Lucas allegedly being an accessory after the fact of the scrap metal.

A charge of theft against Thomas Graves was dismissed when counsel for Canfield Graves was not implicated.

Pleads Not Guilty

Sam Way appeared charged he pleaded not guilty through Mr. Sprague. Crown Attorney R. L. Dunbar, K.C., and Horace Bowler, the alleged accomplice of Way's, as the main Crown's first witness. However, Mr. Sprague interrupted and stated his client's intention to plead guilty to that of guilty.

"Apparently Way does not want to incriminate his comrades, and you are very fortunate," stated Mr. Sprague to the court in connection towards Bowler. Later the Crown attorney asked for a maximum reformatory sentence of two years less one day. It was at this point, Mr. Sprague rose in objection and directed his final argument against the junk dealers, who he alleged, do not protect their personal property and belongings, but leave them easily accessible to the ravages of petty thieves.

At this point the court recessed for a short period at the request of Mr. Donnan. It would like to talk to Mr. Sprague and his client. Perhaps Way could assist the police in clearing up certain matters pertaining to these robberies," stated Mr. Donnan.

Upon the resumption of court, Way pleaded guilty and was sentenced to not less than six nor more than nine months in the Ontario Reformatory.

Famous Painting of 17th Century Memorial to Late H. E. Fairfield

Dr. W. H. Gutsell and Mrs. Gutsell (Sister of the Late Mr. Fairfield) Place Memorial in St. John's Anglican Church at Bath, Which is Link With Loyalists

St. John's Anglican Church at Bath, the picturesque little edifice in a community that forms a significant link with Canada's past in the days when United Empire Loyalists found homes and hope in a new land, today contains one of the masterpieces of the early seventeenth century, placed there as a memorial, to the story of God, and to the memory of Harrison Eyre Fairfield, by Dr. and Mrs. W. H. Gutsell, this sister and brother-in-law.

In tribute to the memory of a great and devoted friend, Mr. Fairfield who passed away March 30th, 1939, Dr. Gutsell made the presentation to the church of a painting of St. Peter by Jhuseppe de Ribera, a leading painter of the Spanish school who was born in Spain in 1588 and who died about 1656 after contributing important canvases to the world of art. Known as "El Spagnoleto" and "Lo Spagnolo," he later becoming court painter and master of the Knights of St. Luke at Rome. The Louvre contains one of his paintings while some fine examples of his work are in Dresden, Antwerp and Madrid galleries.

The Painting

Depicting St. Peter in a prayerful attitude, the painting, an oil on canvas about thirty six by forty three in size, is a fine character-istics of this master in its power-ful lines and rich coloring. One of the great colorists of Spain, Ribera is famed for the realism of his work, and the representation of St. Peter, hands clasped in prayer, gives the utmost depicted in its seal and intensity, is a wonderful example of light and shade in the chiaro-oscuro.

The background of the canvas is seen the cock and in the lower right hand, the keys, symbols of St. Peter. The detail of the cloak, and his high position as keeper of the keys of the Kingdom of Heaven. The painting has been one of the treasures of the Fairfield family, a fine collection of art treasures.

St. Peter, whose feast is observed June 29th, was also the Patron of Art and has been a subject of many famous artists. This particular painting was installed on St. Peter's Day in the church.

The Bath church was destroyed by fire about twenty five years ago but in 1933, as a memorial to the memorial window in memory of Harrison Eyre Fairfield, Loyalist, and United Empire Loyalist, was presented by his family. It is over the right of the church while the Ribera painting in memory of Harrison Eyre Fairfield, is placed behind the pulpit.

Receives Generous Appreciation

On Sunday the rector Rev. Mr. Walker referred to the splendid gift expressing the appreciation of the parish for the painting which he enhanced the beauty of the church's interior and spoke in high terms of the work of the late memorial's subject, the late H. E. Fairfield, and the generous gift he made by Bishop Lyons when he visits the parish.

Dr. and Mrs. Gutsell spend much of their time in Bath, residing in the Fairfield place, the historic home built one hundred and forty years ago by the ancestor of oldest two storey houses in Ontario. The oldest was built near Collins Bay in 1784 and was the Fairfield family. The district is steeped in United Empire Loyalist traditions and the beauty of the countryside and pleasant associations contribute to the art of gracious living.

Medal, Kept for Owner for Years, Is Returned to Soldier's Widow

Mr. Harry Day's Casual Mention of Name to Neighbor Brings Out Fact That Widow of Owner Still Survives

An old fashioned "armed" medal presented the hero of one of Sir Majesty Queen Victoria's African campaigns kept for over thirty years by Mr. Harry Day, Everett Street, who originally purchased it in a Belleville second hand store in the hope of finding and returning the medal to its owner, has recently been presented the wife of the now dead man who was in Stranger than a story of Poe, the incident was made all the more remarkable by the fact that a neighbor of Mr. Day's was closely related to the wife of the owner of the medal. Thumbing through a box of old coins recently Mr. Day rediscovered the medal, and through odd chance mentioned the name of the original owner which was inscribed on the medal's rim.

"I know that man," declared the neighbor. "At least the man's dead but I know his wife who is still alive."

Tears dimmed the eyes of the wife of the departed soldier, who by a presentation of old army papers and discharge certificate proved that her husband had been rightful owner of the decoration and was presented the cherished keepsake.

First Cow-Bell Sold in Many Years

"Mister, I don't know if we have one in stock, but I'll look," offered the obliging clerk in one of the city's hardware stores yesterday afternoon.

After considerable rummaging around in the dark recesses of the storehouse at the rear, the clerk reappeared bearing the wanted article. It was an old-fashioned cow bell whose glossy bronze had been dimmed with the slow passage of many years of disuse.

"I don't know when we've sold one of these bells," commented the clerk as he thumbed an old catalogue for prices of the bell.

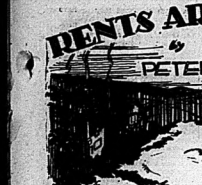
RENTS ARE LOW IN EDEN

by PETER BENEDICT



AGREEMENT OF SALE between Richard Poole & Joseph Green, recorded June 7, 1898.

Concerning field at upper end Hollys Layne, the hedge thereof between field and lane through out, together with ground within same hedge, namely, ten yards in width throughout said length of hedge, to pass above Richard Poole in consideration one hundred pounds to be paid to said Joseph Green.

Grazing rights or other over said ground to be shared equally betw. said parties.

(sig.) RICHARD POOLE
JOSEPH GREEN

"Now what on earth," said the vicar, "can have induced any man in his senses to pay one hundred guineas for the privilege of owning ten yards by two hundred of useless grass, from which he can't even eat, right, let alone the faculties, for keeping someone else's cattle, and in which he couldn't possibly pass his own for fear of straying them into another man's property? He must have been mad."

"Or drunk," said the doctor.

"What's that, my dear?"

"Or drunk; they were noted for it. You know all about the Poole family, surely. The Grange was theirs once. It came to my husband's father through his mother, whose name was Emma Poole, and she was the only surviving child of Richard Poole, who was more than of an ordinary wild man to the valley. You must know the stories of some of his escapades. He did the maddest things. I daresay he was drunk as a lord when he signed this; in fact, I should say he must have been; but as there's no one to say it, the document is legally binding, isn't it?"

"I suppose so, Mrs. Court; that is, if the question ever arose."

"May I borrow this book, for a week or so?" asked Catherine, not too eagerly, for she was afraid yet to be too sure of her ground.

"Of course, my dear, as long as it of any service to you. I'm glad we were able to find it."

She took it away with her through the sunlight of mid-afternoon to the cottage, to read and there, pausing only to write a brief letter to Perry Dundonald, her mother in London, changed her dress and set out to catch the 3-30 train to Stanchester.

CHAPTER VII

"HAVE WE GOT A CASE?"

Mr. Massingham, so far from being the accepted idea of a famous solicitor, tall and blonde, and not very old, with the expressionless solemnity of a stage comedian; but Mr. Gordon Bell, tinted glasses, were bright and clever, and his mouth was that of a rat-trap for strength of a relentless kind. He sat hunched over the edge of his desk, and looked at Catherine Court.

She was sending at him in a chilly, calculating way, and there was an eagerness in her for which he was at a loss to account. She had a little diary and Joan Dunstan's letter in her hand.

"Well, what do you say? Have we got a case?" she asked.

"It could be," said Mr. Massingham gently, and continued to look at her as if he had never seen her before, but with a sudden lack of interest, too, as if in his way, "That's subject is hardly new, you know. Your nephew has been hot on the trail ever since the desecration began, but without, I admit, finding any scent. Probably enough he will have his upon something, if only we could find some independent link—a corroborative reference. This diary scrawl is all very well; you've a witness for what it's worth from and now you got it, which does away with all doubts of its authenticity as far as you are concerned—"

"You mean I didn't forge it" said Catherine, with a smile.

"No, much more important than that; I mean it hasn't been tampered with by your opponent trying to say you forged it. That's a formidable argument for you. But I wish we had some other outside mention of it."

"It wasn't, I think," she said, thoughtful frowning, "the sort of thing that Joan Dunstan with either party would be likely to brag about to other people."

"Since it proved one of them a rogue, and the other a fool. Quite! But the agreement is just written, and, unfortunately."

"Does that make it void?" asked Catherine, and her eyes were anxious, for that was the one point on which she had doubts.

"No, not necessarily; there are hundreds of agreements unwitnessed and still binding, provided the signatures are beyond doubt. Is there any chance of getting some more of Joseph Green?"

"Yes," she said, immensely relieved, "as much as you like. His account books, his family bible, and several other books with his name in them are where I got this in the vicar's library."

The light of battle began to gleam behind the tinted spectacles. He sat forward over the desk with a gusty sigh, as one who squares his shoulders to the task, and altogether unwelcome.

"Well, then had comforted marvellous much. The other man should be easy. The name Poole used to crop up fairly often in the Pullen's day, when your husband's father came in with the Court Brandon gossip. That's before my time, of course, but I remember hearing him talked about at home when I was quite a kid. His solicitors were a Stanchester firm, too, Corfield and Hart; they established largely of a couple of Irish brothers named O'Reilly now, but there's still a Hart, son of the former one, and an old man himself now. The business of the Pooles is wound up long ago, but I see no reason why they should grudge us a little help in establishing his signature."

"I know their office," said Catherine. She did know it, and very well, for they had handled the affairs of Lydon Strang. "I can approach them through a client of theirs."

"It would be helpful. If they come up to expectations; if, in short, they have any knowledge of hearing the affair so much mentioned—It can only be one generation back for Hart—well, I'll admit you've got a case, and I'll go so far as to say you've got a certain case, as far as it goes; but there are points to be considered before you plunge into it. It will be too late afterwards."

Catherine sat back and looked at him under the brim of her very smart hat, a hat which Adam Prowbert would have regarded with the distant admiration he had given to her in Court Brandon Council office days. "You're thinking that he can be bought down, and that it will be true."

"Partly that, which will cut down a jury's righteous indignation against him, of course; and partly that he will suspect that you are involved that a clever opponent will be able to quibble here and there like a dog worrying a bone. Perhaps doing much damage to your case in that the only thing the other can find a 'long way off. The fact that he didn't know he was going to say injury can't, of course, get him off; and in the end we'll get our damages; but another, different from your point of view, is it worth it."

"Yes," said Catherine, "well worth it. The case can't be too long for me. When it drags on, he can't keep in mind upon the work in hand against Lydon. In and out of court he will be worry him out of it after the first. Even he will get a court order to prevent him from building in the meantime?"

"On the disputed ground, yes."

"Not yet, then, please. Let him begin to build before we drop on him."

Said the solicitor, with a new respect in his tones and in his tinted eyes: "I believe you'd do anything to get that man out of your valley for ever, Mrs. Court."

"I would—anything." She smiled, composedly; with this savage rage at her heart she could afford to be as calm as she liked. So was I still mean to do, drive him away from the valley, and I could, but I could not rub what's still to be done, and I will.

"He's a millionaire twice over, and you're only planning to prick him with pins."

"Sometimes pin-pricks turn poisonous," said Catherine, and now if Adam Probert could have seen her, he would have been reminded still more strongly of Caterina Sforza, Catherine on the walls of Forli, with Cesar Borgia's army, his mercenaries, his condottier, and Leonardo's engines of war all gnawing into position for the assault, and she watching quietly from the ramparts with her shining eyes of hate and anger. She spoke; she sounded her actually fitted cost upon her elegant shoulders, and began to pull on gloves of the twentieth century; but it was still an intense and implacable Renaissance face with she turned smiling upon Massingham.

"Very well, then, I'll find a way of tacking Corfield and Hart; I'll make sure about Mrs. Dunstan's letters from Geoffrey; and I'll borrow some more signatures of Joseph Green. At present that's all we can do, isn't it? But, tell me, who can we get to take the case, if all these things turn out satisfactorily?"

"I advise Ronald Beresford, He's one of the coming men, and consequently out for fireworks, which I gather is what you want; and while he'll be quite alive to the possibilities of sentimentalizing your case—as a defenceless widow fighting a ruthless and unjust business man—forgive me, but the implication is obvious—I can promise you that he will be swept in his eyes extremely subtle way. I know his work."

"Very well, I leave that to you. But wait until you hear further from me before anything moments; I'll let you know the moment I'm sure of those three points."

And on that she left the office; but for some time Mr. Massingham sat just as she had left him, pondering with his chin in his palm.

"I wonder," he said to himself, with a little whistle, "what she's going to get the money from?"

Catherine was then in a taxi, on her way to Lydon Strang's house in its suburbs.

CHAPTER VIII

A POWERFUL ALLY

The butler who opened the door to her was new since she had last set foot in that house, with Geoffrey, for they had changed quarter months previously; so she did not wait when she said that Mr. Strang was not yet home but blanched him, and had herself driven into the centre of the town, to a cafe that she knew of in the Market Place and sat in a quarter, where, unless business kept him at his office, Lydon Strang would almost certainly be having tea at that hour.

He was a creature of method, and had habits by which you could have set a clock; and a strange friend she had to thought him, from their first meeting, for Geoffrey who was for all a tangle from every contact, and every responsibility, and acted upon impulse with the haphazardness of the Middle Ages.

She paid off her taxi at the entrance of Old Street, and walked up through the sunset's most brilliant moments into the narrow lanes which had been Stanchester before ever the new town was born; and she came at length to the leaning wall of an Elizabethan house, in which the little door of the cafe opened as mysteriously as if it led to the secret council quarters of a band of crooks, instead of the innocent activities of two sisters who made their living by 'doing' teas, and their reputation for them, and nowhere homemade cakes to be found in the town.

There was no music here, only a warm and secret quiet within and without, and that so well under, stood Lyddon's preference for it, that when the door shut, a door, many eyes discreetly upon her, the masculine appraising her eyes and hair, and the straight, proud way she carried her straight, proud head, as a woman whose presence needed no drums; the feminine speculating upon the tailor who had cut her coat, and the shoes which were such shoes could be bought, and the decision was made for her must have paid for them. For a moment a doubt assailed her, the first, as comprehensive as a thundershower. She doubted whether she would be there; she doubted her ability to ask of him any favour, in spite of his urgings; she doubted whether she had the strength or the right to go on with the suit. But then the decision was made for her. He rose from a table in the corner, in the angle of a window which showed the narrow end wall, and came swinging quickly

REFORESTATION

Those who have taken advantage of reforestation to replace the land cleared of trees generations ago will live to reap a fortune or will leave a heritage to those who follow which will be a blessing.

In primeval days this province was covered with growth of trees, maple, oak, beech, pine and many other woods. The pioneer removed the trees to secure ground for crops and one often wonders how a few generations of these folk did so with their axes. Trees served as a means of making potash in other times.

In modern days the stress has swung to the natural advantage of trees and their roots in the relation to climate and crops. Many persons have started reforestation. In some places there can be no reforestation because of trees cannot be grown, for the melting of the snow in springtimes long since past has carried away the soil which lacked the knotted roots to hold it together and resist erosion. Nothing can restore those hills again unless in great aeons of time during which the rocks may break up and gradually in the process of time become soil. But man will not and cannot wait for that time. So he reforests in some of many sections where he can reforest.

Windsor Star points to something to prove the advantage of trees in the time of storm. Trees, the paper says, will not prevent gales, but they can ameliorate the damage done. And it is noted that the areas hardest hit (in a recent storm in Southwestern Ontario) by the wind were those, generally speaking, with the fewest trees."

Windsor Star quotes the case of Southwestern Ontario where the land is cleared, and is fertile and practically all arable. This part is the most treeless in the province.

Trees help prevent the erosion of soil, preserve moisture, and act as windbreaks. This is their utilitarian value, and there is their natural beauty too.

Hallowell County ranks as the best wooded, with only 9.69 per cent cleared.

LIGHTNING

Local instances of lightning are well enough known around here but fortunately lightning fatalities have been rare. Some years ago two men lost their lives in a storm in Prince Edward in one of the most dramatic of storms.

Woodstock Sentinel Review tells the story of the mysterious behaviour of nature in lightning ravaging near London, Ont., where two men were harvesting hay. The Sentinel Review tells the story in these words:—

"The owner of the farm George Marren was on the load loading the hay and his neighbor from the city, Harry Beattie, a fireman who had come out to help him, was walking along beside the load guiding the horses. Beattie, in describing the event says he thinks he heard a sharp crack like the sound of a pistol. He saw a ball of fire about the size of a baseball, not moving quickly, between Maaren and the horses. He was on his feet unnerved. Then he saw other members of the Maaren family come running from the house and then he saw both horses falling slowly as if someone were laying them down. Then he noticed the hay on fire. When he tried to look for his friend on top of the load, he was told by the others that he was on the ground on the other side of the road. He had been hurled there by a stroke of lightning. He was dead. One of the horses also was dead.

"Dr. Harold Henderson, who examined the victim, described his injuries thus: 'The bolt of lightning made a hole near the left eye like a large-calibre bullet hole. It passed through his body blackening it and showing the burns of a flame. It evidently went out through the left foot, practically tearing away the heel.'

"This happened on a day when the sky was fairly clear and there was no rain on the field before or after the stroke. There was a black cloud on the horizon several miles away and a low, black cloud passed over the spot where the wagon was. The bolt evidently came from this. It emphasizes what has often been said of electrical storms, that the lightning is usually more deadly when the sky is only partially clouded."

RAISING GOOD LADS

A Negro mammy had a family of well behaved boys. One day her mistress asked:

"Sally, how do you raise your boys so well?"

"Ah'll tell you, missus," answered Sally. "Ah raises dem wid a barrel stave and Ah raise 'em frequently."

AND THE STARS KEPT FALLING, FALLING

And the stars kept falling, falling
Like leaves from a wind-bent tree,
The heavens churning, churning
Black as a driven sea,
While the moon kept calling, calling:
Stars come back to me.
Don't follow the reaper's hauling
Their scythes across the lea,
Their cowls are hiding faces
None but the dying see,
The dark ones, the marked ones.
The doomed ones, the lost ones.
But the stars kept falling, falling
Swift as the dying spent,
Exchanged their tortured breathing
For the breathlessness of death.

AND NOW THE SOAP BOX DERBY IS WITH US AGAIN—Sometimes called The Kiddie Kar Derby, as in Belleville, to distinguish it from lesser occasions of the kind. However, it is the Soap Box Derby in the final analysis, with the finals for the championship of the world held at Akron, Ohio, which has constructed a permanent and elaborate race course for the lads with the home-made racers, complete with concrete track, grand stands, dressing rooms, repair pits "everything." "Derby Day" is the name of this unique sport plant, and as many as 100,000 people have gathered to witness the championship finals. The Akron Beacon Journal is the power behind the Derby activities in that city, and a committee of newspaper men representing various publications in different sections, supervise details. Individual meets in the various cities are sponsored by a Belleville newspaper in that community. Behind it all is the Chevrolet Automobile organization, which has been closely identified with the Soap Box Derby from the beginning.

THE PURPOSE OF THE SOAP BOX Derby is to further the spirit of sportsmanship among the boys. Its basic value lies in teaching youth the joys of creative work; and the values of inventiveness.

The interest taken by the boys taking part and their keen attention to detail in the manufacture of their racing cars proves the value of the event and justifies all the work entailed by all concerned. The thousands who attend the home-town qualifying derbys and the many thousands who attend the finals in Akron, Ohio, serve to pile up mountainous evidence that the Soap Box Derby is worth while. Soap Box Derby Day in Akron's rivals Kentucky Derby Day in Louisville in interest and those privileged to see the boy contestants gathered at the Mayer Hotel in Akron, where they are quartered and looked after, all expenses paid, in a glorious holiday outing with championship honors as an added attraction, have seen something of the finest youth of the United States and Canada which will prove an inspiration and leave a pleasant memory which will never be forgotten.

"A MAN WHO CALLS HIS WIFE HARSH NAMES IS NOT GUILTY of disorderly conduct, if it is done in the privacy of his home, "Such was the ruling of a New York City Judge in a case brought by a wife who charged that her husband called her abusive names in their kitchen. Whether the toast was burned, or the coffee was off, or what have you, the evidence did not reveal, but some phase of the white man's burden must have annoyed the spouse to use words to which the wife's only answer was a summons to court. Said the Judge: "Disorderly conduct must cause or tend to cause a breach of the public peace. I believe this woman's story but I have no choice but to dismiss. Had she run into the street, and had her husband chased her and said the same things he did in the kitchen I would hold that there had been disorderly conduct." O, upright Judge, O, righteous Judge—what a break for us men folks—one up on Sarah, eh, what?

RAILROADING DOWN SOUTH HAS ITS HAZARDS peculiar to environment. In Kentucky, July 3, a mountain landslide buried a freight train under 6,000 tons of rock, hurling the locomotive into a creek and burying ten cars. Engineer, fireman and brakeman met instant death. Measurements showed that one of the rocks which hit the train, weighed about 3,600 tons and another 1,500 tons, the latter demolishing a freight car.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

July 7th, 1919.

Judging from the attendance at the Exhibition Park last evening, twilight baseball is popular in Belleville. The game played between the Ontarios of this city and the Picton team, both teams being in the City and District League. The following composed the teams: Belleville—Hagerman, Casey, Whalen, Mills, Ross, McWilliams, Clapper, J. Smith and H. Smith; Picton—R. Frederick, J. Carter, C. Frederick, B. Sayers, C. Croft, A. Britton, H. Campbey, C. Monaghan and R. Frederick. The final score was 8-0 in favor of Belleville. Mr. Chester Bonter was the umpire on balls and strikes and J. Pahey of Belleville was base umpire.

Mr. David Kerr of Toronto is visiting relatives here.

Mr. Gerald Watts is spending his vacation at Cardinal, N.Y.

J. J. McDonnell and family of Ruebio, Colorado, are guests at the home of Mr. C. O. Whelan, Portia Street.

30 YEARS AGO

July 7th, 1909.

The ratepayers of Belleville expressed their disapproval of the bylaw submitted to them for the purpose of obtaining their consent to the issuing of debentures for the sum of $70,000 for the erection of three new schools and making other improvements in school buildings. A new section of the city an adverse vote was recorded. A fair vote was recorded namely 698, out of which only 164 were given for the bylaw, 534 was 164 for the bylaw and 534 against the bylaw; majority against the bylaw 370.

EDITORIAL: The vote cast for and against the $70,000 bylaw for school purposes was indicative of the feelings of the taxpayers. They have evidently come to the conclusion that Belleville's taxation is high enough now. Notwithstanding this adverse vote there is not a shadow of a doubt but that a moderate sum for alterations and repairs to the present buildings would be readily approved.

that bars provincial treasury officers from investigating the estate of Jacob Kaufman, millionaire Kitchener lumber manufacturer who died in 1920.

Mr. Justice Rose ruled that, at this stage of the province's action against the estate, the provincial treasury was not a person "legally entitled" under the Federal Income War Tax Act to inspect or have access to income tax returns and other documents of the Kaufman estate.

Immediately after the 1937 general election, in which the matter of succession duties was to the fore, Premier Hepburn called a special legislature session. The Succession Duties Act and the Judicature Act were amended to allow the treasury department to investigate estates, which had been administered before 1927.

In answer to objections to the legislation from opposition members at that time, Mr. Hepburn said: "I have a mandate from the people to collect all succession duties, and we are going to get every last dollar due the treasury."

Statutes Given

Last night he declared: "Having in mind that in the general election of 1937 the issue of collecting succession duties from the estates of millionaire tax-dodgers was passed upon by the electors of Ontario and the government has a clear mandate to carry on; that obligation still remains and this temporary respite only makes the government more determined to continue the job it undertook in 1934, since which time over $20,000,000 has been collected where fraud and evasion were definitely established."

Mr. Justice Rose did not pass upon the validity of the 1937 amendments, saying the question was not fully argued at the hearing. W. N. Tilley, K.C., on behalf of Kaufman's son, A. C. Kaufman, argued during the hearing that the 1937 legislation was ultra vires.

JAPANESE WANT HASTINGS MICA

Belleville Chamber of Commerce Receives Inquiry

An offer from far off Tokyo by a Japanese importing firm to buy Hastings County mica was received in a communication which arrived at the Belleville Chamber of Commerce this morning.

The letter, with a June date mark and Tokyo post cancellation from Import Department of the firm of S. Shiosaki and Company, Tokyo, Japan, was addressed to the Secretary Manager of Commerce, Belleville, Canada.

"To Messrs. Chamber of Commerce:—

"As we are very anxious to import mica from your territory, but are not acquainted with suppliers or mine owner or merchant, we should be really obliged if you will kind enough to let them know our inquiry, advise us to price and samples," the letter read.

It was signed by M. Shiosaki, president of the firm.

BISLEY MEET TO LAST WEEK

International Situation Forces Curtailment of the Schedule

Bisley Camp, England, July 7 — (CP) — Army atmosphere will be intensified next week when crack military shots from Canada and other parts of the Empire open fire in the National Rifle Associations' annual shoot.

For many years the competitions have been leisurely spread over a period of two weeks, and the marksmen left the arduous work of marking and registering scores to squads of regulars posted at Bisley by the Army.

This year the international situation has forced a curtailment of the schedule to one week. Regulars and equipment were badly needed for the more serious job of training the forces and preparing for "an emergency."

This means the Canadians and other overseas visitors shots will have to "pitch in". They will not only have to complete in the two only practice of competitions in one week, but they will take their turn at the targets with the regulars.

In order to get the whole program into the week, many of the competitions will be fired concurrently. The process of marking scores has required a longer — programs than usual on some days.

Some of the boys think that the program looks like an endurance contest," smilingly commented Col. C. B. Price, commandant of the Canadian team.

He was quick to add the Canadians are not complaining "because we don't like to run away from a challenge."

There are 16 shooting members on the Canadian team, including 10 who have shot at Bisley before.

CLAIMS BRITAIN USES PROPAGANDA

Berlin, July 6—(AP)— German officials have interested themselves in private letters received by Germans from England, in which Chancellor Hitler's foreign policy is denounced and the fall of Germany in another war predicted.

Informed German quarters hinted some counter-propaganda might be taken. They said the letters were part of a British campaign to go over the German government's head and attempt to drive a wedge between it and the German people.

(For months the British Broadcasting Corporation has been broadcasting daily German language news program on regular medium wave channels, especially speeches of speeches by Prime Minister Chamberlain and others bitterly opposing the policies he wants to get before the German people.)

Letters in Germany

Mimeographed letters signed "Stephen King-Hall, 103 Buckingham Palace Road, London," have been received in various parts of the country. The Vienna Voelkischer Beobachter today printed a facsimile of part of one letter, and government officials said that some recipients were sending the letter with such remarks as "what sort of stupid propaganda is this?"

(Commander Stephen King-Hall is a retired naval officer, now editor and proprietor of the K-H News-Letter Service. He is the author of several books, mostly on political affairs and also of several plays.)

German Defeat Predicted

Commander King-Hall was quoted as having expressed doubts in the letter that the world can have peace if the present German policy is continued, and as having stated:

"Your leaders—at least Ribbentrop, Goebbels and Himmler— are quite impossible persons"—(Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop, Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels and Reich Himmler, Chief of all German police.)

The British view quoted as predicting Germany's defeat in the event of war, saying that war would end with a dictated peace "compared with which Versailles would be child's play."

NEWS ODDITIES AND BRIEFS

AUSTRALIAN DEFENCE IS PUSHED FORWARD

Melbourne, July 7. (CP-Reuters) — Progress in Australia's defence program is satisfactory on the whole, but the utmost vigor is essential, especially in the works program, Prime Minister Robert Menzies said today in connection with the Commonwealth Defence Council meetings here.

Production of anti-aircraft guns, Vickers guns, gas masks and antisubmarine devices has increased rapidly, he added, and coastal defences are nearing completion. Production of Bren guns, he stated, would begin within a year.

KINLOSS TO PAY $30 BOUNTY ON HALF-WOLF HALF-DOG ANIMALS

Wingham, Ont., July 7 (CP)— Kinloss Township has decided to pay a $30 bounty on all half-wolf, half-dog animals killed around here. They have been killing so many sheep farmers are disposing of their flocks. The Ontario authorities will not pay any bounty because the animals in most cases are not pure wolf strain, but part dog.

STUDY INDIAN LIFE

Ann Arbor, Mich., July 7 (CP) —A University of Michigan expedition to study the lives and customs of primitive Indian tribes has left here for upper Georgian Bay. Headed by Dr. Emerson Greenman, the party will search Manitoulin and Great Cloche Islands for evidence of early tribal distribution.

BRITISH OFFICER RELEASED

Trenton, July 7 (AP)—Lieut. Theodore Griffiths, second officer of the British coastal steamship Yoshaw, was released by Japanese today after having been held since July 1 for using "insulting language" to Japanese soldiers. Major-General A. G. Grasett, Peterboro-born commander of British troops in China, arrived today in the Admiralty steamship to inspect British forces here.

INDIAN FLUTE FOUND

Aylmer, Ont., July 7 (CP)—The archaeological find from the Royal Ontario Museum is excited over a discovery made during a search on the site of an old Indian village northeast of here. The discovery is a flute fashioned from the bladebone of a bird. It is the first pre-white flute found in Ontario.

PRAYS FOR DOG'S RETURN

Hillsburg, Ont., July 7 (CP)—From the postoffice comes this story of a small girl named Bobbie, who wrote a letter:

"Dear Jesus:

"Up in the sky,

"Dear Jesus: Please bring my dog Skippy back. He is lost. He is black and white and has a collar. I think somebody took Skippy."

LINDSAY GIRL TELLS OF WONDERFUL WHEAT

Lindsay, Ont., July 7 (CP)— Miss Erma Wright, one of 4-H clubbers competing statewide who attended a Lindsay council meeting and later wrote an essay on the visit, didn't think much of the proceedings. Interrupted again and interrupted the Mayor, the town clerk could not be heard above the reading correspondence and one reporter chewed gum in a manner "most disgraceful to an ad." Councillors heard the essay in chapter — programs that usual on some days.

"Some of the boys think that the program looks like an endurance contest," smilingly commented Col. C. B. Price, commandant of the Canadian team.

He was quick to add the Canadians are not complaining "because we don't like to run away from a challenge."

There are 16 shooting members on the Canadian team, including 10 who have shot at Bisley before.

2ND ANNIVERSARY

Perplexity Exhibited

The continued Chinese resistance causes perplexity among the Japanese. Since childhood they have heard their army is invincible.

It is explained that Soviet Russia, Great Britain and France are preventing the long-expected Chinese collapse. On all sides you hear: "We are fighting three or four nations." If only the third powers would withdraw their assistance, the campaign would be over.

The day when friends and relatives and members of the local patriotic association paraded with the China-bound recruit to the station amid the cheers of brass bands and crimson and white flags is gone. The enthusiasm is forced and excitement has given place to weariness.

A Station Scene

Or station scenes of another kind: There is a heavy silence on the station platform and soldiers stand at rigid attention. Behind them are masses of people watching a train come to a stop. One by one, soldiers emerge from the cars. Each carries a white box, containing the ashes of a Japanese soldier killed in China.

In whom, accompanied by her other children, came to take the box that bore the name of her dead son. When his name was called she stepped forward. The officer saluted, saluted and handed it to her. She held it in her arms for a moment as though it were a new infant' Then her mouth opened in a soundless scream and she threw the box at the officer's head.

"NEW DEALERS" AVERT DEFEAT ON MONEY BILL

Washington, D. C., July 6. It was a tough fight, and they are glad it's over. United States Senators Robert Wagner (left) Alben Barkley (centre) and Sherman Minton (right) mop fevered brows after the resolution restoring to the treasury powers to investigate estates was defeated on a vote of 43 to 42. The senate, by the narrow margin, refused to table the resolution, thereby permitting him to escape winning their fight in Congress to restore President's vast powers which recently he suffered a major defeat. Had they failed the administration would have received the worst setback in its career.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

Tonsilitis After Tonsils Have Been Removed

A few years ago when operation for tonsilitis was one of the popular topics of discussion, a story of that time was told of a boy who was rushed into hospital after having been in a street accident. Printed medical records show his admission were three words, "In case of accident, please do not operate for appendicitis; it has been removed twice already."

Whether this story, some of your friends who have undergone operation for tonsilitis may tell you that they have pains much like appendicitis after the operation of the appendix. This is true because there may be adhesions—Two surfaces grown together—scar tissue that gets pulled by movements in the abdomen, pressure from gas in this region, where wastes and gas must pass through a reverse or S curve.

Just as in operations for appendicitis, one infection may take place on tonsil "stumps". These tonsils should have been well removed at operation or have grown since operation. Any tiny piece of tonsil left behind after operation may enlarge and cause as much trouble as the whole tonsil itself.

It is interesting and gratifying to see a surgeon who has removed a tonsil put his light directly on the tonsil bed from which the tonsil was removed and search diligently for any tiny stump or piece of tonsil which may be left behind or present.

Further, just as the tonsil itself can be the starting infection of rheumatism and heart disease, so also can the tonsil bed start these ailments.

Tonsils, also, the sore throat, while not in the exact region, is so near it that the symptoms are hardly like those of tonsilitis. "Upon looking into the throat one sees tiny elevations or mounds of tissue which are red and swollen. These little mounds must be thoroughly destroyed.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Weymark were hosts to members of Minerva Chapter, No. 119, Wednesday afternoon at their camp, Kingston Road, on the occasion of their annual picnic. Swimming attracted quite a number during the afternoon, while a few went fishing. Supper was served at 6 o'clock with good luck attending them. After the picnic supper, Mr. Lazenby and Mr. Adams took charge of the sports. One contest provided much merriment when several ladies, blindfolded, tried feeding several gentlemen also blindfolded with ice cream. Balancing Beauty Budget

JO ANN SAYERS.....perfect balance gives her poise and charm.

By HELEN FOLLETT

PERFECT balance and equilibrium of the body are possible only when one has the body weight evenly distributed on the ball and heel of the foot The girl who has the languishing pose, holds one hip higher than the other, has her weight mostly on one foot, is dead about the best she can to ruin her figure and destroy grace of movement.

The next time you are in a social circle notice how differently women sit in their chairs. Some are hunched up, others have knees crossed, toes extended out into the room. Some confess affliction by draping themselves over the cushions. Silly, if you ask us.

Sit far back in the chair. Keep the torso poised with easy erectness, by which we mean that the chest should be high and the spine in column straight within a sign of rigidity. Place your hands prettily in the chair arms or in your lap. Cross your ankles if you wish, but not your knees. With skirts short one should forego that bad habit.

When rising don't heave yourself out of a chair. Get out of the lightweights do that. Get agile.

Work Panacea for Broken Heart

All sorts of suggestions have come to Patricia, the girl whose engagement was broken by her fiance who after two years of devotion, told her he didn't think his love was deep enough to marry her.

Many correspondents, both men and women, have written me that their own experiences were similar to Patricia's and told how they lived down their unhappiness.

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"It is inevitable that Patricia's pride should be hurt by having her fiance tell her he didn't wish to marry her because he didn't love her enough.

"There was one sentence in her letter which will enable her to 'save face'. Her friends think she has broken the engagement and not the man. Does she realize what a blessing this misunderstanding of the case has been? She is not necessary for her to go about saying she has been jilted. All that is needed is for her to say our engagement has been 'broken' and decline to give any of the details.

"The panacea for a broken heart is work, work and yet more work. I know whereof I speak, because I had an experience similar to Patricia's. The sun went out of the world for me. My pride came to my rescue. I declined to be 'the broken lily' of romantic literature. I positively declined to discuss the affair with my sisters—the break.

"The money I had for my trousseau, I spent on beautiful clothes. And Lord how clothes do help! I danced, I flirted, I was the envy of the gay. And before the year was out, I married a man who was more than the fiance I thought had broken my heart.

"When my engagement was broken I had a job in the same building with my children lover. It was terribly hard to meet him in the elevator, in corridors, in the lobby, but I always faked a smile, a gay hello or a wave of the hand. I never knew why he broke the engagement, but whatever was the cause, I thank God for it.

Happy."

How One Girl Took Her Broken Engagement

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"He was sent to Cuba, where he was given a job that was to hurry up our wedding. He was made assistant manager of his firm, and in eighteen months he was to come back and marry me.

"After he had been gone six months his letter became less frequent, and at the end of another month he wrote and told me he had fallen in love with another girl, and asked for his release from me. Of course I wrote him, giving him his freedom and wished him happiness. But I made the grave mistake of telling a girl friend what had really happened even showing her his letter. Of course, she passed it around, and it was terribly difficult for me.

"Fortunately, I was able to leave our town where my broken engagement was the principal topic. I had an aunt in New York, and very frankly I asked her to let me stay. She agreed, if I would take a job. The job was that of waitress in a fashionable tea-room. I had to wear a picturesque costume, and how I hated it! I felt like Pagliacci in the song.

"But writing orders, carrying trays, balancing my cash, and almost dying on my feet from standing, helped me to forget. And now in this same tea-room I am hostess. I am really happy. The hurt was too deep, but I'm better off than if I had stuck 'round the home town.

Hostess."

Etiquette Notes From Here and There

Thoughts About Salads—Mme. Cesar Ritz, of Paris, widow of the founder of the Ritz hotels, has for the past few years been in this country inspecting American hotels and the Ritz-Carlton. Her only thing she did not find to her liking in American cuisine, she told, was our mixed salads, which she found less digestible than the simpler Continental way of serving greenstuffs.

And at a recent meeting of the International Restaurant Conference in New York, Mrs. Wakefield of Whitman, Mass., described the discriminating taste of New England hostess, who, she maintains, like their salads simple. My blessings on her when she says, "I don't like a salad looking like a porcupine—no water lily or a candlestick. It looks as if it had been handled too much."

Hostesses, are you listening to Mrs. Wakefield's wise words? Not only do these things look out of date, if they had been handled too much but they dishonor the fair name of "salad." It has always been a profound mystery to me why so many feel that enormous amount of trouble to concoct something grotesque when it is so much easier to toss the perfect salad—a simple salad. We should have our salads and serve them so that they look like their civilized selves....not looking as if we were at a candle stick or any other thing it isn't. Unless you want a salad, you want a head of lettuce, not a candlestick!

Miss Lillian Bohnl, who is the head of the Anti Travel Bureau in New York, knows all about travelling and travelers. And these are her wise words: "The veteran traveler carries a small amount of luggage, not the cumbersome array that novices take. Also old-timers are more apt to be courteous and even-tempered, and they are tolerant of unavoidable mishaps.

x x x

I am reading Elizabeth Hawes's book about men's clothes, "Men Can Take It." Miss Hawes, you remember, is the author of "Fashion is Spinach." One suggestion in her book makes me particularly distressed: "It took a World War to get rid of sets of corsets. It will probably take another to get them into trousers."

Gosh, we have another reason for praying that the next war won't come—the unsightly sight of fat girls and women in slacks or trousers at resorts or walking along the roadsides these summer days. Carefully-dressed, slim ones look fine in trousers, but—oh, girls, girls, ugh! Miss Hawes is slim and smart. It's not fair for her to encourage those women who obviously..., and how obviously!..., have an artistic right to wear slacks or trousers. It seems to me that appropriateness, suitability of time, the place and the person, are the key-words of correct and proper dress.

Courtesy Tip

I like to apply this sentence (from Burroughs) to manners: "Good manners seem born with eye in their heads, and others with buttons or painted marbles, and no amount of science can make the one equal the other in the art of seeing things."

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Bronchiectasis Almost Completely Preventable by Doctor Dafoe

I have known children to be sick for a year with bronchiectasis and I have known them to die of it. Considering what this disease is and almost completely preventable, this is nothing short of pitiful.

Yesterday I told you how the disease may develop as the result of pus draining into the bronchial tubes from infected sinuses. I should add that the disease is caused as well by dental troubles, adenoids, or chronic infection in any structure in the mouth, nose or throat.

A few years ago, the usual districts nurse called me to see a bit of a problem. Usually by the time the doctor was called, the child was coughing up large quantities of pus. He had had the infection for some time and was thin and pale. I used to suspect tuberculosis almost immediately, but since we had no X-rays to depend on in those days, the doctor took a good deal longer. I have seen children so filled up with the pus from their bronchial tubes that they were almost choking.

Another name for chronic bronchiectasis may develop in the one way that is difficult to prevent. Occasionally a patient who has suffered from pneumonia will be slow in recovering. The chest doesn't clear up as soon as it should. The result is a chronic infection of the chest that may drag on for weeks, even months.

One man I knew and attended was such a case. He had served in the army overseas and had been gassed. Back home he contracted pneumonia and bronchiectasis developed. Besides that he had some weakness in his lungs which complicated matters.

Today when I run into a case of this disease, I recommend that the patient be removed to a hospital as soon as possible, for it is largely a case for nursing care such as the average home doesn't provide. Of course many cases are cured at home, but the hospital is the place, if it can be done.

DEFINITE stimulus will be given to putting over major new projects by important planetary influences action. Hard work, perseverance and genuine force may supplement such well-directed energies, but be wary of small leaks or loopholes for misunderstandings or trickery. Reactions from this high tension may be more pleasant in the personal affiliations.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may prepare for a very strenuous year with the energies under unusually high pressure, notably in the launching of new projects or in the reconstruction of old congestions. Aggressive measures, diligence and bold initiative may lead to highly-productive results, but with not too pleasant reactions on the personal life.

BELLEVILLE NINE MIRED IN CELLAR OF QUINTE LOOP

Intermediate Ball Squad Beaten by Air Force for Second Time

SCORE IS 12-7

Consistent hitting gave the R.C.A.F. "Flyers" their second consecutive win over Belleville in the Bay and Quinte League last night, when the Airmen downed "Bud" Wakins' local champs 12 to 7 on the Air Force aerodrome last evening to sink the Belleville nine lower into the league cellar mire.

The Belleville squad started strong and ran in five runs in the second frame to take a commanding lead, but the Foster-led "Flyers" came back strong to score three in their half of the second and six markers in the fifth, and went on an eight inning batting agree to drive Joe Kelleher from the hillock and score five runs which proved sufficient to win despite Belleville's noble effort with a two run ninth inning rally.

"Spider" Webb hurled his second season's win over the Belleville nine and despite the fact the visitors had runners aboard every innings, Webb was given splendid support in the field and returned winning pitcher. Webb gave up 11 hits, including a home-run by Plummer in the ninth and a triple by Carson. Kelleher was hit hard and fanned nine but ultimately was replaced by Ellis after a hostile outburst of Air Force hits in the eighth, when the homesters clouted the piece with a five run splurge.

Four For Five

Dole, the Air Force right fielder, led the hitters of the day with four hits in five tries, Smith getting three and Goodwin two for the homesters. Mockford had three, yielding two, besides Plummers circuit blow with one aboard in the ninth and Carson had single to Dole's circuit, when he was left stranded.

Smith, the Air Force left fielder who hit well also turned in a sparkling effort in the field having five hard putouts to his credit. L'Heureaux and Walker played steady ball in the middle garden for Webb's, while Belleville kicked the ball around for seven costly errors, marked the sixth consecutive loss for the locals and for leaving the local nine badly mired in the Bay of Quinte cellar position.

Clubs Between Third and Sixth Place in Both Leagues Buffeted About by Games of Tuesday

Dodgers Move to Third; Slot While Cubs Skid to Sixth

TIGERS MOVE UP

Dizzy Dean Doused in First Defeat of Season by the Pirates

(By Judson Bailey Associated Press Sports Writer).

Like a couple of boys who have eaten green apples, the National and American Leagues right now are experiencing severe and unpredictable disturbances in their middle regions.

In the two days since the Fourth of July supposedly settled the standings into semi-permanent shape the fight between third and sixth place in the two leagues have been buffeted out of recognizable shape.

Brooklyn Dodgers are in third place in the National League today by one percentage point and that up Cubs, who tumbled to the same spot Tuesday, are in sixth by a single point. St. Louis Cardinals have skidded to fourth and Pittsburgh Pirates risen to fifth.

In the American League Cleveland Indians were knocked from third and into fifth place with Detroit Tigers ascending to third and Chicago White Sox to fourth. In addition, Philadelphia Athletics are thrusting the backs of the sixth place Washington Senators.

Yesterday's menu of five games contributed in full measure to the muddled situation.

Reds Come From Behind

Cincinnati Reds came from behind to snare St. Louis Cardinals 7-4, in a night game. Paul Derringer was slugged for 14 hits, including seven for extra bases, of which Johnny Mize's 15th homer of the season was the climax. But the Reds made the most of their few knocks. Ernie Lombardi hit a home run with one on and the other safeties were opportune.

Pittsburgh Pirates doused Dizzy Dean into his first defeat of the season, 7-3, with a 13-hit attack which was shouldered by Fred Lindstrom's 11-hit assault. Lloyd Waner batted in two runs with his single and Larry French after he relieved Dean fanned the fourth.

The other National League clubs had an open date as did the New York Yankees and the Boston Red Sox in the American.

Jack Knott came up with a five-hit pitching job to beat Cleveland, 8-1, as the Indians' third loss in a row.

Tigers Now Third

The Tigers, who moved into third place Tuesday when Rudy York took advantage of the opportunity to strengthen their position by outslugging St. Louis Browns to win 9-5. Seven pitchers saw action in the fracas, which was decided by Detroit's four-run flurry in the eighth.

Philadelphia pounced on the Senators, 9-2, in a night game to break a six-game losing streak. George Caster survived a shaky opening inning in the second inning and gave only two hits for the next seven innings while his teammates bunched all their runs into three lusty chapters.

Sports Roundup

(By Eddie Briets Associated Press Sports Writer).

New York, July 7 (AP)—"Broadway Jack" Doyle is saying these days that the all-star game: American League, 9-20; National League, 9-5. Jack, well known southern boy ball coach is being put on the spot, for all things will indeed whether he'll remain on the job or "move up" as athletic director—and be succeeded by his backfield coach.....The day before Jack Dempsey got stuck a British newspaperman arrived with a fat offer for Jack to make a personal appearance tour of London night clubs.

Those who like Byron Nelson in the P.G.A. tournament figure it this way: Nelson, if one guy who knows how to make those birdies sing and they're often the payoff on match play golf.....Maurice Richard didn't do Detroit's fall heavyweight extravaganza any good by announcing in the Montreal Daily Psychosis is a better fighter than Bob Pastor.

It's too bad Dr. Hob Prueitt, St. Louis surgeon was hexed when the Yankees of 1927 held their reunion here Tuesday.....He would have listened to stuff that would have wandered the cockles of his heart. All the old sluggers agreed the doctor was the toughest pitcher they ever hurled into on their rounds of the American League.....He fanned Babe Ruth 13 times in 13 tries —in fact, he pitched his arm away cutting down on the lofty Bambino. He's had nothing but a "butterfly" ball, but he fooled Murderer's Row with it.....In all the years he threw only one fast ball against the Yankees.....Ruth slammed that one out of the park.

SAMBO LESLIE LEADING CITIZEN IN JERSEY CITY

Fans Will Put Up An Argument if Player is Recalled

SINGLE WON GAME

Toronto Leafs Rally Pound Out 8-4 Win Over Orioles

(By The Associated Press)

If and when Manager Leo Durocher is recalled from the Jersey City's Little Giants there will be a great hue and cry.

Because Sam is just about the leading citizen of Jersey, what with producing a game winning single in the 16th inning to score Johnny Dickshot from second and give the Little Giants an 8-7 victory over Rochester Red Wings last night.

Hy Vandenberg, who went in the seventh, was credited with the win in the official scorebooks, but Lesley's blow was the payoff punch in the four-run rally, of whom sat up well past their bedtime to see the struggle for first place. The win put the Giants a full game ahead.

The other major development in the night's play came when Buffalo downed Newark Bears, 6-4 and took over fourth place. The loss dropped the Bears down to fifth place. The Bisons rallied in their half of the sixth on Ed Carnett's double and Ken Silvestri's single.

John Berly helped pitch Toronto Maple Leafs to an 8-4 victory over Baltimore Orioles to stretch their losing streak to six games. John had to hurl the Leafs out of a tight spot. He came to the mound with the bases loaded and one out in the fanned pinch hitter Alex Manchak to save the day.

Walter Lanfranconi started for Toronto and gave way in the seventh when he was relieved by Carl Fischer.

The Montreal-Syracuse game was postponed by rain and the clubs will play a doubleheader tonight.

TALLY 88 BLOWS IN FOUR GAMES

Hits Come at Dime a Dozen in the Canadian-American Loop

(By The Canadian Press)

Hits come a dime a dozen in the Canadian - American Baseball League.

In four games yesterday and last night, the eight teams managed to come through with a total of 88 blows, which is subjecting the baseball to a terrific strain. The biggest total came at Cornwall, where the homer-happy Bisons won 16-6 over Ottawa Senators in a game that required 3½ hours.

The Bisons had 18 hits, as every man but one on their lineup helped safely and pitcher Cary Carr helped win his own game by pounding out a double and triple. Jim Higgins, Al Glowerville, the Glovers had 13 hits by the same number of men but six runs while Utica Braves manufactured 10 runs from 11 hits and three Glovers pitchers.

Ogdensburg and Oswego were the other teams that collected 10 hits, each team getting 11 as the sportswriters' pencils continued to scrape out a 7-hom victory. Amsterdam Rugmakers and Rome Colonials battled to a 3-3 draw before their game was called off by darkness in the 10th with 10 hits and blows. The Rugmakers had five and Rome Colonials six.

The four games produced six home runs, with Ogdensburg and Oswego as Punk McNally and Austin Dickshot from second and give the Little Giants an 8-7 victory over Rochester Red Wings last night.

Hy Vandenberg, who went in the seventh, was credited with the win in the official scorebooks, but Lesley's blow was the payoff punch in the four-run rally, of whom sat up well past their bedtime to see the struggle for first place. The win put the Giants a full game ahead.

DAVE CASTILLOUX DAMAGES FLIPPER IN BEATING RODAK

No. 1 Contender for Archibald's Title Given a Real Lacing

VERDICT UNANIMOUS

Tony Galento Referees the Heavyweight Bout Proceeding Main Go.

Toronto, July 7 (CP)—Examination will reveal whether a broken hand is to hurl temporarily the boxing bid of Montreal's Dave Castilloux for a crack at the world featherweight boxing crown currently worn by Joey Archibald.

Nursing a damaged right hand through the last five rounds, the compact French-Canadian fought to a furious 10-round decision last night over the National Boxing Association's No. 1 contender and poked his good left into Rodak's puzzled features. The judges' verdict was unanimous, Castilloux weighing 130 1-4 and Rodak 130 1-2.

Debate Over Weights

Castilloux entered the ring full of fury after a day of debate over weights and other technicalities. He piled up points for four rounds, then Rodak became aroused enough to take a session by forcing the fight.

In the seventh and eighth Castilloux was winging away with his left as hard as ever, despite the injury to his right, and Rodak had to like on. Castilloux never was in distress when the Chicagoan made his comeback try.

Outside the Castilloux showing, I was a mighty tough afternoon for four heavyweight champion, Tommy Osborne, lost on a technical knockout to Jack O'Sullivan of Toronto.

Angelo Callura, 127, of Hamilton, Ont., outpointed Eddie Hunter, Webster, 119, of South Africa, awarded an edge over Welsh.

Galento referred the Osborne-O'Sullivan mix and, after Osborne had to take "mercy" when he had taken a terrific right to the jaw, with Premier Hepburn to watch the final.

GLEN ROSS AND BETHEL ALL EVEN

Bethel Squad Scores 8-6 Win Over Glen Ross in Second Game of Finals

Stirling, July 7 (Special)— Enthusiastic fans who all season have followed the activities of the Rawdon Settled League, one of the most thriving in the district will have a chance to cheer their favorites at least once more before the championship is decided. Last night there was a large enthusiastic crowd that ragged the pitchers and also the umpiring. Bethel showed a complete reversal of form in winning the second game of the series to make a third game necessary.

After leading the league throughout the eight season's schedule Bethel dropped the first game to the boys from the Trent but last night hitting up the same pace, they have shown all season they drop even with the adversaries and the two break into the home-stretch even and the bets the same. Excitement among the fans grows feverish as the game progresses. The total attendance at these playoff games at the Stirling Agricultural Society would make a fair gate for the annual fall fair. The game started off in high with the first man up driving out a single, that should also have been a home run errors. That was enough to tighten the nerves of the players for the evening, and they were four runs up before the first innings. Lots of obbosition was met by a few of the fans and players to the method of pitching used by Bill Fenwick. Much of the difficulties encountered by the umpires was handled in an excellent game in an excellent way was created by loud talking spectators.

The series is one of the best seen in this district for some years and is drawing the largest crowds of the season. Next Monday evening they meet for the deciding game and everyone in the district, fans and players will quit work early to be on hand for it if necessary, Bethel had ten hits chalked up against him in his mound duty for Glen Ross and eleven hits were chalked against Reynolds' pitching for the winners.

Manager Hypnotizes Fighter Before Entering Ring

New York, July 7 (AP)—As proof that boxing have not been exhausted by his talented colleague Joe Louis, Nat Mangine of Jimmy Grippo with a daily jolt of hypnotism for his fighter, Lou Ambers, of Hillside Golf Conn for the more-or-less lightweight title here next Friday night.

Grippo, a genuine hypnotist and Jimmy's manager, has supervised all his novel training technique yesterday Mangine's office in New York. N.Y. It created quite a stir, and Commissioner Bill Brown of the N.Y.S.A.C. expressed the fear he has on Bettina. At any rate, he points out, Mello hasn't been hypnotized and that giving him the eye, and he now is regularly licensed by the Commission in New York State.

Put Fighter to Sleep

Yesterday, after Bettina had finished banging four sparring partners about the ring, he sat down on a chair and went to work. Bettina relaxed as Grippo, who had appeared to slip into a deep sleep as Grippo gave him the hypnotic hocus-pocus.

Leaning over his gladiator, Grippo began chanting yelling in a voice that echoed off nearby Mt. Beacon: "You're going to win Friday and fast next Thursday night. You're going to win by knockout. You're going to hit hard with both hands. You're going to knock Conn out before the end of the seventh round. You're going to obey instructions. Then he brought Mello around, and the lad did look a little starry-eyed.

MIMICO MOUNTIES SET ST. KITTS.

First Drawn Game in Lacrosse Series This Season

If any team has shown improvement in the senior "A" division of the Mimico Lacrosse League during the past few days, the team is Mimico Mountaineers.

The Mounties held the Canadian champions of last season, St. Catharines Athletic Kitts, to a draw in a time tie night in St. Catharines last night, and yesterday in the match of the senior "A" season. Just last Tuesday the Mounties took St. Kitts terrifying 7 to 4 in Mimico.

Orillia Terriers, performing on home ground, were the Mimico victims. Fergus Thistles in the last half and nearly ran away with the game, struggled to a 6-1 tie at half-time in the last half the hilly Thistle forward line swept in on the Thistle nets repeatedly and scored seven goals in the last quarter without a reply.

The results left St. Kitts in the lead for league honors with 20 points, with more than Mimico and Orillia in third position. The idle Hamilton Tigers retained second position on 16 points. Orillia are fourth with 14 and Fergus fifth with two points. Brampton Excelsiors are mired in the cellar, one point and one game in 11 played.

Between the Lines

with Ken J. Calling

About all you can hear among the tees—part of the city today is "Soap Box Derby." Bellevillians may not know it, but Belleville is recognized as the No. 1 Kid Kar community in Canada. Another of the International "Soap Box Derby" heads are concerned at Akron, Ohio. This year Toronto interests tried to get the top-ranking Soap Box Derby is to further the spirit and the local Kinsmen, but for once "Hog Town" found the organization too strong to push over. The purpose of the Soap Box Derby is to further the spirit of sportsmanship among the boys of this continent. In this value it is teaching youth the joys and advantages of creative work, and the values of investigation and resourcefulness. Kid Kar patrons get a great kick out of viewing the various types of "stars", designed by the creative minds of our youth. Not only is the Soap Box Derby an asset to the community, but with the Kinsmen Jubilee celebrating as the charity for which it is sponsored, the citizens should not refrain from liberal presence and presents.

When we say the playoff positions in the Belleville City Softball League are practically settled now, we do not imagine there would be many to contradict such a statement. Providing the Oilers' win over the Citizen Juniors tonight, and they should on the season's play, the Juniors possibly get into a play-off berth even if Dracup lost all of their remaining games. In years past the softball moguls have been confronted with conflicting play-offs for O.A.A. title and the city championship, both being played at the same time. By eliminating the remaining games in the City League schedule, as they'll mean little or nothing to the Juniors one tonight, the softball executive could concentrate on the O. S. A. playowns next week and have a winner declared possibly by the 31st of this month, immediately following the declaration of a O.A.A. representative, the City League play-offs could then begin and no doubt create more interest both to the fans and the clubs competing. The probable games will read as follows: Oilers, Corbys, Point Anne and Napanee over the Juniors have a bye into the Junior O.A.A. playdowns as in previous years.

It might be interesting to know that Hank Gowdy, now coach of the Cincinnati Reds, is the only one now active in major league baseball who has played in four record-breaking 26 inning Boston-Brooklyn 1-1 game of May 1st, 1920. Gowdy was a catcher of renown in those days. Incidentally way back in May, Sid Gillespie of the Clippers were red stockings and were the first professional baseball team. They became known as "the Reds" and the title to their "Red Sox" nickname. The first Redlegged professional team in baseball came into its kind to go undefeated through an entire season.

Do you remember when Canada's mines and oil wells, and the golf courses, were beckoning to Walter Hagen as the visited Canada one year ago today. Here "strictly on the level," the lads played a round of golf with his host, H. M. (Sig) Smille, and promised to return in the fall for the Canada golf title. He did, but did not place well. Sammy Sneed took the title.

Bud Wilkins' BelleviNe intermediates slipped further into the Bay & Quinte League cellar race as the result of a 12 to 7 ahellacking at the hands of the Air Force last night. The losers went out and garnered five big runs in the second frame and literally demoralized the game away without regard to the circumstances. Of course on the other hand the "Flying boys" were hitting Joe Kelleher's offerings consistently and finally drove him from the hillock. Timely base running was a factor in the game—the Air Force were hitting the ball drives through the infield while the locals were ballooning the spherical for pop outs. Smith, in left for the Flyers made several sensational running catches, while in general the Airmen were on their toes and deserved to win. As an example and to probe how woefully weak the locals are when the chips are down, Jack Carson opened the fifth with a slinging triple and died on third there for the lack of some good baseball. In the ninth inning Eddie Plummer clubbed a home run, the first registered this year by the local nine.

Hal Kemp's Dracup "firemen" triumphed over the city-at-mush, 11 to 7-1 at the Plaza ball night. The "firemen" fielded a patchedup nine for their game and got with the Prince Edward County boys. City team baseball resumed its evening when Cy Young's Juniors must win over the Oilers, or else.

Promoter Mike Jacobs, no relation to "We want Joe," the anonzie-punished manager of Galento, stated today he would sign Joe Louis to meet Bob Pastor, the world's dunkle champ. Fifteen round bicycle rider. The site of the proposed fight was not announced but lay near peanuts on Briggs stadium, Detroit, some time in September. That Joe Louis better get one of Ford's bullet-proof pot cars, because his bicycle won't be much good over the proposed 20-round match. Incidentally, Joe Louis and Billy Louis in their last meeting and the championship been gunnin' for him ever since.

Did You Know That ... Lou Gehrig was named captain of the American League team for the annual All-Star game? ... The beloved veteran of baseball, Connie Mack, is in very poor health ... the former reader has ambition of building a tired powerful team of All-Stars? ... Babe Ruth's lightfingers collected four hits in five times at last last night, and the Babe in fact had three.....The Pirates blasted Dizzy Dean from the Cubs' mound for seven runs and seven hits yesterday.....Hold tight and expect a big one, N.H.L. player deal in the near future.....The clubs implicated in the three-way swap will be New York Americans, Toronto Leafs and Les Canadiens.....It was just years ago yesterday that Babbit Maranville was appointed manager of the Brooklyn Robins? ... The slay in the Windy City was short, because the "Rabbit" got "settled" was at the helm of the Brooklyn "Daffiness Men."

BRITISH ATTITUDE

with the Polish authorities as to Danzig.

In Event of 'Inside Coup'

The statement is to be designed to clarify Britain's attitude toward the Danzig situation, particularly what would happen if the German accomplished a "inside coup" in the Free City.

The instructions sent to Moscow were drafted after long consultations between the British and French governments. They deal primarily with the Soviets' hesitation to give military pledges to Latvia, Finland and Estonia.

Parliamentary circles believed the Prime Minister of Monday would declare that any German-supported coup in the status of Danzig, except with Poland's agreement, would be considered an "act of aggression" by Germany.

Nature of Declaration

Some indication of the nature of the proposed declaration was seen in a question filed in the House of Commons by Mr. Chamberlain's Conservative, to be answered Monday.

The question, which informed sources in the House said was Mr. Chamberlain's request, asks whether the government will issue a declaration that Britain is ready to present status of Danzig, other agreements in which the Polish government is a party, which would be brought into question by military action on the part of Germany or internally by a movement backed by the German state. The German government, will be regarded as an act of aggression on the part of Germany and therefore covered by the terms of our pledge to Poland."

It was understood the Prime Minister would give an affirmative reply.

The King Receives Henderson

The undertaking so announced March 31 by Mr. Chamberlain was: "In the event of any action which clearly threatened Polish independence and which the Polish government accordingly considered it vital to resist with their national forces, His Majesty's government and France would feel themselves bound at once to render Polish government all the support in their power."

Sir Nevile Henderson, British Ambassador to Germany, returned to London earlier this week and received by the King before the declaration.

Britain's decision to make an £8,000,000 ($40,000,000) credit available to her allies will raise to a total of £81,000,000 ($405,000,000) the sums with which they may regulate arm purchases.

Export Transactions

A bill introduced in parliament yesterday will add £50,000,000 to £10,000,000 previously placed at the disposal of the Board of Trade for underwriting export transactions considered justified in political rather than strictly business grounds.

Last year Britain extended a credit of £16,000,000 to Turkey and this year one of £5,000,000 to Rumania. For this reason Poland was expected to be the first beneficiary of the government's new bill, which parliamentary circles expected to become law by Aug. 4, when the present recess begins.

Although the bill did not specify the countries to receive credits it has been for granted most of the new funds would be spent in ways which British guarantees of protection have been given—Poland, Turkey, Rumania and Greece.

In Britain the government's action was endorsed in newspaper editorials on the ground that stronger steps are vital to the empire's international defence and that hitherto some, such as Rumania and Greece, had to rely on Germany for implements of war.

TEACHDEMOCRACY

"The fact is that Communism, Nazism, and all other totalitarian forms of government are based on the principle of regimentation. They teach that the individual has no personal rights which are not in complete accord with the military and material strength of the nation as a whole. Man becomes nothing but a cog in the political machine. Highly organized and disciplined communities obey without question the dictates of their leaders. The state is supreme in every sense of public and personal life. That is totalitarian government. They may differ in appearance but whether they be Fascist, Nazi or Soviet as the color of their party, the doctrine they teach is the same. For a time they may seem less dangerous than another as so much depends on the character of the leaders. But in the end each must depend for its survival upon tyranny and force.

"Modern democracy which we take so much for granted starts from the other extreme. It is based on the sacred rights of the individual. Man is supreme and the state his servant. Created in God's image he has certain inherent rights which the state may not destroy. He has the right to worship according to his own belief. He has the right to express his opinion on all public questions. He has the right to choose those who will govern him. And he has the right to be deprived of his liberty except by public trial before one of his own Community.

"Democracy may fairly be said to have attempted to carry into practical politics the teachings of the Sermon on the Mount.

"Such is the fundamental difference between the doctrines which are aligning themselves in two hostile camps today. All of us agree that not between nations alone. It is between men and between men as well. The Communists in Russia sought from the beginning to destroy religion because it taught that Christianity and Communism can never live together. Hitler has made their professed hatred of Communism the excuse for his attack of course. Nazi barbarism is at every point opposed to the teachings of Christianity. Christianity is the faith of a highly organized effort in Germany to destroy religion and make of the state a modern Moloch to which parents must offer their children in sacrifice at the call of the god of war.

"Christianity and dictatorship cannot travel far together. Sooner or later they must part company. Opposed to the doctrines of Christianity, which teach that men can only change his course or attempt to control religious worship.

"It is clear, therefore, that the democratic form of government is the political system which is in accord with Christianity. The belief that man has rights with which neither men nor governments may interfere is the genesis of democracy.

"The denial of those rights however is the reason that a denial of Christianity and democracy. It leads to the belief that one race or nation is superior to another. It leads to the belief that Communists were superior to other Russians and that the opportunity for the development of society be confined to the comparatively few who belong to the Communist party. It leads to the belief that Germans are a superior race and that the Jews are Germany's enemy by position of virtual slavery. The same doctrine of race superiority was in fact the only excuse offered by those who bought and sold slaves for so many centuries.

Democracy is based on the principle of equal rights to every citizen of the country. This is true in principle and in effect. If there is equality for all regardless of race, religion, or occupation, then there will be democracy. And if there is true democracy there will be equality of opportunity for all. Anything short of that is not democracy.

"Personal freedom has been so much a part of the very air we breathe that we have come to look upon it as something permanently Canadian. We enjoy our heritage of freedom without much thought of all the struggle through which our forefathers passed to obtain it. We were prepared to sacrifice everything they had rather than be slaves, either of the body or the spirit. If we are to pass that freedom down to our children, we must ever be ourselves to the danger which exists in Canada. It is not enough to criticize events in other lands—we must examine what is taking place around us day by day.

"The very word Democracy implies that all the people work together for their own common welfare. For that reason, we must do everything can to prevent the spread of the godless teachings of Communism, no matter how small the number may be that those teachings are likely to affect. We must also fight the spread of any other doctrine that would limit the freedom of action of any part of the community. But there are other as well who are doing much to destroy Democracy in Canada. We have seen all too often in recent years deliberate attempts to arouse prejudice between those of different denominations, between those of different creeds, and of different races. If these attempts would destroy Democracy ourselves, without the assistance of Communism, Nazi or Fascist propaganda. Race prejudice used as a weapon of attack or defence is just as capable of the end as to lead to the formation of hostile groups within the will, in the end, destroy Democracy.

"We are we to combat these antidemocratic tendencies? It is not enough to express our hatred of Communism, Fascism or any other form of dictatorship. We must teach the young youth what democracy really means and make them realize the tragic consequences of any limitation of the freedom which we have so much in human sacrifice and suffering. We must also instil into them a faith in Democracy which will lead them to work together in Canadian unity for the good of all our people.

"We do not think that the best education. It is not enough that you and I believe in Democracy. We must convey that faith to others and the best way to teach what Democracy means and all that personal freedom implies is to show freedom means in daily life. Democracy demands the service of every citizen. Democracy must be understood as a personal thing. Democracy to us is a duty to preserve. We must teach our youth the lessons of history that the moment we divide ourselves into groups on the basis of occupation, class, creed, or race, Democracy cannot survive. As a system of government it depends on active participation by everyone in the performance of the duty owing for the welfare of all our people. Nothing less than that is real Democracy.

"In his farewell speech to Canada, King George used these words which should be repeated constantly in our thoughts:

"I am confident that Canada has before her a development far beyond the most optimistic dreams of her pioneers. Her wealth is untold. Her wealth is fully assured. For her sons and daughters, I wish her an even greater growth in the stature of mind and spirit.'

"In those words the King left a heritage to Canada. All of us should take to heart. For far too long, we have measured our progress as a nation almost exclusively by the standard of material success. Our education has concentrated on that standard as its channel. The fundamental principles of Democracy, and the spiritual greatness of human existence often have been forgotten. We must return to the ideals of the pioneers and real success are things of the spirit, which should guide us in the development of our youth. The future welfare of Canada depends largely on the growth of mind and spirit which the King mentioned.

"I do not suggest that any effort should be made to force on every young Canadian the opportunity to work whole in their birthright in a country of such vast resources and wealth. We must strive to the utmost to give to every child the material measure of prosperity and material success which will give him confidence and security during their working years and afterward. But we must also develop in them spiritual and personal life that true greatness and spirit which is the only true measure any difficulty.

"The most important is to fulfil its supreme task of preserving freedom and liberty. In the threatening spread of barbarism, then all of us, and all of our ancestors in a great cause, for the survival of democracy and of Christian principles in government and in our schools, our colleges, our churches, our schools and our government. All of these have their vital part to play, but in a Democracy everyone must play his part if justice, liberty and peace are to be preserved.

"Personal differences of opinion are unimportant in the face of danger which we confront us. If we are worthy to be called a nation pas

SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK

By R. J. SCOTT

Fireman's Girl

By MEREDITH SCHOLL

"A man," said Cicilia Eldredge, "who will go to a fire and lose his best girl sitting in her front room after she had spent hours getting ready to attend a dance with him is not in love."

A look, combining irritation, impatience, indulgence and alarm came to dwell in Wade Parker's eyes. "Don't be absurd, Celia! You know I love you. There isn't any thing I wouldn't do for you."

"You wouldn't stay home from a fire," Celia said.

"But Celia, a man has his duty to perform. After all, I'm a volunteer and when an alarm sounds I'm supposed to attend. Suppose it were your house that was burning?"

"I wish it would something. Sometime when you were here. It would be nice not having you run off when the alarm sounded."

"Celia, you're unreasonable!"

She shook her head firmly.

"I'm not. There are dozens of other volunteers—too many of them all to ride on the truck. It isn't as if I asked you to stay home from every fire. I'm only asking that you try suppressing your childish desire when you have a date with me. I'm tired of being left to sit and twiddle my thumbs in a new party dress while you run off to squirt a hose."

Wade bit his lips.

"And if I don't agree?" he asked.

Celia looked at him steadily.

"If," she said, "the next time the fire siren blows when you are with me, you don't conquer the urge to go bouncing off in that rattletrap car of yours, our engagement is off!"

She closed her head.

"Tony Harris has been asking me to go places with him, and Tony is not a fireman."

"I see," said Wade darkly.

"And that," said Celia, "is the proposition. The next time the fire siren blows when you are in my company will be the test of your love."

It was just a week later when the fire siren screamed at a most inopportune moment.

It always screamed at inopportune moments, as far as Celia was concerned.

They were seated—Celia and Wade—in the hammock on Celia's front porch.

It was a beautiful summer's night. The air was balmy and heavy with the scent of growing things.

A full moon silvered the wide expanse of lawn in front of them.

A gentle breeze rustled the vines that covered the verandah's lattice.

It was a night for romance; a night for dreaming; a night for love.

They has been there for an hour or more, blissfully content to be alone and in love, happy in the thought that each belonged to the other and that nothing else in the world mattered.

Suddenly the still night air was pierced by the raucous note of the siren.

It came to them distinctly, loudly, a harsh, screeching sound that sent the goose pimples racing up and down Wade's spine.

He sat bolt upright.

The hand that held Celia's suddenly grew rigid.

She saw by the faint light of the moon that the old-time gleam was alight in his eyes.

She remained silent; her breathing quickened, watching, waiting. Wade sat there for fully a moment, straight and still, his own breathing labored. And then, as if some vagie memory had penetrated his brain, his body relaxed. Slowly, reluctantly he sat back . . . A great sigh escaped his lips.

He closed his eyes, as if trying to shut out all sight and sound. The hand in Celia's grew limp.

Celia waited until the last faint whine of the siren had died. Then she leaned forward in the darkness, her arm encircled his shoulder. She drew him toward her and kissed his lips.

"Wade! Wade!" He held her close.

Minutes later they drew apart.

A pin point of light had begun to gleam on the horizon.

It grew larger, brighter, lighting the whole eastern sky.

Watching it they were suddenly still and tense. And Wade became aware that Celia's eyes were wide and staring; that the blood had left her cheeks.

She turned to him, startled.

"Wade! It looks like the hotel!"

Wade nodded.

"It does, doesn't it?"

"Wade, there are hundreds of people in there. They—they might perish to death!"

"They're probably all out by now," Wade said.

She turned back to stare through the lattice.

The eastern sky was even brighter.

The fire seemed to have gained headway.

"Wade!"

"Wade!" Celia's voice was low, frightened. "Wade, I've a confession to make. I—I said Tommy Rogers a dollar to turn in that alarm tonight!"

"You what?"

"I paid Tommy Rogers a dollar. You see, I wanted to know whether—how much you loved me I—I couldn't wait."

Her voice broke.

"Wade, I was afraid. Afraid that if there were no fire—for a long time—you might forget my proposition, and—oh, Wade!"

"Darling!" He held her close. "You sweet kid. Of course I love you. And tonight will prove it. Why, this is the biggest fire we've had in years!"

"Wade, I want you to go!"

"You want me to go?"

She nodded wildly.

"Wade, you must! Think of those people. You must go. Wade, they'll need every man they can get!"

Wade stood up.

"Celia, you're wonderful." He kissed her, drew away, jammed on his hat and galloped madly down the walk. A moment later the tail light of his rattletrap car had disappeared in the distance.

Celia sighed heavily and sat down, conscious of a pleasant, warm glow of happiness.

Wade parked his car on the outskirts of the village and walked in. The fire was practically out, most everyone seemed in a jovial mood.

He learned by questioning that it wasn't the hotel after all.

The livery stable directly behind it had caught.

Most everyone was glad.

The thing had been an eyesore to the living enough. The fireman had decided to let it burn. A good job done, everyone agreed.

Wade wandered around for an hour or more.

Presently he came upon the object of his search. Tommy Rogers with a group of other boys was perched on a picket fence enjoying the blaze.

"Tommy come over here."

Tommy jumped down and followed Wade into the shadows. Wade reached into his pocket and produced two crisp dollar bills, which he presented to Tommy.

"One buck," he said soberly, "for setting fire to the old livery stable. And another for keeping your mouth shut to Miss Eldridge."

Tommy accepted the money and grinned knowingly.

"O. K." he said, "Any time you want another fire set let me know, Mr. Parker."

"One," said Wade, "is enough."

Little Benny's Note Book

I went downtown in the buss to pop's office this afternoon on account of us both being suppose to meet ma there on account of her being downtown already, and I was a little late but not much and pop looked at his watch saying 20 minutes to 5 isn't half passed 4, or is it?

No sir, it's all but 10 minutes, I said, and pop said, If you wanted to be 10 minutes shy, why couldn't you of been 10 minutes early instead of 10 minutes late?

Being a good question, and I said, I was helping ma.

Helping her look, for Peet sake, she's been downtown since morning, pop said, and I said, Yes sir, but she always likes me to look exter neet when I'm downtown, so I practised tying my tie with my eyes shut.

Is that your idea of the most brilliant way to do it neetly? pop said, and I said, No sir, only G winjckers pop, I thought if I did it nearly perfect with my eyes shut why I'd be sure to do it perfect when I was really looking.

Yee gods lets go, your mother is probbly pawing the ground with her high heels at Bird and Linnetts by this time, pop said.

Being where I was going to get my new shoes in the boys shoe department, only ma wasn't even there yet, and she didn't get there till about 15 more minutes, pop saying, I suppose you were helping Benny?

How do you mean? ma said, and pop said, I thought maybe you stopped in several places for ice cream sodas because Benny was collecting straws from different drug stores.

Now Wilburn you dont need to be sourcastic, I'm practically on time to all intents and purposes, ma said, and pop said, I'll grant you the intents but not the purposes.

And I got my shoes and pop got a hat and ma had about 6 packages already.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, July 7 — (CP)— The market held its ground today in dull trading. Industrials and base metals were off narrowly. Turnover aggregated only 117,000 shares.

Autos provided the strength around the noon period, advancing to 2.76 in heavy trading for a new pair of 18 cents. Other strong spots in the golds were Coniaurum, O'Brien, Macassa, God's Lake and Reno. Senior golds were firm. Mcintel, Waite-Amulet and Pend Oreille chalked up minor gains and other base metals were quiet. Silvers were steady and slow.

Industrials showed the main weakness with the utilities, foods and stores leading to the down side. Practically no trade appeared in the western oils. Dominion-Dominion was off 4 cents and Anglo-Canadian held unchanged.

WALL STREET

New York, July 7 (AP) — Idle swings in stock market leaders kept most speculative forces in the dark today. A few metals, aircrafts and small equities tipped the scales for small advances, but numerous issues were unchanged to off a shade near the previous low.

Posting minor gains at one time were American Smelting, Phelps Dodge, Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck, Boeing, Sperry, Arnerican Airlines, Celanese, Penn Corporation and Bethlehem Steel.

Lacking support were U. S. Steel, General Motors, U.S. Rubber, American Telephone, Consolidated Edison, Westinghouse, Union Carbide and Du Pont.

Among secondary issues, Done gained a small fraction and C.P.R. lost as much. Dominion 44 were neglected in the bond market.

Little Change in Produce Prices

Toronto, July 7—An easier undertone was evident in eggs and cheese, but butter held steady to firm on the Toronto produce market on Thursday, according to the Dominion Department of Agriculture.

With the advent of warmer weather, demand slackened on the egg market. Although fresh receipts continued to arrive in light volume, the tendency was for lower prices. The top two grades in the graded division showed the only decline, however. Graded shipments closed at 22c to 23c for grade A-large, 19c to 21c for medium, 17c for B's and 16c for C grades.

Demand was indicated to be spotty, but trading generally was better on the butter market. Offerings of top grade product cleared steadily while undergrades lagged a little. Fair qualities of the Western make turned over locally at 22½c. Ontario creamery was quoted steady at 22c for No. 1 grades and 21½c for 2s stock. It was reported at the former levels of 23c to 23½c for top grades and 22½c to 22¾c for 3S score.

Montreal Egg Weaken

Montreal, July 7—(CP)—Cheese butter and potato offerings ruled steady on the local market, but egg produce markets here yesterday, showed a weaker tone, it was stated in the Dominion Department of Agriculture report today.

Fairly heavy butter prints to retailers sold for 23 cents a pound and solids for 22½c, while cooking fat delivered in Montreal was unquoted. Quebec No. 1 pasteurized was wholesaled during bulk made 21½. Receipts: 1,052 boxes.

Colorado white cheese was quoted at 13¾ a pound and colored at 12¾. Quebec white cheese was quoted at 13½ and colored at 13¾. Receipts: 4,176 boxes.

Graded egg shipments in used free cases were offered at 25-25½ cents a dozen for A-large, 23½ for A-medium, 19-19½ for B-large and 15 for C. Receipts: 2,153 cases including five export.

Boiled to Victory Over Australia; By Three Lengths

Trail the Aussies to Frawley and Then Put on Spurt for 200 Yards That Put Them Into Clear

TIME NOT FAST

Argos Will Meet Harvard in Finals on Saturday as That Crew Beat Jesus College in Other Heat

By JACK BRAYLEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Henley-on-Thames, England, July 7.—(CP Cable)—A smiling, bald-headed of Toronto Argonauts bolted to victory in the semi-final of the grand challenge cup at the Royal Henley Regatta today, defeating a labouring Sydney, Australia, eight, by three lengths after trailing for the first half of the 1 1-2-mile course.

The Canadians followed the Aussies to Pawley and then sprinted 200 yards, leaving the Sydney crew in a hopeless position and returning a time of seven minutes, 35 seconds, 14 seconds more than Harvard took to beat Jesus College, Cambridge, by 2 1-4 lengths in the other semi-final.

Gusty Wind

The conditions for both races were similar except for a gusty wind that sprang up just before the eights heat.

In the last half mile the Argos pulled away easily as the Aussies rowed themselves out completely.

The Toronto crew impressed the experts by striking 37 a minute steadily except for the brief spurts they passed the Aussies during which they rowed 38 splashing spurts ranging from 36 to 43 strokes a minute.

The Canadians looked unworried while the Aussies were leading with a brisk pace, as though confident they had the race in hand when they wanted it.

"I'm sure pleased with the boys today," Coach Ted Pinchard said. "They had plenty in reserve and acted like veterans. Aboy tomorrow! Well, I don't see why we can't do it."

It was the first time the Argonauts had reached the final. The nearest they came previously was in 1906 when they lost to Trinity Hall, Cambridge, in the semi-final.

Famous Conductors To Attend Grand Band Concert

Preparations are going forward for the grand band concert on Victoria Park, Sunday evening, July 9 on the occasion of the second annual reunion of the Killies Band of Canada and Members Association when the Belleville Citadel Band (now augmented by the active playing members present) and the famous Belleville Killies Band will produce what will no doubt be the outstanding musical event here in 1939.

Many famous conductors will be present, namely: F. R. Mahoney, onto Symphony Band; Bob Dickson, B.M., Toronto Symphony; Lieut. Joseph Holden, ex-Bandmaster Toronto Scottish and other well known organizations; Lieut. Joseph Lewis who has travelled with Sousa and other famous bands, will also be expected. Each member will be directed by a famous bandmaster and many of the old Killie Band selections will be played, among them The Killies March, William Tell Overture, We McGregor Patrol, Ermin' Thro' the Rye, Intermezzo and a brand new march "Kilocrest" dedicated to Canada's musical cities specially written for the occasion.

The Toronto committee in charge is composed of Alec Gorrie, president; Dunc Reid, treasurer, and Dick Jose, secretary. The Belleville Committee Ex-officio members are: Rita Ryan, Billy Grant, and Lieut. Reg. Hinchey with Lieut. Fred Jobson, Garn Dobbs and Walter Aestine, associate members.

Tennis Title At Wimbledon Won by Riggs

Wimbledon, England, July 7 — (AP)—Bobby Riggs of Chicago beat his roommate and fellow ranking Gene Elwood Cooke of Portland, Ore., 2-6, 8-6, 3-6, 6-3, 6-4 today in the all-American final for the Wimbledon singles tennis championship.

Riggs, playing with that nonchalance which has baffled the critics, never really extended the loser after the start of the fourth set.

Riggs, making his debut at Wimbledon, now has won 13 straight from Cooke, who has never even considered good enough by the United States Lawn Tennis Association to have his full expenses paid to Forest Hills tournament. The only other American ever to win the Wimbledon title on his first visit was Elsworth Vines in 1932.

Riggs got a valuable lead in the fifth and final set but Cooke dragged him back level at 2-2. However, Riggs broke through his opponent's service for a vital advantage in the fifth game when Cooke missed two winning baseline shots by inches. Riggs won the sixth to love for a 4-2 lead. After that he ran away as he liked.

CLAUDE SWANSON NAVY SECRETARY DIES IN VIRGINIA

Washington, July 7—(AP)—President Roosevelt announced today the death of Claude A. Swanson, Secretary of the United States Navy, at the Rapidan Camp in Virginia.

Swanson, former Governor and Senator from Virginia and Secretary of the Navy since President Roosevelt took office in 1933, was 71 years old.

First word of Swanson's death came from the White House when Mr. Roosevelt paid tribute to his associate as one who "brought to the public service not only ability and integrity but a loyalty to principle and to duty from which no consideration could move him.

"His career as a statesman has provided an inspiration for all public servants," the President said.

AT THE BELLE

"Broadway Serenade"

Jeanette MacDonald appears in her first solo starring role in "Broadway Serenade," which comes next to the Belle theatre. Hand upon the struggles of a young singer, this engrossing drama of modern night clubs to musical comedy stardom, the picture offers Miss MacDonald an opportunity to sing everything from grand opera to popular selections written especially for the product n.

Lew Ayres, in his most important role since his re-entry into films as the story composer's husband who, while his wife is winning stage triumphs, hides in the obscurity of playing a piano in a five-and-ten-cent store.

Frank Morgan, who is rapidly becoming famous for his interpretations of theatrical producers, essays the role once again. Ian Hunter supplies the third point in the love triangle, and Al Shean, of the famous team of Gallagher and Shean, appears as Manager of Herman, elderly cellist, who befriends the trio.

Supporting players chosen for important roles in the drama include Virginia Grey, Rita Johnson, William Dargan, Franklin Pangborn, Rita Hayworth, Elsie Dale, and Leon Belasco. The film was produced by Robert Z. Leonard.

In the story of "Broadway Serenade," Jeanette MacDonald as Mary Hale, and Lew Ayres, as her husband Jimmy Seymour, are employed as a team of entertainers in the Gay Nineties Club in New York. Success has become assured and strikes an influential customer the night Mary Hale accepts Lew Ayres learns that he has won the Davell Scholarship, giving him a year's study in Italy. The reason however, is not sufficient to pay for the cost of part of the trip and Ayres tries to sell a composition to Frank Morgan, theatrical producer. Miss MacDonald accompanies her husband to Morgan's office. Through a series of accidents she sings, but not the song her husband has written. Thinking that Ayres is busy while he is forced to stay at home and finishing work in cheap cafes. She rapidly rises to stardom as the "toast of Broadway." Through all of the "angel" of the show, misunderstands and a divorce ensues.

Upon the eve that Miss MacDonald is to marry Leonard Penn and marriage with Ian Hunter, the show producer realizes that he has purchased a new musical show and that she must stay to do it. It is a reconciliation ensues and the story has a happy ending with the pair reunited, she as a star and he as a writer of musical composers.

Outstanding among the songs heard in the production are "For Every Lonely Heart," "Don't Look At You," "Flying High," "Rhapsody," "Time Changes Everything," "No Time to Argue" and Ridin' on a Railroad." Also featured is a medley of old-fashioned songs sung by Miss MacDonald and a chorus, with Lew Ayres at the piano.

AT THE McCARTHY

"THE FRONTIERSMEN"

The changing of the cattle country from a lawless frontier region to a place in which men can live and work in peace is the theme of the new "Hopalong Cassidy" range drama, "The Frontiersmen," which is now playing at the McCarthy theatre. Also a thrilling action-loving "Hopps" William Boyd once again rides the dangr trail, the danger made for his capture order against a politician who uses his influence to get land for his rustling activities.

The Clarence E. Mulford plot deals with the struggle between Boyd and the mayor of a small New Mexico community for control of the local school and the intense rivalry among the cowpunchers for the attentions of the beautiful teacher brought down from Santa Fe to clean up the school.

Not knowing at first that the mayor is actually the leader of the band of rustlers who have been stealing cattle from his "Bar 20" ranch, Boyd hides his time until the bandit's infatuation for the schoolma'am leads him to betray himself. Using his influence over the school-kids, Boyd shows up rains in A-1 hero—the "Bar 20" foreman gets them and their teacher and his side when the time comes for the final show-down with the rustlers.

Boyd's saddlemates are George Hayes and Russell Hayden.

"The Girl From Mexico"

The companion feature, with the "frontiersmen" presents the amusing romantic and musical action of R. K. O. Radio's "The Girl From Mexico" with Lupe Velez in the title role, which is a picture that unfolds against a variety of interesting backgrounds including a tiny Mexican village, a New Orleans home, a Spanish night club, Madison Square Garden, the Polo Grounds and a wrestling arena.

Studded with laughs and fast-paced, the story finds Lupe supported by Donald Woods, who had the principal role in Zane Grey's "Heritage of the Desert" recently at the McCarthy Theatre, Leon (Ruben Lego) Errol, recently starred in comedy featurettes, and two newcomers to the screen, who will delight you with their respective comedy character roles, namely Linda Hayes and Donald MacBride. In addition to "The Girl From Mexico", and "The Frontiersmen" the program also includes the closing episode of the serial "Flying G-Men", which is truly excitement packed, also an amusing Walt Disney technicolor cartoon entitled "The Moth and the Flame."

FORCED OFF ROAD BY "ROAD HOG"

Bernhard Uehlein and Daughter of Cleveland, Ohio, Injured in Accident

Forced off the highway by the selfish driving of an alleged "road hog", an automobile driven by Bernhard Uehlein, 64, of Cleveland, O., turned over twice in the ditch near the Canada Cement Company railway siding on Highway No. 2 late yesterday afternoon. Uehlein and his teen-aged daughter Odelia sustained serious injuries and were taken to the Belleville General Hospital in Martin's ambulance.

Today C. W. Harvey announced that Uehlein had sustained a fractured collar bone and facial lacerations, while his daughter suffered head lacerations and multiple bruises and cuts. Mrs. Uehlein escaped with minor bruises and was not admitted to hospital. The accident was a complete wreck, after having rolled over twice as it left the highway.

"I was proceeding westerly and had just crossed a small railway track when I observed another motor car coming towards me and I left the centre of the road. I swerved to the right to avoid a head-on collision and in so doing left the road and the car seemed to leap over several times. How we escaped death I really don't know," Mrs. Uehlein told Motorcycle Patrolman Sam Ervine, who investigated the accident. The wrecked vehicle was owned by Uehlein and the car body was damaged beyond repair.

TWO TRANSIENTS GIVEN 3 MONTHS

Geo. D. Foster and Edward McDonald Charged With Vagrancy

George D. Foster and Edward McDonald, two transients who were arrested by P. C. Arnold on charges of vagrancy one week ago, were sentenced to serve not less than three months nor more than six in the Ontario Reformatory when they were convicted as charged before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., today.

The two men were found loitering in the vicinity of Bourk's Service Station shortly after 1.00 a.m. on June 28th. When stopped by Constable Arnott, Foster dropped what police say, later proved to be a long steel chisel, behind a tree. The constable said they took the men to the police station and later returned to find the chisel, which today in court was identified by A. Safe of this city, as having been stolen from his premises on June 27th. A steel bailing hook was found between the two transients and the tree the next day by Plainclothes Constable Fred Isard.

"Those tools could be applicable as burglars' tools, Your Worship," said Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., as he urged a stiff sentence. Both men were found guilty on the evidence of the prosecution.

Foster had a previous record, including wife-beating. Mr. Donnan informed the court from records.

PICTON TAX RATE IS CUT 2 MILLS

Rate of 33½ Mills Will be Levied, but 1½ Mills is Rebate from Government

Picton, July 7.—Picton taxpayers will be called upon to pay two mills less in taxes this year than last.

At the July meeting of the town council, regulations called for levying a rate of 33½ mills to raise the required amount, but as 1½ mills are received as a rebate from the government, local taxpayers will be asked to contribute 32 mills. Last year the actual levy was 34 mills with a mill being received from the government. The assessment this year was increased from $2,697,806.66 to $2,747,171.41.

The amounts which were required for various purposes are:

County requisition	$19712.97
Public school	14,200.00
Public library	3,125.00
Public school debenture	1,210.00
Public Utilities debenture	3,069.57
Street debenture	7,276.71
Collegiate purposes	9,987.81
Relief purposes	5,500.00
Town purposes	22,197.14
Separate School	1,186.23

The resignation, owing to illness of James Hicks, as street foreman, was accepted with regret.

Reeve H. S. Collicutt was appointed acting mayor while Mayor McKibbon is in England for some weeks. A presentation was made to the mayor, by the council of a travelling bag, in address being read by Town Clerk F. L. Ward. Later, the mayor entertained members of the town council at dinner at the Guild Restaurant.

A film was secured from the Frank Carleton Productions and it was decided to accept their offer to make a movie film of the town. This will be part of a film depicting country life in Canada to be shown in England. A copy of the film will be given the town free of charge and will form a permanent record of the town and district as it is today.

Bandmaster S. G. Lockyer stated yesterday that he had received communication from Oswego that an excursion would arrive here on July 18. They asked that Sunday night as the new park near local stores remain open so that the visitors could do some shopping. The local excursion to Oswego will be held in August. These excursions have become annual affairs and around a thousand take part in each of the excursions.

SHIFT TO BALKANS

Commons defining precisely the British position concerning Danzig, the former German city which Germany wants returned.

"Watch Balkans"

"Watch the Balkans" The Daily Mail (Independent) warned, and demanded a "plain statement" as British policy in the event of Hungarian or Bulgarian aggression, backed by Germany, against Rumania.

Noting the visits in Berlin of Premier George Klissevlanoff of Bulgaria and General Henry Werth, Chief of the Hungarian General Staff, the newspaper asked, "where would Britain stand" if Germany supported Hungarian claims to Transylvania or Bulgarian agitation for Dobrudja—both Rumanian territories.

"We are pledged to assist Rumania, if her independence were threatened....would it (the pledge) operate if Hungary or Bulgaria were the aggressor?" The Daily Mail asked.

R.A.F. Visits to Allied Countries

Usually well informed sources said there was a possibility that the formation of 12 Royal Air Force planes in Bastille Day exercises in Paris July 14 would be followed by R.A.F. visits to other countries to which Britain has given guarantees of help if attacked.

The Daily Telegraph (Conservative) said the Paris visit "may be assumed to be the forerunner of longer and more frequent stays by British machines and personnel in France and by French squadrons in this country."

The newspaper also suggested "large R.A.F. missions to eastern Europe" to make clear "beyond all doubt that Britain has wholeheartedly abandoned isolation."

British Trade Guarantees

Commenting on repeated delays in negotiations to add Soviet Russia to the British-French front, The Telegraph welcomed a British trade guarantee bill as a "concrete step" in contriving "other means of reinforcing the peace front." The measure was introduced yesterday in parliament to provide a £50,000,000 ($234,000,000) credit fund to help British allies buy arms.

"It goes without saying," The Telegraph said, "that the rearming of Poland, Turkey, Rumania and Greece is a matter of vital importance to our own national defence. The greater the individual resistance they are able to put up against aggression, the greater is the chance of keeping the main action of the peace front...."

Peace Front Must Mobilize

The Daily Herald (Labor) said: "The peace front must mobilize the whole of its economic power to support its purposes. Some of our fellow members of the front are comparatively poor, countries. The great margin of economic power which the peace front fortunately enjoys over the axis comes first and foremost from the productive capacity of British and French industry, not the strength of the two countries' banking systems.

"These loans are an economic counterpart to political and military agreements. They are, no less, barriers to aggression."

"We are to lend a hundred millions to our allies," the newspaper said. "Who are our allies?" Canada, New Zealand, Newfoundland. But they are not getting the money.....we should lend money to the countries where the men of our race dwell."

TWIN FILLIES ARE HEALTHY PAIR

Mother is Over 15 Years Old and Has Been Good Mare, Says Owner

Twin colts, a very rare occurrence were foaled last Saturday afternoon by a brown heavy draught mare, owned by Mr. Frank I. Knight, who lives on the fourth concession of Sidney, just on the Thurlow boundary.

The colts, both fillies, one brown and one black, are very healthy and active and are out in the field every day with their mother. As it is very rare for a dual foaling it was thought to both live, Mr. Knight was asked about it, and he said: "Oh, they'll come through all right, they'll live."

The mother of the two fillies is over fifteen years old, Mr. Knight said, "she's a good mare. I have owned her ever since she was a colt," he remarked.

The sire of the fillies, which is black, is owned by Mr. Arthur Vermilyea, of the fourth of Thurlow.

P. M. Allows Bar to Remove Coats in Court

Although it is not expected to be a continued practice or even a set precedent, Ida Worship, Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., permitted the law profession, attending today's police court, to discard their suit coats during the proceedings.

"Ida Worship informed me before court that he realized the day was exceedingly hot day and very humid and that he would permit the leading members of the bar to discard our suit coats, if necessary. I feel we should appreciate," informed Crown Attorney R. C. Donnan, K.C., as he shed his coat. However, Jean Cloutier was the only barrister present to take advantage of the County Solicitor, R. D. Arnott, K.C., and Allan Sprague holding down the bench accompanying His Worship, who wore his conventional business suit despite the heat wave.

Conditions Change Since Great War, Many New Issues

Nations of North Are Wondering Rather What Their Fate Would be in Event of Major Struggle of World Powers

SWEDEN PREPARED

Norway is Strong and Finland Has Public Spirit Without Equal, Difficult Barriers and Smart Army

Helsingfors, Finland, July 8 (CP)—Could the Scandinavian countries and Finland, famed for their neutrality, stay out of a general European war?

There was a time when a declaration of neutrality was enough, when staying neutral meant an opportunity to trade with both warring parties as the Scandinavian countries did during the Great War.

But these are different days. The fourth northern countries are wondering what their fate would be if war should come to Europe. An hour wank no more than to be left in peace, but there is such a thing as being forced into a fight.

Season for floods: Climates of different areas have different distribution of rainfall throughout the year, and thus most climates have a season when the chances for floods may be expected at any season; in others, there are certain months when it is certain that there be no floods. In eastern United States and in Canada there are least expected at this time of the year (summer); the greatest floods appear in March or April, but there may be notable floods as late as May and June Some rivers of the west fed by melting snows of high mountains have floods in early summer rather than late winter or spring.

HARVARD WINS GRAND CHALLENGE CUP AT HENLEY

Toronto Argonauts Defeated by Three Lengths in Final Heat

WATER VERY ROUGH

Henley-on - Thames, England, July 8—(CP)—Harvard's powerful crew won the Grand Challenge Cup at the Royal Henley Regatta today, defeating Toronto Argonauts in seven minutes, 40 seconds.

The race was rowed in extremely unfavorable weather conditions, probably among the worst in the 100-year history of the Regatta.

At the start the Canadians led but Harvard, stroked by Donald Smith, quickly came up and was out in front by the quarter-length at the quarter-mile marker. By the time they reached the half-mile post, the crimson boat had increased its advantage to three-quarters of a length.

From there on the new Englanders gradually pulled away, holding a 1 1-4-length margin at the three-quarter mile marker, though stroked at 32 to the Canadians' 36 and a three-length advantage at the end of the 1 5-16-mile course.

Burk Wins Sculls

Joe Burk of Philadelphia's Penn A. C. won the coveted Diamond Sculls for the second straight year. Rowing in rain and wind, Burk beat R. Verey of Poland by 1 1-4 lengths in the comparatively slow time of nine minutes, 12 seconds for the 1 5-16 miles.

37 DEATH TOLL BY HEAT IN U. S.

Highest Temperature is Reached at Altus, Oklahoma

Chicago, July 8—(AP)—A heat wave in which at least part of the United States' population suffered continued today with a death toll of 37 reported in 24 hours. Weather forecasters said they foresaw no immediate improvement.

Midnight temperatures indicated the oppressive wave was the heat, as was 93 at Phoenix, Ariz., 81, Louisville, Ky., 87; Dallas, Texas, 84 and Chicago, 81. The mercury mounted to 100 or higher at many points.

Overnight in New Mexico entered its fifth week, with scattered thunderstorms bringing scant relief. The weather Bureau expected some relief today in Iowa, Wisconsin, Lower Michigan, Missouri, and southern and extreme eastern Kansas.

Two humans and a score of mules died in Arkansas. Few England sweltered, the southwest sizzled and the south had 90 degree heat.

An unofficial high of 100 was recorded at Altus, Okla. It was 101 at Kokomo, Ind., hottest since August, 1937. Kansas City reported 105.

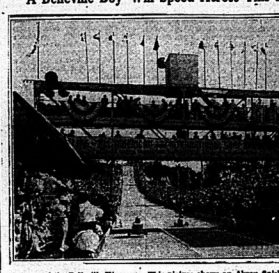
Hope Christians of World Will Unite To Buy and Save Mount of Olives

London, July 8—(CP)— The Mount of Olives, scene of Christ's betrayal, may be engulfed by the growing city of Jerusalem unless funds are raised to preserve it as a shrine, Malcolm MacDonald, Colonial Secretary, told the press yesterday.

The city government, he declared in an interview, has tried to prevent construction on the holy site, but cannot stave it off indefinitely because the land belongs to private owners.

"The great hope of the authorities in Jerusalem", the Colonial Secretary said, "and indeed it will be the hope of Christians everywhere, is that a trust may be formed similar to the national trust in England which will purchase this sacred place."

A Belleville Boy Will Speed Across This Line at Akron, Ohio



Winner of the Belleville Kinsmen-Ontario Intelligencer Soap Box Derby held here on Tuesday, July 11, will compete in the International Soap Box Derby at Akron, Ohio, on August 11th. This is his reward for his victory at Belleville and it gives him the opportunity to carry off international honours. Everyone will wish the winner of such a worthy event here the victory at Akron.

This picture shows an Akron finish. The thrill of thrills—a finish at the National Soap Box Derby finals. With the frenzied cheers of thousands ringing them on the three champions in each heat speed down the concrete ribbon at Derby Downs at Akron, Ohio. Excitement is at a high pitch, for two of these racers will be eliminated in this race, while the winner will compete in subsequent heats, possibly reaching the final race and a chance at the grand prize—a four-year college scholarship. Overhead, on the judge's bridge the results are broadcast to the listeners bank home. Out of the press stand (left foreground) wires carry the stories and pictures to the waiting readers, while newsreels and cameramen record each exciting race.

YANKEE CLIPPER HAS PASSENGERS ON SECOND TRIP

Passengers Include Newspaper, Magazine, Radio or News Service Executives

TRAVEL NORTH ROUTE

Port Washington, N.Y., July 8—(AP)—Nineteen persons, first to make a commercial transatlantic flight over the all-Canadian "northern route," left here today aboard Pan American Airways' giant flying boat Yankee Clipper.

Eleven of the passengers were newspaper, magazine, radio or news service executives.

The huge plane left the waters of Long Island Sound at 9:23 a.m., EDT and headed for Southampton by way of Canada and Newfoundland.

It lifted easily into the wind and headed out to open water. First scheduled stop was Biddeford, N.B. Other brief halts were scheduled for Botwood, Newfoundland, and for a final headhot for Southampton & Captain Arthur La Porte said he expected to reach Southampton in 24 1-2 hours.

The "luxury" passenger aboard the Yankee Clipper was Guido Coen of New York, bound for his former home in Florence, Italy, to see his son who is ill with infantile paralysis.

LAGUARDIA TRIES NEW CONVEYANCE

New York, July 8—(CP)— Mayor Laguardia, who has tried almost every type of conveyance, including a horse to an airplane, toured Fountain Lake at the World's Fair yesterday in a motor-boat built 22-foot model of the 975-foot liner Queen Mary.

The craft was built as a hobby by Oscar Fletcher of Toronto and arrived in the city after a 17-day trip from Toronto, Mr. Fletcher was the owner and pilot and Carl M. Lewis, radio operator and one-man crew.

BRITONS NO LONGER JUMPY BUT CALMLY FACE CRISIS

By GUY ROOADES

Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, July 8—(CP Cable)— Britons, toughened by familiarity with recurrent European alarms, are no longer jumpy when the totalitarian stabs begin to shout, but are working calmly toward full preparation for a new crisis, which they only half believe will come.

Theatres continue to flock to enroll in the numerous branches of national service, and at nights hear the drone of patrolling airplanes and watch white searchlight fingers grope among the clouds for practice targets. But they take it all pretty much as a matter of course now.

The preparations seem slow to some, but they have advanced immeasurably since the days of last September when Tom, Dick and Harry were digging in the parks to their trenches against an enemy who didn't arrive.

Air raid precaution workers, volunteer ambulance drivers, stretcher bearers, auxiliary fire service and other civil defence members abandon their usual pursuits and work hard to learn these jobs—just in case.

Want 500,000 Blood Donors

Registration has started of 500,000 volunteer blood donors wanted throughout the country to save the lives of possible air raid victims. Hadon, where 10 per cent of raid victims would probably require transfusions, needs an estimated 10,000 donors and the government hopes the list will have many workers so they are ready to reach in a crisis.

On newsreel screens and from radio broadcasters citizens see and hear public men repeat the assertion that this country is better prepared than it ever has been... but that much more remains to be done. Movie screens show the army, navy and air force at work. They look good and the public is pleased even though much of their enormous cost comes out of his pocket.

In 1902, he piloted the train which carried the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall and York, who later became King George V and Queen Mary. Survivors include a son, Stafford, Sarnia.

CHLORINE GAS OVERCOMES 14

Three in Serious Condition When Fumes Blown Across Bathers

Utica, N.Y., July 8—(AP)—Fourteen persons, three in serious condition, were in hospital today after they had been overcome by chlorine gas swept by wind over a municipal swimming pool.

Physicians and nurses treated 66 others with inhalators. The victims, many of whom were in the water, were affected when a gust of wind blew across the pool fumes from a storage tank which attendants had opened preparatory to chlorinating it with the pool's drinking apparatus yesterday.

Physicians here said they did not believe those seriously hurt would suffer permanent ill effects.

The chlorine was used to purify the water, a system in use in similar pools throughout the country.

Officials at Faxton Hospital, where 11 were treated, said William Rubin, 60, New York City; Clarence Mosher, 17, and Leonard Munson, 15, of Utica were in serious condition.

MONGOL TROOPS ARE SURROUNDED SAY JAPANESE

Mongolian Air Force Reinforced but Enemy Seems to be Superior

QUESTION OF SUPPLIES

Battleground Transformed Into Quagmire by Movement of Trucks

By RUSSELL BRINES

Associated Press Foreign Staff

With Japanese troops on the Mongolian Frontier, July 8 (delayed)—(AP)—With Mongolian troops surrounded by Japanese who hold parts of two contested heights, the future course of current border hostilities apparently depended today on whether Soviet-Mongolian forces can use available reinforcements.

A high Japanese officer said 60,000 Soviet reinforcements now are in Outer Mongolia. Japanese reinforcements were reported unofficially to have arrived. [1] Halhanarshan, indicating a possible extension of the front to the southeast or a new flank attack, a few days. The officer said Japanese had sufficient men and equipment to repel a Soviet attack in any part of Manchoukuo.

Khalka River Fighting

(Halhanarshan is some 185 miles southeast of Nomon Ihr, on the east border of Mongolia. The scene of the present border fighting, which has been intermittent since May 11, is along the Khalka River, about 60 miles east and south of the lake.

(A dispatch by the same correspondent yesterday told of fighting at the contested heights which apparently preceded the situation described today and was delayed in transmission from the inaccessible frontier area.)

The Mongolian air force has been reinforced, but Japanese apparently are superior here. Japanese believe their ground forces are hampered by lack of gasoline and ammunition at the front.

However, the Mongol attacks on Nomonhan Height resulted in tremendous casualties. Japanese prediction of an end of major hostilities first by Saturday and then by Sunday gave evidence of a Japanese desire to finish the warfare.

Supply Trucks Moving

Innumerable Japanese supply trucks are continuously moving on the long, dusty communications lines. Rain transformed the battleground into a quagmire. Both sides entrenched today and brought up heavy artillery.

Japanese occupied lower sections of Nomonhan, which is 150 feet above the Khalka, but the highest point in the area. Mongolians shot down one plane and damaged another yesterday.

Japanese surrounded the height, preventing escape of the Mongolians stationed at the height. They established down a barrage along the river.

Picturesque, Historic Dog-Carts Banned From Roads of Quebec

Quebec, July 8—(CP)—Presentday motor traffic on many roads and all the highways have caught up at last with Quebec Province's picturesque and historic dog carts.

Roads Minister Anatole Carignan announced last night that Quebec habitants no longer would be allowed to use their dogs to draw carts. The Roads Department, the Minister said, "with a view to promoting safer traffic conditions."

In some sections of the province dogs have been used since the days of new France to deliver bread and other produce in rural districts. Recently, however, they have become more and more an attraction for tourists.

Dogs, wearing spectacles, fedoras and with a pipe in their mouth and attached to small two-wheeled carts are a familiar sight to visitors to the province, especially to those who travel the "Beaulort Road" from Quebec to the famous shrine at Ste. Anne De Beaupre.

SHANNONVILLE POST OFFICE LOOTED OF $6

Henry Liddle Finds Letters Strewn About Floor in Opening Today

WINDOW JIMMIED

Shannonville, July 8 (Special to the Ontario Intelligencer)—Robbers entered the Post Office building here last night and stole money and several letters from His Majesty's mail. Entrance was gained by means of forcing open a side window of the Post Office, which is situated in the southerly end of the village. Provincial Police were notified early today and an extensive investigation was still in progress at noon.

Henry Liddle, village postmaster here, stated to Provincial Constable W. E. Smith who headed the investigation, that the Post Office had been securely locked last night. Marks on the side window clearly indicated, that the window had been jimmied by a sharp metal instrument. The inside of the Post Office was literally covered with letters and papers, many of which had been opened as the robbers were apparently seeking cash, which was found in some of the letters in transit.

The cash box only consisted of $6.00 worth of Canadian pennies, used in the stamp department, Mr. Liddle added today that a search took all large amounts of money which might be safe keeping, which attributed to the fact that only small change consisted the loot obtained by the robbers.

Police learned today that the theft was discovered in the village community hall last night and that of the opinion that the robbers entered the building during that time and completed their robbery, while the noise of the orchestra and dancers minimized the entering and exiting of the culprits.

Cash was undoubtedly the only loot sought and fortunately no registered letters were left in the building by Postmaster Liddle. Other letters were opened, however, and many other personal letters were included in the loot taken by the robbers.

Later today the Federal Postal authorities at Ottawa were notified of the robbery.

The horse was the property of Harry Smith, a fine black mare, and was being led to the home stable by Jack Rushlow, after having been newly shod by a downtown blacksmith.

Near the intersection of Pinnacle and Dundas streets the animal became frightened at the freight train on the O.N.R. Pinnacle street siding and bolted, breaking away from young Rushlow. The animal ran casually up Pinnacle street without attendance as surprised citizens stood gazing in amazement at a runaway such as this supposed to be modern age. The horse was easily captured near the post office by a passerby whose name was not afforded Mr. Smith who personally recovered the animal.

VEGETABLES ARE QUITE PLENTIFUL ON CITY MARKET

New Potatoes Offered in Quantity at 45 Cents a Peck

CHERRIES OFFERED

Today's early morning rain minimized the vendor attendance at the city market to a noticeable degree although no variations in the prices of farm commodities were in evidence.

"We could have stood twice as much rain, but we are thankful for that fine rain this morning. It was worth many thousands of dollars to the farmers of this district," remarked one vendor today.

An abundance of fresh green vegetables was offered for sale, new tempting carrots, green onions, dewred beets, lettuce, cabbage, cauliflower and radishes all being offered at 5 cents the bunch. Shelled green peas remained firm at 20 cents the quart measure while green and wax beans were offered at 10 cents the quart measure. New Canadian grown potatoes fell off to 45 cents the peck and were seen in large quantities.

Albino Caucasher.

One of nature's freaks was displayed by Fred Mossman, local market gardener, who found what might be termed an albino cucumber amongst the four dozen or more "cues". The all-white cucumber was ordinary in every respect with the sole exception that it was grave white on the outside, as well as the inside, measured about six inches long and about four inches in diameter. "Who ever gets it will have to pickle it anyhow," remarked Mr. Mossman.

Cherries On Market.

Home grown cherries made their initial appearance on the market today and sold at 50 cents the six-quart basket. Strawberries sold at three and four boxes for 25 cents in accordance to thrift grade, while gooseberries brought 25 cents the quart measure. Large floral displays added to the beauty of the outside market, many variations of cut flowers being offered for sale at various prices.

A slight decline in the price of eggs was noted as grade A sold at 23 and 23 cents a dozen, with grade B bringing 20 and 21 cents the dozen while butter sold at 25 cents per pound, straight. Fine fattened broilers were offered from 75 cents to $1.25 the pair, while milk-fed chickens were offered at the same quotations for the single bird. The market in general saw increased business in the later hours.

Quite Unconcerned Ralph Collins Paints City Hall-Flag Pole

Early-rising citizens stood open-mouthed and gazed upwards with awe as they glanced upwards to gain a better view at the city hall clock yesterday morning.

"Is he a flagpole sitter?" asked one merchant enroute to open his place of business.

"No, I'll bet it's some nut trying to win a bet," suggested another, as crowds gathered along Front street to gaze in wonderment upon such a strange sight in Belleville.

Suddenly a small urchin pushed through several persons congregated at the corner of Bridge and Front streets. "Do dere goin' to paint the old flag pole on the city hall at last, eh?" suggested the little fellow and that's exactly what was being done.

Sitting on a chair and suspended from a rope and pulley affixed to the top of the flag pole, Ralph Collins, son of Herb Collins, who is being employed to decorate the exterior of the city hall, was merely completing a week and a half's job by painting the flag pole.

"We announced last week we would paint the city hall flag pole the first calm day and early this morning, with only a slight breeze blowing, we decided this was the proper time to complete our work," stated Mr. Collins this morning.

"Were you frightened up there 200 feet from the ground?" an anxious citizen asked young Collins.

"Not after I once commenced to paint, although once or twice the suspended chair swung around the pole and it did give me quite a sensation," admitted young Collins as he descended with his handiwork.

The last time the flagpole at the city hall was painted was in 1920, according to officials.

DENTAL CLINIC HELD BY V.O.N. AT HEALTH CENTRE

Dr. Jack Marshall, Dentist of City, in Charge of Annual Dental Checkup

80 TOTS EXAMINED

Believed to be the only dental health clinic for pre-school age children held in Canada, the annual clinic sponsored by the City Welfare Department of the Victorian Order of Nurses was held in the welfare centre conducting its yesterday afternoon, over eighty children being examined by Dr. Jack Marshall who for the past four years has aided the nurses in this important part of the work.

The toddlers, most of whom were making their first acquaintance with the dentist, and veterans of five years of age, to whom this annual dental clinic and their family dentist are routine, were carefully examined for defective teeth and reports given to the mothers, together with data on how to maintain and improve the oral health of their little ones.

Miss Soular, nurse in charge, and Miss Webster had a busy afternoon with the reports. In order to make it possible for all mothers to attend, cars were sent for them from a distance, through the kindness of a number of interested ladies of the community.

Worst Child Newcomer.

Records show that healthy teeth have a most significant bearing on the basic development of the child. Miss Soular four years ago inaugurated the annual health clinic with Dr. Marshall in charge as part of the V.O.N. health clinic. At that time 90 per cent of children had defective teeth, and in the years since then the percentage has been reduced to 75 per cent of the children had teeth which had to be extracted when they were only four or five years of age. The results, however, are wonderful and of great encouragement. Through the knowledge gained by the annual clinic, learn the importance of proper nourishment and in the homes, and the response of the mothers to this instruction, the dentists have seldom had children of these first clinic visitors today have to undergo. The number of new encountered yesterday were those of newcomers to the clinic.

Care of the teeth of children begins before their birth, and in the pre-natal care attention is paid to important factors which contribute to healthy teeth, from the standpoint to the diet of babies, the constant care of the teeth and correct health habits in young children, give the children the foundation of perfect teeth. Dentists contend that three children come regularly to the clinic or are seen by the dentist until they attend school and come under the supervision of the senior nurse.

Belleville Takes Lead.

A recent article in the Toronto Star Weekly stated that Canada lacks pre-school age dental instruction, while such countries as Great England, France, Italy, Belgium, Switzerland, Norway and the United States where special endowment makes it possible to give this preventive dental work.

This being the case, Belleville has taken the lead in this important matter, for the dental health clinic here has been in progress for four years.

"Such a centre," the article continues, "would be a valuable information for mothers and suggest proper care of children's teeth at their home". This is exactly what the V.O.N. clinic is doing, and so eliminating the work left to establishing good dental health, the pre-school age.

Mothers have shown themselves most zealous in the co-operation of the dentist and nurses. Many immediately have their own dentist attend to defective teeth, it is hoped that following this check-up that for any families in the group who cannot afford dental care, some service club may help with dental corrections.

This annual clinic and regular supervision by the nurses is helping to overcome the most common physical defect in Canada today, tooth trouble.

Near-Centenarian Applies for Lodging At Police Station

"I'm too old, those modern speedsters just wear me out and give me fits, so I have to walk wherever I go," lamented 99-year-old Robert Beverley as he applied at the police station for a night's lodgings last night.

Foot sore and weary the grinkyfaced near-centenarian was given a tidy bit to the bunk in the cell block after having walked all of the distance from Trenton to Belleville yesterday, in conversation with Sergeant Arthur Booth, Mr. Beverley stated he was born in Bishops Court, Ireland, in County, just 99 years ago.

He was a prosperous farmer for many years, but of late has been taking things easy as a knight of the road during the warm summer months. "Those hot days on the highway are the very last," added the aged gentleman as he nonchalantly rolled over in apparent comfort on the hardened boards.

"I'm going to Kingston to see some friends, I walk along until I'm tired and then I sit down and rest. At my age it doesn't make much difference whether I get there today, tomorrow or next week you see," added the grey-whiskered old gentleman, who stated he had not seen any member of Canada. "I'm sorry to say."

Early the 99-year-old veteran of the highway bade ado to police officials at the city station and commenced his trek easterly.

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, July 8 (CP)—In dull and uninteresting trading on the Toronto stock exchange today, industrials were mostly irregular with little change noted. Golds were also irregular. Indicative of the lack of interest was the fact that only 34,000 shares changed hands in the first half of the two-hour session. This compared with 67,000 for the last five years.

Base issues were around the 95,000 mark.

Two of the golds, Aunor and Consolidated, were the most active issues on the board. Aunor, which heretofore had been at a price level, then closed at 2.58, ran up to 2.73. Consolidated Coniagrum, however, was slightly lower. Hard Rock was up a few cents. Activity and price changes among other golds were negligible.

Western oils were extremely dull, only Home Oil and Anglo-Canadian showing. The latter was up a few cents while Home was unchanged.

Imperial Oil was the most active of all stocks today dull and off list but showed no price change. International Petroleum showed a fractional gain. Base metals were quiet, only Noranda being appreciably unchanged on only a few sales. Pend Oreille and Lake Shore showed a few cents each.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, July 8—A few utilities were active and strong while the buying play in today's brief stock market proceedings was restricted. Specialist leaders were left to shift for themselves at slightly lower levels. Transfers totalled approximately 100,000 shares. Closing prices were irregular.

Steele kept declines to minor amounts as a brisk rebound in the closing hour failed to register for next week. At Pittsburg output was expected to start at 45 per cent of theoretical capacity, up nine points from last week.

The battle in Congress against the further acquisition by the Treasury of foreign silver brought another cut in the London bar metal figure of the equivalent of about one cent a pound.

"LEFTY" WEEKS NOT ELIGIBLE FOR LOOP PLAY

South Hastings League Passes on Certificates at Loop Meeting

RULE NEVER PASSED

Cannifton Team in First Place by Win Over Latta by 8-7

Foxboro, July 8 (Special)—Despite the firm conviction of the writer, and also a majority of the South Hastings League executive that it was there, and that all outside players in the future were to be strictly barred from further participation in the league, it now appears, that no such ruling was ever passed. The only document, also, which took place along those lines at the annual meeting in 1936 was left with the league secretary-treasurer merely agreeing amongst themselves to have such a ruling placed on their lineups. Such was the bombshell, that exploded at Cannifton last evening, when the league executive met to pass on the players' names for the coming season.

The meetings opened with President Jim Sloper in the chair and with Secretary Arthur Hall reading the minutes of the last meeting, upon which no comment was made. Dr. Welsh, manager of the Latta baseball club, then read the applications of two articles appearing in recent issues of a local press, which he claimed were altogether out of the spirit of the meeting, and also the management of the Latta team, demanding retraction should they not appear in the next issue. Minutes of the 1938 annual meeting were searched for mention of the matter, which practically everyone present had felt had been passed barring all outsiders from the league, but according to the Secretary there was no mention of it. The motion passed, merely, that each team had multiple days in the dispense with the services of their outside talent.

Forced to Drop Weeks

With the executive getting down to the business of the night, the player's lists of Shannonville and Foxboro were passed without objection, but abruptly a snag was struck, when name of the Cannifton roster were read off. Foxboro and Shannonville protests were pounced to "Lefty" Weeks appearing on the lineup, claiming that the player in question had played in Belleville and that all city players were ineligible. Weeks was finally dropped from the list and no further objections were made. Latta were forced to drop John Carr and Jack Young from their lineup as Shannonville protests were also objected on account of these two players residing in Belleville, especially than that which was represented by the team.

The standing in the S. H. League tightened up considerably last evening with the defeat of Cannifton at the hands of Shannonville who, until then, had been tied for first place with Cannifton. Now however, Cannifton are on the first place position having eked out a close 8-7 decision from the Latta boys on their home diamond and Foxboro were victorious in one game of third position when they took Shannonville into camp by rather a see-saw contest at Cannifton. Latta and Foxboro are Cannifters then the Latta team were out in front but by the closing frames the Cannifton lads got the advantage who was doing the hurling for the locals. Carr was relieved on the mound by Fred Bird, who buried steady ball for the winners in the latter's team of a playoff berth as Cannifton have two more games with Latta scheduled games and cannot be dislodged from first position.

Out of Losing Streak

Foxboro hopped abruptly out of their losing streak which had gone four games and out of dropped them from a tie for second position with the cellar, when they visited Shannonville and took a rare licking from the "Hawks." Ketcheson, hurling for the winners was a rare form pitching the homesters to one small hit and deserving a better fate than his errors in the last inning allowed the losers to push across their lone tally. In banging up his first form victory of the season, Ketcheson struck out nine and walked only one while Judy, on the mound for the homesters, fanned an equal number but was nicked for four hits, while he hit two and walked one.

Foxboro scored single runs in the second inning as Stewart singled, stole second and was brought home by a pitched ball and Wait was safely deposited on first through errors. Shannonville got their lone tally in the last frame, also after two were out, as Hill singled and stole second, Ketcheson sacrificed to advance him and over his head for an error to score Hill from second base.

The lineups:

Foxboro: Ashley, cf; Breese rf; Wright 2b; Spencer ss; Proctor 1b; Stewart c; Ketcheson p; Wait 3b; Mr. Pearce lf.

Shannonville: Cook ss; Spencer 1b; Dies 2b; Carr p; Rosebrugh lf; Snider cf; Marcle rf; Barbershock lf and Hill 3b.

Umpires: Loucks, plate and Sager, bases.

BRITONS

Fewer complaints have appeared in newspaper editorials about civilian air raid shelters although some papers are still devoting considerable to the difficulties the small householder is reported to be having erecting what are commonly referred to as Anderson's steel shelters for protecting cellars. (Sir John Anderson, Lord Privy Seal, is in charge of air raid precautions.)

Kept Awake at Night

In the provinces the occasional thunderclap of one of the last airplanes keep him awake at nights. Some red-faced country squires have visited airport commanders complaining, "by gad, sir, it's a bit thick," but they have generally been pacified promptly in the newspapers and usually cease complaining, after a while.

The government has announced its plans to feed evacuated citizens for 48 hours after they leave the large cities and to others have been asked to buy emergency food supplies now, and to store them so as to avoid overtaxing the shops in the event of crisis.

Gradually London's trenches and those of most other cities have ceased to be open ditches and unsightly piles of earth. "The trenches of the future will be underground" and have entrances into which citizens can dive if the air raid sirens sound.

Evidence of Slackness

Occasionally newspaper scan evidence of slackness and indecision in the government's arrangements. In Salisbury Square, a short city block from The Canadian Church, workmen have erected a road surrounded by heavy boards. Workmen leave it there one night in September, presumably to be converted into sandbags.

The Munich agreement came and the workmen went. For 10 months thereafter the road was a mass of destruction and pedestrians have walked around it as they whipped its grains into their eyes.

But it is not so bad now for time and nature have intervened. There is quite a bit of grass growing on the mound's sides.

Wire-Haired Terrier Hero of All Dogs In Deloro District

A seven months' old wire-haired fox terrier is this week the dog hero of Deloro and district, having gained notice by the pup faced a 200-pound black bear alone, and probably saved the lives of two small children from serious injury or death.

Skipper, the terrier had been playing in the garden of the home of Mrs. Pollillo, which is situated on the Thompson Lake district of Deloro, when the bear made its entrance away played his two daughters, Mary, four years, and Ena, two years.

Wandering into the clearing from a nearby bush, the bear, attracted by the barking of the dog, Mrs. Snider arrived she barged ashore at the dog. Dashing into the home, Mr. Snider grabbed his rifle.

Meanwhile, Skipper had placed two shots in the bear's head. This was the largest animal he had ever seen, Mr. Snider later reported.

CONDITIONS

To begin with, there is the economic blockade. It is taken for granted that northern powers are at war with Germany, would impose one immediately. Germany, in turn, would order her battle navy could be expected to try to seal the Baltic passages between Denmark and the south tip of Sweden.

Effect on Germany

Observers see every likelihood, therefore, that Germany would at once attempt to blockade the Scandinavian countries for war materials and grain. Germany's own grain needs and would continue to need Sweden's high-grade ore for munitions. And if the Scandinavian countries and Finland should sell munitions to Germany, the other side might charge them with having become "belligerents."

Their attention is on Russia as the next possible victim. Germany and Russia might seek to take over Finnish islands in the Gulf of Finland for defense of Leningrad. Finland have a suspicion that Russia, if planning aggression, might merely try to occupy Finland as a defensive measure.

Denmark's Position.

Denmark is directly under the arm of Germany, with no natural barriers. It is agreed she could do little more than declare herself neutral. So the Danes do not bother to arm extensively.

Norway is well prepared to defend her neutrality. She has a small but efficient navy, competently officered and trained, one of the world's best munitions and has an important air force.

Norway is protected by a rocky coastline and is farther from the continental mainland. She is taking no chances. Her government specially with aircraft. A submarine patrol is her extensive coastline.

Finland has a public spirit with-in, difficult frontiers, an efficient little army, a few ships and by a steadily growing air force.

Russia's position is peculiar. She, in an emergency, Sweden, Norway and Finland might join forces and with a well-trained army of at least 1,000,000 men, backed by Swedish wealth and munitions.

TORSO SUSPECT CONFESSES CRIME TO DETECTIVES

Frank Dolezal, Unemployed Bricklayer ,Breaks Down After Questioning

GIVES VERSION

Cleveland, July 8—(AP)—Sheriff Martin O'Donnell announced today questioning of an unemployed bricklayer today as he sought to clear up dismembered slayings that have baffled authorities for four years.

O'Donnell said Frank Dolezal, 52, the suspect, had signed a confession to the Public Safety.

O'Donnell said Dolezal admitted killing the pieces the body of Mrs. Pollillo, 39, and another victim, and tossing the head, lower legs and thighs into Lake Erie in January, 1936.

The sheriff indicated that he would make no definite attempt to link the suspect to the 11 other torsos and heads until he has more facts of the Pollillo case.

Gives Confession:

"Our records show some different stories in the manner in which Mrs. Pollillo's body was dismembered and the manner in which the others were, "but I still feel that the murderer of Mrs. Pollillo is responsible for the others," the Sheriff Gerber said.

Dolezal will be questioned further about his story of the disposal of parts of Mrs. Pollillo's body, O'Donnell declared. He said some parts of the body, Dolezal said, probably still in the lake were in reality found on a rubbish heap. The Weather Bureau said the lake was frozen over at the point where the prisoner said he disposed of the head.

Man's Version of Crime

O'Donnell said Dolezal, as saying he killed Mrs. Pollillo after a butcher-knife fight over money, gave the following version of the story:

"She picked up a butcher knife and swung at me. I took the knife away. I grabbed her and killed her. Then I cut her head off and then I cut her body into pieces.

"I put the pieces in her body in a basket. It took me three or four trips to dispose of them. I went down to the lakefront about four times to get rid of the head. I was not washed ashore."

BOULDERS ROLLED UPON HIGHWAY

C.N.R. Engineer Returning Home After Work in Car Escapes Injury

Provincial and city police today were at a loss to understand why two large boulders were found lying upon the travelled portion of the highway approximately 100 feet to the yards east of Cemetery street early this morning. The large stones, weighing between 200 and 300 pounds discovered lying in the centre of the road by Provincial Constable A. Constable Arthur Smith and Provincial Constable A. A. Starke investigating the matter with every effort removed the large boulders from their position. Police searched the surrounding area, but only found three translents sleeping beneath the bridge on Cemetery street. The men assured the police they knew nothing about the boulders and had not seen nor heard any unnecessary disturbance. The stones were apparently placed there by day.

Some years ago police were confronted with the identical circumstances of boulders mysteriously. It is the belief of the authorities that the boulders were purposely placed there by some person with the intention of causing the wrecking of a motor car. The purpose of wrecking a certain car is not known, but the circumstance that point last night.

Police are continuing to probe their investigations in an effort to ascertain the guilty culprits.

It is understood that there are convinced that persons in the district are responsible, rather than strangers, who would have no object in view of laboring to roll such large boulders to the middle of the road. The large boulders were found alongside the roads by many

MERCURY SOARS TO HIGH OF 92

Heat Wave of Past Three Days Partly Relieved by Rain Storm

Yesterday was the hottest day of the year, it was officially announced today, as the mercury soared until it reached as high as 92, Filtration Plant officials announced today. As citizens sweltered in the continued heat during the day, "a steady stream of motorists was seen leaving the city early last evening in an effort to relieve their fatigued feelings, the result of a three-day heat wave. Today's early electric storm materially assisted in the lowering of the temperature and relieved the strained feelings from the excess heat of the past week.

COOLER WEATHER

Cooler weather will prevail Sunday in Ontario and Sunday night, the Burea of Meteorology, Ottawa, and the Maritimes will be able to forget about the heat for a while.

Weather bureau experts were not able to say how long the cool weather would prevail. They pointed, with a measure of enthusiasm, to the fact that wave is the first this way in Western Canada and likely to be the last in the east as it was at July, 1936. That year records were broken, and the temperature for days later the mercury shaked up new all-time highs in Ontario.

Toronto, and in fact other Ontario points, experienced heavy showers during the night that resulted in lower temperatures. The temperature stood at 80 at 10 a.m. but the humidity was high.

Haying Delayed

Owen Sound's temperature dropped from 90 to 67 within a few hours after a heavy storm there. Haying was delayed, but all crops will benefit. Galt, Ont., reported a drop from the record high of 96 to 76 during the night, and by 9 a.m. the mercury had marched to 82. They had no rain last night.

Woodstock district farmers expressed anxiety about their crops, but needed rain. Last night the 24 hour period of torrid temperatures ended.

Light rains fell in Ontario's north country. North Bay thermometers stood at 72 today.

The western section of Quebec Province was cloudy and warm with a 87 recorded at 8 a.m. Later showers brought relief and the high temperatures dropped three degrees. Only a few places in Quebec registered rain although a heavy thunderstorm passed over the province.

FRANK LAMM HURT IN CRASH, DIES

Inquest Held and Adjourned Pending Lamm Released for Burial

Frank Lamm, 160 Best street, Buffalo, N.Y., who was critically injured in a head-on collision at Chapman's Corners, three miles east of Belleville, yesterday afternoon died in the Belleville General Hospital two hours after admittance. An inquest enquiring into his death was opened at the Marin Funeral Home this morning, but Saturday morning and preliminary evidence was taken and the body released to relatives where it will be taken to Buffalo, N.Y. for interment. The inquest will be resumed one week from Monday.

Charles H. Holt, another victim of the accident, and driver of the car in only in "fair" condition according to Dr. Austin Walters, who is in attendance. He sustained a severe concussion, broken arm and severe lacerations about the face. There is a possibility he may recover. Charles Stettenbeck, who was riding in the rear seat was the least injured of the trio and is making satisfactory recovery.

Mr. Lamm owns a large restaurant in Buffalo, N.Y., and has resided in that city for many years, where he is well known and highly respected. Today, as the coroner, he was a regular tourist to Canada to enjoy fishing and hunting in the waters for some years. He is survived by a wife and three children.

Alice Marble of U. S. Wins Women's Title At Wimbledon Tourney

Wimbledon, England, July 8 (CP) —Playing one of the greatest games of her life, Alice Marble of San Francisco, beat Kay Stammers of England today, 6-2, 6-4, in the women's singles at the Wimbledon championship to her United States crown.

Miss Marble gave the English player little time to get her second set and, from the very outset, was completely in command of the game.

JAPANESE CLAIM SOVIET TROOPS ROUTED

Tokyo, July 8 (AP)—The Japanese army headquarters tonight announced its forces had routed Soviet-Mongolian forces on important strategic Baleogol Heights along Manchukuo's western border, ending engagement today on the disputed frontier between Outer Mongolia and Manchukuo.

The Japanese reported they captured 30 machine guns and additional Mongol prisoners and forced the enemy to withdraw from the battleground toward the Khalka River.

A communique so reported of the new air battle in which the Japanese downed 26 Soviet airplanes over Lake Tor without losing a plane.

Coast Forts Built at Danzig

Warsaw, July 8 (AP)—The newspaper ABC said today that Danzig is constructing coast defense fortifications for the Free City.

Concrete emplacements for artillery and machine guns are being installed, the newspaper said, on a line from the Vistula at Mahlbude, between Danzig and the Polish Port of Gdynia, to Schivenhorst, near the Baltic Sea, on the border of Germany.

A solid digging of trenches and erection of frontier barricades also has been pushed in order to rush coast defenses.

Authoritative Polish sources said they regarded the military preparedness in Danzig were being investigated carefully.

Suspend Loans To Idle Employees

Detroit, July 8 (AP)—General Motors Corporation, anticipating a possible 1939 or starting 1940 model production because of a strike of 136,000 employees today suspended loans to idle employees.

Under the plan the Corporation had placed in effect an "Income Security Plan, designed to help the employees during inevitable periods of temporary layoff," it provided that General Motors would advance the difference between an employee's actual earnings and 60 per cent. of his normal income.

Donaldson Knudsen, General Motors President, announced that the plan would be depended in all cases by affected directly or indirectly by the strike, which he said "is unjustifiable under any of the jurisdictional fight" between the Congress of Industrial Organizations and the American Federation of Labor United Automobile Workers' Union.

Egg Prices Drop—Butter Unchanged

Toronto, July 8—Losses in eggs ranged to 1c per dozen during yesterday's session of the Toronto Produce open produce market, according to the Dominion Department of Agriculture. Prices showed no change in butter and cheese.

Falling consumption, which dealers attribute to the present heat wave, occasioned reductions in all divisions of the egg market. Even though fresh receipts were still arriving in volume it was found necessary to lower values in an effort to stimulate sales. Ungraded eggs dropped 1c to 20c per dozen for grade A-large, 18c for medium, 16c for B-large, 15c for C grades, and this decline was passed along to the retail section of the market. Graded shipments were easier on top grades only at 23c for grade A-large, 21c for mediums, 17c for B's and 15c for C grades.

The butter market showed little change from that of the previous session. Fair demand kept receipts moving freely with no accumulation occurring in supplies. Shipments from the west were not pressing on the market, and one car was reported sold locally at the unproved price of 22 3-4c. Actual creamery solids held unchanged at 22c for No. 1 grades and 21 1-4c for 2S score. Prints traded in retail channels at 23c to 23 1-2c for 1S grades and 22 1-4c to 22 3-4c for 2S score.

Trading remained stagnant on the cheese market, but former values prevailed. New, large parafinned was offered to the wholesaler at 13c ,twins at 13 1-4c and triplets at 13 1-2c.

Modified Produce Holds.

Montreal, July 8 (CP)—Potato buyers, cheese and egg dealers were mainly steady on open produce markets yesterday, with the Canadian Produce Association reported.

Creamery butter prints to retailers sold for 23c-23 1-4c a pound and solids for 22 1-2c-22 3-4c. Western butter delivered in Montreal was unquoted. Quebec No. 1 pasturised in wholesale jobbing lots made 22 1-4c. Receipts, 770 boxes.

Ontario white cheese was quoted at 13 3-4c a pound and colored at 14c. Quebec white cheese was quoted at 12 1-2c and colored at 13 1-2c. Receipts, 2,387 boxes.

Graded egg shipments in used free cases were offered at 20c a dozen for A-large, 18c for A-medium, 17c-18c for B-large, 15c for C. Receipts, 375 cases.

How to Handle Hogs in Hot Weather

Hogs cannot endure excessive heat without proper accommodation.

Hogs do not perspire and therefore their bodies are not cooled by the evaporation of moisture. This fact accounts for the habit all hogs have of wallowing in whatever substance they may find that will moisten their bodies.

Trucks and stock cars should be bedded with sand and the sand made as moist as possible.

Stock yards should be equipped with shelter from the sun and a liberal supply of water.

Hogs should be handled as carefully as possible because a little excitement is often fatal in hot weather.

Some good lots of hogs received during the week of July 7, 1939, are as follows:

ANOTHER BRITISH ROYAL VISIT.

King George Sixth and Queen Elizabeth are to be the guests of the King and people of Belgium in October.

Their visit to France last year was a memorable one and their latest visit, that to the New World, was one of the greatest in history. Now they are to visit one of the oldest countries in Europe, a country between whom and Britain are most cordial relations.

The world looks forward to the coming royal visit with more than accustomed interest.

IN EUROPE

The world is pleased at the lessening of the tension over Danzig, the Free City, which has been the source of concern for some months. The concern is not ended of course, but there are signs that there is a more potent attitude at work to curb aggression, a power so great as to cause hesitation on the part of any nation which might be the part of aggressor were it not for the very strong facts facing them.

British Labor the other day appealed through the radio to the German people to impress upon their government the idea that they do not want war. That is the sign of the strong desire for peace and the faith that other nations will have peace if only dictators will not force them against their will into a war of conquest.

Probably one of the poorest pieces of criticism was made the other day when Italian papers referred to the fear of war being felt by Britain, when there is no actual danger. Just the same, Englishmen are convinced that by making the show of strength, the zeal of some governments for interfering in other nations' affairs might have provoked trouble, had they desired.

Stronger and stronger becomes the British attitude on interference in Danzig. It is now said that even an inside coup in Danzig inspired by an outside party would be looked upon as an act of aggression. France has taken a similar stand, the impression being that Britain and France can find the only guarantee of peace by taking power to the totalitarian lands.

Now the central powers' chiefs turn to Hungary and the Balkan section of Europe, it is said. The land in and around Czecho-Slovakia had been a fertile field for possibilities up to a short time ago but that period is passed, it is to be hoped. Now the axis powers are talking of things Balkan.

THEATRE ON HILLSIDES

Motorists see many sights but along some of the roads in New York State they come across young people gesticulating, posturing, dramatizing on the hillsides, delivering sculptured sentences foreign to the New England tongue. In fact there are seventy-five such drama groups studying in the open air of summer. According to the New York Times they combine work with vacation. They get sunburn while learning their lines and these outdoor rehearsals remind one of the Greeks reaching their inspiration from nature.

Speaking of the government - sponsored productions in the U. S., and the possible effect of their discontinuance "it is estimated that during the life of the Federal Theatre Project 30,000,000 people saw its productions. That is an immense audience. Has it been permanently won to the foot-lights, or will it melt away?

"Part of it will melt away. Many people, never drama enthusiasts, will find other recreations.

"But with a 'theatre consciousness' diffused among 30,000,000 persons there will doubtless remain a permanent gain for the better side of the theatre. The Federal Theatre Project cut deeply into a new strata of theatregoers who are not all going to give up their entertainment habits. Not many can say exactly how the group will move. Probably it will move in several directions. The little theatre movement should be greatly stimulated. The Summer theatres, where serious plays are being tried out, will benefit. More plays will be sold for reading. It is likely that the better commercial road shows, which hibernated for a long period but are now beginning to show signs of life, will drain off some of the Federal Theatre audience. The seeds of drama, once planted, often sprouts in the most unlikely places."

VACATION LURE

Take me back to the lakes again,
To the curlew's cry from a marshy fen,
Away from the marts and the mobs of men,
And the harrowing, humid heat;
Back where the mellow moonlight beams
On scented vales and singing streams,
Back to a lotus land of dreams,
Far from the sordid street;

Take me back where a man can laze
On sylvan slopes where the cattle graze,
Far from the madding, modern maze
Of a town that ever tires;
Back to serene simplicity,
Under a star-shot canopy,
Back to the scenes that hold for me
The end of all desires.

ALL ABOARD FOR THE BIG KIDDIE KAR DERBY, 1939 Model, like the Greatest Show on Earth Bigger and Better than ever, all ready for the starter's gun on Derby Hill, Belleville, Tuesday, July 11, sponsored by the Kinsmen Club of Belleville, and this Great Family Newspaper. Greater interest is being manifested in this unique event this year than ever, promising a large list of contenders for the prizes and the opportunity of winning the Grand Prize, a trip to Akron, Ohio, all expenses paid, and competition for world championship honors. Toronto and other Canadan cities are having Soap Box Derbys this year preliminary to the Akron meet assuring that Canada will be well represented in the finals, the cream of Canadian youth meeting the cream of American youth in friendly and healthy competition, with the prospect of many distant countries being represented as well, including South Africa and South America. Thus you can see, my friends, that this meeting of Canadian youth on Derby Hill, Belleville, Tuesday, July 11, may have a world-wide significance, and whatever grownups may think about it, a deep significance to boys from 9 to 15 inclusive who are eligible to enter, building their own cars from specifications furnished by the Belleville Kinsmen Club. No car may cost more than $10 to build and no adult may have a hand in its construction, except by giving advice.

The first organized Soap Box Derby was run off as a promotion of the Dayton, Ohio, Daily News in 1934, and in 1935, the All-American Soap Box Derby was held at Akron, Ohio, after more than 50,000 boys throughout the country had taken part in the preliminary contests, 52 city champions being represented in the finals at Akron, with 100,000 spectators.

The International Soap Box Derby was launched in 1936 in conjunction with the All-American race, an outstanding feature being the participation of South Africa where a Soap Box Derby had been held and the winner sent to Akron ,all expenses paid. In that year 100,000 boys participated, 116 local races. Every year since the Derby has been growing in interest and importance and the Kinsmen Club of Belleville has awakened interest in Canada and Soap Box Derbys are held regularly in various cities including Toronto and Montreal, while Winnipeg and other Western cities are taking an active interest in the sport.

Belleville Kinsmen Club members are to be congratulated in fostering this all-boy sporting event. Grownups are too apt to forget the growing boy in their interest in sports for grownups, and as the boy is the father of the man boys who are good sports as the result of the encouragement of their elders will be good sports as men with all that means in the highest type of citizenship. Let's all take an interest in these sports and not only help the boys but help ourselves in the knowledge of contributing to a higher standard of humanity in the rising generation.

ANCIENT AND HONOURABLE AND STAID PHILADELPHIA, sanctified by the early Quaker settlers and Governor William Penn, who attained fame as an early real estate dealer, particularly in his dealings with the Indians, has apparently succumbed to the speed craze for it is reported an autogiro service has been installed to bring the mail quicker to the post office, and the mail planes have been taught to land on the roof of the Philadelphia post office, no less, a saving of forty minutes.

30 YEARS AGO

JULY 8TH, 1909

We wish the Mayor and Aldermen a happy vacation. Of more council meetings for two months.

The members of the Lodge of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers have erected on Pine Street at the corner of Bridge Street, a handsome, commodious and well appointed brick building which will be used for the purpose of the order in the city. Recently the building was opened and about thirty members were present besides the Grand Chief Person, M.P.P., and Mr. J. L. Ross, local Secretary of the W.C.T.U.A. The chair was occupied by Mr. William Rogers and he was assisted by the corresponding order officers. Mr. William Mair, who has been running an engine out of Belleville for 33 years made an excellent address, as did also several other members.

Mr. Fred Quick has left to visit the Yukon-Alaska Exposition at Seattle.

The pendlous, sickness and welfare scheme is a comprehensive one operated with the assistance of an insurance company. Employees' contributions vary between three-pence and three shillings a week, the position scheme provides for death benefits of 50 pounds, 100 pounds or 200 pounds and weekly payments up to 2 pounds on leaving the company's employ at age 65. The sickness and welfare side, controlled largely by members' own legates, ensures cash payments during six months of sickness, dividends at Christmas if the funds allow it, dowries for girls about to be married. The sum of 5 pounds or 3 shillings is paid to the wife of any man on the worker of a year's standing who gives birth to a child.

The management advisory committee consists of about twenty delegates from different sections of the factory. It meets once a month to discuss with the directors any problems or suggestions or any grievances they may have. Its deliberations and decisions are made public.

The suggestion box actually there are several of them—is the worker's alternative to approaching his manager or the advisory committee. Suggestions and complaints are investigated by the Managing Director and are seen only by him. Any suggestion or invention that can be put into practice is rewarded by a cash premium according to its degree of value.

New workers are given an insight into the system and welcomed to the factory by a member of the staff detailed for the task to show them on their arrival.

Foremen and managers are given lectures on elementary psychology with a view to getting on better terms and handling of the workers, once a fortnight.

First aid is in charge of a qualified nurse, presiding over a fully-stocked first-aid station.

The fire brigade is made up of volunteers, has a fire-fighting trailer pump, and modern equipment.

The sports club is directed by a full-time secretary-coach. Fifteen workers on joining the firm consents to pay 6 pence for the year's subscription for membership. The sports ground is one of the largest in the district. It is equipped for cricket, football, netball and sports meetings. Facilities for changing and refreshments are provided in the sports pavilion. A football match is in the course of erection. The club has a miniature golf course, boxing ring, four hard tennis-courts, an open-air dancing platform.

On the ground floor of the Community House is a large and excellently equipped social hall with stage and parquet dance floor. The hall is opened every evening from five till midnight. Refreshments are obtainable at the buffet and popular pastimes include table tennis, billiards, chess and darts. Once a week there is held a dance often followed on summer nights by swimming in the floodlit pool. Professional concerts are also arranged to give performances in the social hall.

Factory departments frequently organize outings, dinners and dances to encourage the spirit of co-operation. Special trains and coaches are hired to take factory parties to the seaside and arrangements are made in the summer for the use of the social hall for indoor functions.

The firm's annual sport the Bata Sports Club meets teams from other local industrial concerns and its members have acquitted themselves well in the district leagues.

The swimming pool is the latest of the sports club's amenities. It is an open-air baln, 60 feet long and with a capacity of 75,000 gallons. Water is constantly cleaned in a modern filtration plant. There are diving and springboards, and dressing accommodation for both sexes. The pool is reserved for the use of staff and their families.

Children's playground contains a paddling pool, chute and swings, and is always open for the enjoyment of youngsters living on the firm's estate.

Girls' Clubs for workers in the factories meets every Tuesday evening, when the girls have gymnastics, outdoor games, dancing and other social attractions.

Dramatic and debating society produces concerts and sketches, arranges debates in which all fellow-workers can join, and encourages any musical and other talent in the factory.

The rhythmagicians, under the direction of an employee, provide dance music for social functions.

British legion, Bata works branch was formed in 1936, with General Spears as its president. A Bata women's section was formed, under the presidency of Miss N. Maundrell, daughter of General Sir Frederick Maurice, the Legion's President.

Community house is the firm's social centre, and in its dining hall which will accommodate more than a thousand people, breakfast, lunch, tea, and supper are served every day of the week. Prices are very low, and a satisfying lunch can be obtained for about twopence. The menus are varied each day, and there is always a choice of two or four main items. Those who prefer to bring their food from home augment it from the dining-hall kitchen. In same building is a tasteful restaurant where slightly higher-priced meals are obtainable.

Further social centre is the cinema is connected to loud speakers covering all parts of the Bata estate. Broadcasts of light music announcements regarding social affairs are made early in the morning. At lunch time, in the evening and during the morning break.

Accommodation in the five-storey Community House is provided for single male employees. There are four floors in all. Flatlets are for one, including bathroom; single bedrooms for two; and dormitories for four men. All are fully furnished in modern style and are equipped with wardrobes and toilet-tables. Meals are made and the rooms cleaned and tidied by the housekeeper and her staff. Hostel is maintained at very little profit and constant hot water is available. On the top floor are rest and recreation rooms and a gymnasium.

The young men's hostel is also incorporated in Community House. Hostel members are boys between the ages of 14 and 16 who come from distressed areas and other parts to work in the factory. It is aimed to give them a sense of economic independence and to train them to become citizens of the enterprise. They earn their wages in the ordinary way, and from their earnings they pay two shillings a week for their accommodation, about ten shillings for their food and all their laundry and other services. A percentage of the balance has to be saved, but the remainder they can spend as they like.

The young men have a complete floor of Community House, where they live under the supervision of a housemaster. There are four dormitories which accommodate thirty boys each. They have their own diningroom, comfortably furnished clubroom, baths, hot and cold showers, classrooms where they must attend lessons on two or three evenings a week, according to the season. Instruction is given in English and general subjects, handicraft and specialist subjects to assist them in gaining a thorough understanding of their work.

On summer evenings and during the week-ends the boys will take part in organized games. They have their own Scout troop. They return to their homes in the summer holiday of a month at Christmas. At these times they withdraw a large proportion of their savings which, their parents accounts, gain ten per cent interest. In addition to their full-time supervisors the young men are taught and helped in various ways by voluntary workers and they have the attention of a resident matron. When they leave the hostel at the age of 18 they are in a position to support themselves, and can take up their residence in Community House.

The young women's hostel consists of two dormitories in Bata Avenue, The two supervisors and in turn exactly similar lines. But instead of carpentry and metalwork the girls' handicraft classes are concerned with dressmaking, cookery and housewifery. Boys and girls have their own evenings set apart for the use of the Community House gymnasium.

The housing estate comprises 140 semi-detached houses (more will be built shortly) occupied by married workers. All but about twenty larger houses are let at ah inclusive rental of ten shillings a week. They contain two or three bedrooms with one or two downstairs rooms (one open way), kitchenette, bathroom, cupboards, a water-heating system, electric lighting in back and front gardens. Cash prizes are awarded for the best garden competition. The four avenues are planted with trees and although conveniently near the factory are out of it from it by the main county road and by considerable areas of open and gardening staff.

Shopping facilities are provided, since the nearest shopping centre is five miles away. There is a Bata Trade Post Office, a provision store, green grocer, butcher, ladies' and gents' hairdressing saloons, and Tilbury Auto Service is a filling station, gives a day and night repair service, and provides garage room for employees' cars, irrespective of whether they are owned by employees or let to traders.

A cinema is in course of construction.

The factory buildings are built to a standard plan, designed for the maximum of light and space for the convenience of the workers. They are well ventilated, and temperature is controlled summer and winter. Surrounding them are lawns, trees and gardens which are tended by the staff and by the boys.

Bata Record is the firm's newspaper and, so far as we can discover, is unique in that it is the only factory paper published once a week. It is made up like a regular newspaper style, is self-supporting by its sales and contains news of events and views out on Friday evenings.

Visitors are welcomed to the factory, and tours of inspection can be arranged by appointment with the publicity staff.

The above is taken from the Bata Record, and describes their English factory.

"The only way of stopping war is to build up invincible resistance to aggression."—Sir Archibald Sinclair.

"Now that a girl can have a dress that's made from sugar cane, she won't need a sugar daddy."—Princess Cora Castani.

Bata Workers Share in Company's Prosperity

"The Bata System" is a phrase used loosely and often misunderstood. But in fact it is as simple that it can be explained in a few sentences. It is based on the assumption that in course of time the enterprise will be owned and largely controlled by the people who work in it.

Capital is invested by the fellow-workers in the form of "profit-share". Every director, manager, foreman, foreswoman and a great number of other good workers, has a personal association held by the segment.

It is made up of a percentage of the weekly result of his department, which is computed in accountable, with wages, insurance, lighting and heating, and credited with the value of the sales produced and bought by the assembly progress which follows. A balance sheet is published every week, and from the department's weekly figures company shares can be calculated. Their amount is affected by economy in material and efficiency in work.

Thus the "shareowner" has a direct incentive in the work of his own department and does not have to depend, except in a small degree, on factors which are largely outside his control.

Five per cent interest and five per cent dividend, making a total of ten per cent is credited yearly to his personal accounts. Withdrawals are made from them once a month, and although there are limits to the amounts that can be withdrawn in cash it is of interest to note that in 1936, when the firm was still in its infancy, more than 50 per cent was taken out in cash by participants in the profit-sharing scheme. This amount is, of course, quite unrelated to the weekly wages which, fixed or piece-rate, are paid on a generous scale.

Despite this inducement to individual effort, the success of the factory depends greatly on teamwork and the team spirit is encouraged in every possible way. A department can proceed only at the pace of its slowest worker. One absentee or one indifferent worker can set a check. It is predicted that the weekly balance sheet shows a loss instead of a profit.

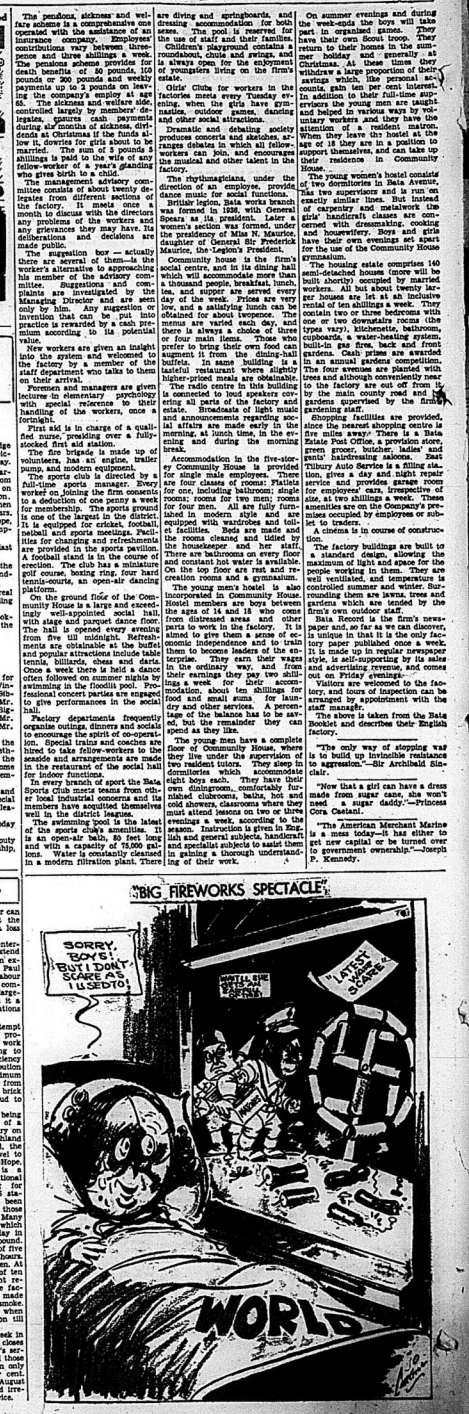
The system which governs enterprise, those ramifications extend over the whole world, has been exhaustively examined by Mr. Paul Derrant, of the International Labour Office, Geneva, who highly commends it, as do many other large-scale industrialists and others. It is a solution of the employer's relations with his staff.

In this booklet we shall attempt to explain not the technical processes, but the conditions of work under which we are striving to achieve the maximum of efficiency in the production and distribution of boots and shoes with the maximum of prosperity for those who, from top to bottom, office clerks and bright sayers' labourers, we are proud to call our fellow-workers.

Although rapid progress is being made in the development of a township at East Tilbury on the expanse of field and marshland which the company acquired, the majority of workers still travel to and from Grays, Stanford-le-Hope, Basildon, Pitsea or Laindon by special service of Eastern National buses morning and evening at their convenience. An LMS station at Chadwell Heath has been built near the factory, and those who prefer it travel by train. Many workers use their cycles, which are protected during the day in cycle sheds in the factory compound.

The working week consists of five days of eight hours each, Monday to Friday, with a half-day on Saturday. Work begins at half-past seven. At ten o'clock there is a break of ten minutes for tea and light refreshments are served in the factory restaurant. Dinner-break is made for those who want to smoke. Work ends from 12.30 to 1.30, when work is resumed and goes on till five o'clock in the evening.

Holiday with pay in first week in August. When the factory closes down. Everyone with a year's service is paid for the week, and those who have been with the firm only six months receive fifty per cent. of their normal wages. August Bank Holiday wages are paid irrespective of the period of service.



TRENTON

TWO WATCHMEN TO BE REPLACED

Railway Commission Orders Double Wig-Wags for Crossing

Trenton, July 7th —(Special)— Letters received in Trenton this week by Town Clerk W. J. Potts bring from the railway commission in Ottawa the decision reached recently by the C. N. R., that in the very near future the two watchmen employed at the Dundas St. and King St. crossings will be moved and will be replaced by double wig-wags, which will serve from this time forth. Some time ago, when the first information of the proposal reached the local municipal council they objected very vigorously and through the town solicitor transmitted this objection to the federal commission at Ottawa. Several weeks ago a number of the members of this commission headed by the hon. Hugh Guthrie came to Trenton personally and investigated the condition as outlined by the local council. However the objections have been overruled for a variety of reasons, and the communications just received state definitely that within ninety days (and probably almost at once) the two watchmen will be moved and double wig-wags will be installed. Traffic on the C. N. R. line will be slowed to ten miles per hour at the Dundas St. crossing, and highway traffic will be slowed to a minimum with a number of warning signs.

Local councillors still object to the ruling, though they are necessarily forced to accept the ruling as handed down. Councillor Hugh O'Rourke, commenting on the situation, stated definitely, that the council as a whole consider the the move a mistake. "Since 1911 we have had a watchman on this crossing" he said "and during that time we have not had a single fatal accident. I certainly feel that this change is a mistake on the part of the commission."

Motorists will remember that the Dundas St. crossing is protected by watchmen who flag cars to a stop sign, while the King St. crossing is guarded with barriers. Wigwags at each crossing will be electrically operated.

Chances Dimmed

When the B. C. F. scrambles lost on Wednesday evening to Wooler by a 16-8 score they left about dimmed their chances of a playoff berth in the local loop. They have been trailing Wooler for some time, and are now firmly entrenched in the bottom spot, with Wooler about two games ahead of them. Since local playoffs have room for only three teams it appears that the airmen may be about ready to hang up their sweaters for the season.

Local fans, who saw the Flyers last through to the provincial intermediate B semi-finals last year regret to see this ignominious finish on the part of a team who can play good ball. It is true that a number of last year's stars are missing, but for some reason the spirit that fired the Airmen last season and stole them come back again and again in the face of odds is missing. They got away to a bad start with the Royal Visit taking most of their players for a month, and when they did return many were unable to step out in midseason form and hold their own against players who had been seeing action from the early part of May. Tiny Davis, hurling star, who certainly was the mainstay of the team last year, found the going not entirely to his liking and has not been seen in action in recent games.

The seventy-seven foot yacht, Lady Baltimore of Montreal has been lying in the local port for a week, and many have inspected it.

S. NIGHSWANDER TO STAND TRIAL

Committed to Fall Assizes On a Charge of Murdering Henry Doto

Fort Erie, July 8—(CP)— Stuart Nighswander, 25-year-old Buffalo mechanic, will be tried at fall assizes in Welland on a charge of murdering Henry Doto, 12, of Buffalo, whose mutilated body was found in a clump of bushes on Fort Erie's outskirts June 22.

Nighswander sat impassive yesterday while witnesses testified at his preliminary hearing that the young mechanic admitted in hospital shortly before the body was found that he had "just murdered a man."

The Buffalo man was committed after a one-day hearing by Magistrate John B. Hopkins. On a charge of attempted suicide, he was remanded until July 14.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Talmadge of Buffalo, with whom Nighswander roomed, said they visited him in hospital here June 21.

"I took him some toilet articles" Mrs. Talmadge said, "but when I handed them to him he said: 'My gold-plated razor is not among them, for I killed a man with it.'"

Gladys Lee, a nurse at Douglas Memorial Hospital, testified that Nighswander staggered into the hospital the morning of June 20, blood dripping from a gash in his left arm.

"I phoned Dr. Collins and told Nighswander to go to the operating room," the nurse said. "Then he told me: 'I've just murdered a man. You had better call the police.' I did that."

Thomas V. Meegan, Assistant Chief of Detectives at Buffalo, swore to discovery near the Doto boy's body of a pocketbook containing a Social Security card bearing the name of Stuart Alfred Nighswander.

21 FATALITIES ACROSS CANADA

Eight Deaths in Montreal District Attributed to Recent Heat Wave

MANY DROWNINGS

By The Canadian Press

Canada today counted a toll of 21 deaths from various causes in a two-period that found the eastern part of the Dominion sweltering in a heat wave.

Eight fatalities, seven of them in the Montreal area, were attributed directly to the heat. Drownings claimed six lives and seven deaths resulted from accidents.

Eleven fatalities occurred in the Montreal district, six in Ontario, two in Saskatchewan and two in New Brunswick.

Included in Montreal's tragic list of heat victims was Xavier Boyer, 40-year-old laborer, who collapsed and died after saying, "the heat's got me."

Other Montreal deaths attributed to the heat were: Mike Gibbons, 72, Francois Xavier Beauchamp, 51; Mrs. Gertrude Goyette, 39, two-months old Audrey Redmon; Jacob Marks, 71, and Arthur Jansen, 39.

3 Drownings in District

Three drownings were in Montreal district. Lucien Brisebois, 20 of Lachine, drowned in Lake St. Louis after swimming following a meal and Joseph Cade, 32, drowned at a public beach in Cornwall Maurice Piquette, 12, died in the St. Lawrence River after slipping from a rubber ball.

Two Montrealers also were killed in accidents. Jeannine Prenette, eight, died from a fractured skull and other injuries after being hit by an automobile and Ludger Lesperance, 48, succumbed in hospital an hour after falling from the platform of a moving train.

Woman Fatality

The other heat fatality was Mrs. Arthur W. Bradbury, Toronto, who died from a heart condition believed accelerated by the weather.

At Woodstock, N.B., Miss Morfyd Evans, 18, drowned while swimming in a creek supposedly from a cramp.

The other two drownings occurred in Ontario. Jack Collins, 35, dying in the Detroit River near Windsor and two-year-old Dianne Davis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Davis of Toronto, drowning in shallow water at Beaverton.

Western Canada's fatalities resulted from accidents. An unidentified man believed to be a farmer of the Sturgis District, was killed when struck by a train at Sturgis, he apparently attempted to board a moving freight train.

Dies From Wound

At Humboldt, Sask., Carl Wiltke, 12, died in hospital from a bullet wound inflicted by a .22 calibre rifle in the hands of five-year-old Jimmy Eucke. A coroner's jury decided the death accidental.

In Ontario, Frank Lamm of Buffalo, N.Y., died in Niagara hospital from injuries suffered in an auto accident near Tweed, 21 miles north of Belleville, when James Hanley, 28, of Bombra, succumbed in hospital at Belleville after a Sunday night motor accident in which two others were killed.

Edmunston, N.B., was the scene of the remaining accident fatality. Baptiste Albert, 46, dying when he fell into a machine in a paper mill and was cut to pieces by the knives.

SEVEN DAYS FOR DRUNK DRIVING

Rudolph Loefcner, Peterboro, Also Fined for Reckless Driving

Tweed, July 8th—Rudolph Loefcner, Peterboro, appeared in County Police Court here yesterday on three charges, all of which arose out of a motor accident near here early this week.

Loefcner appeared before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd and pleaded guilty to a charge of drunken driving and sentenced to serve seven days in the common jail and also pleaded guilty to charges of reckless driving and that of leaving the scene of an accident. On the last two counts Loefcner was fined ten dollars and costs in each incident. The fines were paid. The charges were preferred by Chief Hayes of Tweed.

On a charge of keeping a common gaming house Arthur Kleinsteiber was fined ten dollars and costs, which also was paid.

Early last evening Chief Hayes arrested William Henry on a charge of drunken driving. Henry was arraigned before Chas. H. Kerr, justice of the peace, and remanded until the 13th instant for trial.

POLICE COURT

Roy Clarke, Toronto transient, pleaded guilty to a charge of theft of an auto near the property of Robson Motor Sales, when he appeared before Magistrate E. A. Butler, K.C., in today's city police court. Sentence was postponed in the matter, however, as an alleged accomplice of Clarke's, Herbert White, pleaded not guilty. Both men were remanded in custody until Monday. The pair were captured near Charlotteton last Thursday following a police chase.

Later White indicated he would like to change his plea and when asked by Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., to plead, White replied, "I admit I was in the car, but...," commenced White when Mr. Donnan interrupted.

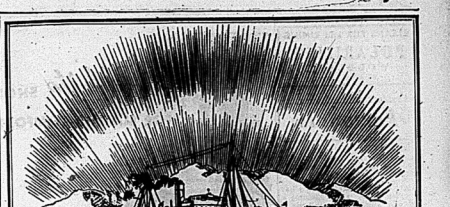
"Take them both away and bring them back Monday. I thought this man wanted to plead guilty," added the Crown Attorney.

Appearing for sentence on a charge of obstructing a police officer, John McMurter of this city, was sentenced to serve 21 days in the common jail. The sentence was dated back to the time of the accused man's arrest last week.

Kathleen Thompson, 18, of Belleville, appeared on a charge of escaping from the Belmont Girls' Training School in August, 1938. The Thompson girl pleaded guilty as charged and was returned to the Mercer Women's Reformatory for the duration of her unexpired sentence. "This girl has 20 months and 18 days left to serve on her sentence," revealed Mr. Grant Foster of the Provincial Secretary's Department, who also informed the court that the Belmont School had since been closed, necessitating the girl be confined to Mercer.

Six persons pleaded guilty to charges of intoxication and were assessed the conventional ten and costs. "The county jail is quite full at the time and it would be in order to grant time to these men," revealed Mr. Donnan as two men asked for an extension of time in which to raise the assessed $16.33.

A large gallery swelkered throughout the longest court of the summer season.



Christmas Shopping in July...

People with friends in the Arctic must do their Christmas shopping very early indeed! For R.M.S. Nascopie, which carries the yearly mail to the Eastern Arctic, leaves Montreal in July. This year her voyage will be the 270th of "the Governor and Company of Adventurers of England trading into Hudson's Bay". She covers 10,000 miles carrying supplies to mission stations, trading posts and the Mounted Police. Her cargo includes, among other things, baby carriages, Christmas presents and tobacco products.

When her smoke has faded from the horizon, the long, lonely Arctic night closes down on the traders, trappers, mission workers and policemen of Labrador and Hudson's Bay. That night would be desolate indeed but for the products of the tobacco industry. Kingsley called tobacco, suggesting moments which come to everyone, "a lone man's companion, a bachelor's friend, a hungry man's food, a sad man's cordial, a wakeful man's sleep, and a chilly man's fire".

IMPERIAL TOBACCO COMPANY OF CANADA, LIMITED

THEY ALSO FARM...

:::WHO IN THE MACHINE SHOP WORK

Not for some time now could farming have been practised on the small scale style familiar in the world of yesteryear.

If today we had to rely on the old-time cradle methods of cutting and garnering the crop, it would take every able-bodied man in every province of our Dominion to harvest the average wheat crop of Western Canada. Thanks, however, to the modern farm machinery, with practically no seasonal increase in hired labor, the farmer is able to take care of even the heaviest of harvests. The making of the machines for harvesting is but a transference of labor from the field to the factory.

Instead of the short seasonal engagement during the rush days of harvest; the implement worker is given longer periods of employment, and the days he spends in making farm equipment lessens the number of men required in the farm field. Thus, these men, during the winter months, help make short work of garnering greater crops during the few and fleeting days of harvest season, and so many of the men thus engaged have themselves come from farm homes.

It was only natural when turning their faces city-wards, that men from the farm should first seek employment with a company whose name to them had been a household word.

In Massey-Harris, whose origin ninety years ago was on a farm, these one-time farmers find a rather logical expression for their abilities in the mechanical side of farming—for while in forge or machine shop—they also farm.

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Sunday, July 9

SUNDAY'S horoscope is a particularly propitious one for affairs of church, stand and all institutions pursuits, which are to evolve at a very likely rich tempo on this day. There are likely to be ceremonial functions, with protocol, dignities and marks of friendship from superiors and those in exalted station, but all ambitious persons must be alert to subtleties in high places and safe-guard the health as well.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a year of notable advancement, with honors, promotion and other tokens of preferment from those in power and of better position. But there is need for caution against overwork, born, of subtle or secret enmities. Much may be gained through writings or publicity. Also there may be bequests or other financial surprises.

A child born on this day may be blessed with much versatility and intellectual brilliance, together with the support and preferment of those in important positions who will prefer its ambitions. It may benefit by inheritance.

For Monday, July 10

There is an augury of gain or advancement through secret enterprise or investments, with stability of the fortune achieved by steady hard work, patience and perseverance. Inventions may also bring their reward of merit.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a year of adventure and romance, with much activity and agitation. There may be benefits or rewards from industry, good judgment, sound investments and, with increased property values, but be wary of peculiar moods and depressions.

A child born on this day may be talented, original, hard-working and practical, although rigid, intolerant, critical and moody. Yet, it may have its romances and adventures.

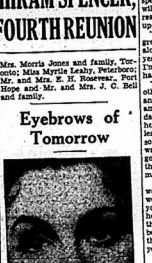
Eyebrows of Tomorrow



NANCY KELLY.... her eyebrows harmonize with facial features.

By HELEN POLLETT

CONSIDERING the shoe eyebrows have received, it is a wonder there is even a remnant of them left. They have been pillaged, plundered, devastated. It looks as if the pretty sisters are coming to their senses. Anyhow, the movie stars are looking human again. And what they does the girls does, too."

Beauticians have fumed and raged about the crazy patterns that some women have designed for themselves. No regard at all for the relationship of eyebrows and facial features, which is their setting. The eyebrow grows along the little bone cornice above the eye. Pluck it along the lower line and it looks as if it were half way up the forehead. The facial expression then is vapid and mask-like.

Setting the eyebrows too far apart has been another mistake, through goodness knows we don't want them to hold hands. If you have been tweezing and teasing yours to a line-by-rule, give them a chance to grow, toddle to a beauty shop and get a new trim design, which is graceful and lovely, never freakish.

Goosefleshi Don't you hate it? Horrid little raised points of flaming red making the surface of the skin rough and unsightly. They are a horror to many a pilgrim on the road to beauty.

Treat with soap suds and a brush, rinse with warm water and then with cold. Don't rub hard until the flesh feels cool. Anoint the hands with cocoanut oil and the flesh a soothing calming. While some of the oil remains in, dust the skin surface with powdered boric acid, patting it in. Half an hour another, then rinse treatments twice a week until the goose-flesh disappears.

Advice to the Lovelorn

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

A Home Without Love Is Empty

"Dear Miss Fairfax,—

"This is in answer to Patricia's open letter. I was once in the same position as she is, in love with one man and married to another.

"Please do not marry, my dear girl, just because you like and respect this second man. Your heart will never be at peace. You try and reason and understand—but you're up against a blank wall.

"The man I married had one great fault—he would not let drink alone. I lived with him for six years. Now we're separated, and I'm back at work and will soon have my freedom.

"Often people love each other, they can't be happy with anyone else. The man I loved and am still in love with, is type to-day. He's made a name for that kind. Men are scarce. Don't leap into something you'll both be sorry for in later years. I don't want to see you or any other girl going through what I had to go through in those dreadful years of marriage.

"A home without love is not worth having. You say life isn't worth living without him. When you feel like that, you can't make a home for another man. Why ruin three lives? Too many honors have been broken because they locked that little word—love. I do hope you will be wiser than I was.

"Sincerely,
"Ginger."

Man Tells How It Feels To Be Jilted

"Dear Miss Fairfax:—

"Not all the jilting is done by men. I was given the air two weeks before my wedding day. It seems that everyone in our crowd, with the exception of myself knew that my girl had been carrying on pretty high with a certain man.

"I knew she went out with him occasionally but I don't believe in watching a woman. If she wants to go, she's not the proper wife for husband-watcher. This bird who got her away from me has been twice married and twice divorced. He had a pretty bad reputation as a skirt chaser. He has been married to my girl for nearly a year now and she looks pretty contented.

"I honestly feel sorry for her but I grieve rightly my adds any of her overtures of 'let's be friends.'

"When a man has cared for a woman as devotedly as I have, it's a mistake to kid yourself into thinking you can be friends.

"As for myself, after the jilting I just stuck it out and carried on as I've got it. And the cutest baby you've ever seen on the screen plays the part of their child. You're bound to enjoy this heart-stirring story of 'Made for Each Other'—a tale of modern people that intimately touches the lives of everyone. Presented in addition to Carole Lombard and James Stewart in "Made For Each Other" a splendid 'musical comedy' and clever "screen vaudeville" short subjects will be also on the screen that at the McCarthy Theatre.

Mulford, entitled, "The Frontiersmen" and a short subject feature that will please you from start to final fade out these two features are now showing at the McCarthy. AT THE McCARTHY

"MADE FOR EACH OTHER"

If you have ever been in love or ever expect to be—if you have ever experienced parental suffering or heartbreak because of another—if you have ever been thrilled by a picture about to smash on the rocks of discord—then the story of "Made for Each Other", which opens next at the McCarthy Theatre, will spell an intimate chord in your heart.

Lovely Carole Lombard plays an entirely different kind of role as a young wife and mother who has to face a heartbreaking struggle for love and happiness, James Stewart, whom you liked so much in "You Can't Take It With You," plays an idealistic youth who married for love and was willing to forget it. And the cutest baby you've ever seen on the screen plays the part of their child. You're bound to enjoy this heart-stirring story of "Made For Each Other"—a tale of modern people that intimately touches the lives of everyone. Presented in addition to Carole Lombard and James Stewart in "Made For Each Other" a splendid 'musical comedy' and clever "screen vaudeville" short subjects will be also on the screen that at the McCarthy Theatre.

AT THE BELLE

"Broadway Serenade"

Taking full advantage of the versatility of its star, "Broadway Serenade", starring Jeanette MacDonald, is now playing at the Belle Theatre. The new musical, which traces the struggling of a young singer and her husband in their fight for stardom, offers music lovers the full scope of Miss MacDonald's voice. Her melodies include everything from grand opera to semi-classical and popular selections.

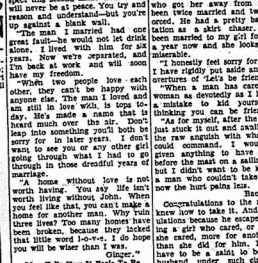
Appearing opposite the singing star is Lew Ayres, whose acc performances in recent film hits won for him the male lead in this picture. A musician and composer in real life, plays a parallel role as Chauncey Seymour, Miss MacDonald's husband.

Frank Morgan once again lends his unique comedy to the role of a Broadway producer. Ian Hunter is the famous secretary third point of the film's love triangle, and Al Shean, famous old vaudevillian, gives an interesting characterization as Hennessy, elderly concert cellist who befriends both Miss MacDonald and Ayres.

The story is woven about the lives of Ayres and Miss MacDonald, as husband and wife who combine to form a piano and song team performing at cheap night clubs. Ayres' temper costs them their job. On returning home he discovers he has been mistakenly hailed in Italy, but the funds are insufficient to provide passage for his wife. Determining to sell his prize song, the two visit the office of producer Cornelius Cushing, played by Ian Hunter.

Miss MacDonald sings but through an accident it is not her husband's song. She gets a break with the show and the remains behind. When she rises to stardom her name is coupled with that of the wealthy "angel" of the production. Ayres misunderstands and there is a divorce. All ends, however, on a harmonious note when Ayres purchases one of the musical shows in which to star Miss MacDonald.

The songs are by Rosewrest, and a funny comedian cartoon "Art Gallery" precede the feature attraction.



Watch Your Child For Symptoms of Bronchiectasis

I have told you something about the care of the disease we know as bronchiectasis. Today we go into the symptoms of the disease. The disease will show.

We know when the child will have attacks of pus lying about in his bronchial tubes, and that he will be coughing up this pus from this pus. If you notice that your child is coughing up large amounts and it looks as if it were half way up the forehead. The facial expression then is vapid and mask-like.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

The Apparently Drowned Can Be Restored After Half an Hour Under Water

One of my boyhood heroes was a boy of 12 who was a most wonderful swimmer and diver. One of his feats was that of rescuing another boy who had been under water seven minutes and by artificial respiration was brought back to consciousness. While the story of the rescue was correct, the time under water was doubled as no one had been known, as far as we were sure then, three or four minutes and survive. While our school book definition were to continue artificial respiration for "hours", to revive a body that had been under water for more than three or four minutes was considered hopeless.

It is gratifying to learn that a body can be under water for a considerable time and be brought back to consciousness as reported by Drs. Gordon Bates, R. E. Gibby and Maurice Bates, B.Sc., in Canadian Medical Association Journal. They state that there are several misconceptions about resuscitating the apparently drowned, an understanding of these mistakes are:

That being under water for more than four or five minutes is always fateful.

That in an apparently drowned person the absence of the ordinary signs of life—heart sounds, pulse beat, breathing—means that the individual is dead and there is no use in using artificial respiration.

That artificial respiration need only be kept up for a half hour at most.

These research workers state that these three ideas are wrong and that it is possible for a person to have been under water for up to half an hour and live, (b) all signs of life may be absent in these cases for "hours" and the individual is still alive, and (c) artificial respiration should be kept up for many hours in cases of apparent drowning just as in electric shock and carbon monoxide poisoning.

The only really safe plan is to continue efforts until the warming of the tissues (rigor mortis) has set in. To this artificial breathing place patient face downward on the ground; put yourself astride the patient's thighs facing his side position. Placing both hands flat in the small of his back with the thumbs nearly touching and the fingers spread out on each side, produce a pressure on the lower ribs, lean forward, and steadily allow your weight to fall on your hands and so produce a firm (not violent) pressure which forces air from the patient's body. Repeat this forward and backward movement every four or five seconds.

Fashion Flashes

THE CHANCES of a pleasant trip are enhanced if the wardrobe includes a really smart sheer black afternoon frock. A new one of this type is made of tulle, the skirt made with horizontal bands of it and with gold ribbon. The shantashaped neckline is banded with pink coral and gold bead embroidery. Shoulder straps to match.

NIGHT BEAUTY is suggested by nightgown of white chiffon, on moulded lines, with top and puff sleeves of colorful white lace.

KEEP COOL and look pretty too, in a smashing coat in of black and white striped linen, the trimming of narrow black lace ruffles and velvet ribbon.

FIRST DANCE and first dance frock—and there is something extravagantly sweet, a charming choice would be white marquisette mocked up at the waist with a bit of lace and on the puffed sleeves. At the waist are two fine and silver-gray velvet ribbons.

JUST WHEN you think you've seen everything something will be full and new appears. A coat that stopped the crowd at a fashion show was of full length silver fox skins, the line flitted at the waist and flaring at the hem. Reminiscent of other days the skins created wide cape sleeves.

KENTUCKY CLEANS UP AFTER SUDDEN-DEATH FLOOD

Following a disastrous cloudburst that poured tons of water into small streams that in turn swept down over many communities in eastern Kentucky, officials state Red Cross workers are digging at the bottom of Calverts Creek, at the left and debris, and through the city, with a house half swept over the top of it, and at the BOTTOM another house, its sides tipped at a precarious angle after being tossed from its foundations by flood waters.

AS AXIS POWERS STRENGTHEN CO-OPERATION IN THE AIR

Supremacy in the air is the chief ambition of both the democracies and the Axis powers and race goes on from day to day with increasing vigor. Here are three of the key figures in the plans of the Italo-German scheme of things, shown at a recent conference, designed to create a decisive supremacy for their countries. LEFT, General von Brauchitsch, German air chief; CENTRE, German chief-of-staff Luftwaffe, Count Ugo Cavallero, and RIGHT, General Ugo Cavallero, undercheif of Italy's Fascist militia.

BOSTON RED SOX TAKE 1ST GAME OF 5 GAME SERIES FROM YANKS ON HOMER AND SINGLE BY CRONIN

Yanks' Lead Now Only 10½ Games Over Second Place Squad

GIANTS BEATEN

Dodgers Defeat Rivals 3-2 to Give Wyatt Eight Wins Without Loss

By JUDSON BAILEY

Boston Red Sox have been gouging New York Yankees in the last few days until the champions ought to be getting sore.

The second place Red Sox opened a five-game series in New York yesterday with a 4-3 victory. It was the third time Boston had beaten the Yanks in four games this month and their eighth triumph in the last ten starts.

This latest victory was taken in stride by Yankee Manager Joe Cronin, a fugitive from away back, hit a home run and brought in another tally on a sacrifice fly. Yankees singled behind Jimmy Foxx's double for a run and scored the deciding marker himself, on an infield out with the bases full in the eighth inning.

The Yankees got ten hits off Jake Wade and American Dickman to the eight Red Ruffing allowed, but Boston's newly acquired crusading spirit carried the issue.

The four games which confront the two teams today and tomorrow should be good and for all the seriousness of the Red Sox crowd.

Feller Scores Fourteenth

Bob Feller rebounded up his fourteenth victory as Cleveland Indians walloped Chicago White Sox 8-2.

In the only other game in the American League, Louis Browns came from behind to beat Tigers 8-6. Joe Gallagher, whom the fall-fanning Feller recently freed from the Yanks, hit a three-run homer as the Browns made the five-run rally in the seventh inning.

The game ended as a hurling duel between two rookie stars, Jack Kramer of the Browns and Tiger Bobo Newsom, 6-foot, 6-inch hurler fitted out at 250 pounds. Neither finished, although Detroit supported Trout with batting in Louis 10-3 and getting two homers.

Pittsburgh Pirates and Brooklyn Dodgers reopened their feud before a noisy sellout crowd of 36,000 fans at Ebbets Field, and the Dodgers brought joy to Flatbush by winning 3-2. Whitlow Wyatt won his eighth straight although he gave nine hits to the seven Brooklyn got off Cliff Melton and Claude Passeau.

Police Plentiful.

Police were plentiful but had nothing to do except watch the ball game as the players went peaceably about their business and the Dodgers advanced all its runs in the first two innings to keep the fans happy.

Chicago Cubs pushed Pittsburgh Pirates back into sixth place with an eleventh inning 5-4 victory made possible by a bad throw by catcher Ray Berres of the Pirates.

Error let Stan Hack race from first to third and into position to score on Bill Herman's sacrifice fly.

Max West gave the Boston Bees a 7-3 triumph over the Phillies by hitting a triple with the bases loaded and two outs in the sixth inning.

Cincinnati Reds and St. Louis Cardinals were idle.

QUALIFYING LEADER

Little respect for the famous St. Andrews course in Scotland, where the British open is being played this year, was shown by Ben Hogan, ABOVE, 19-year-old Texas star who led the qualifiers for the tournament proper with two sizzling rounds of 69 to finish four strokes better than his nearest competitor, Henry Cotton, favorite to take the open, calls Bruen the greatest golfer in the game today.

DE LUXE SLUGGING

Manager Joe Cronin of Boston Red Sox had no qualms earlier this year when he traded his star third baseman, Pinky Higgins, to Detroit Tigers, and his confidence is being justified by the play of Jim Tabor, ABOVE, at Higgin's old post. Tabor did well in a few games for the Sox last year and has improved in his second term, having the biggest day of his career on Independence Day when he knocked four balls over the fence in a doubleheader with Philadelphia, three of his clouts coming in the second game, and two with the bases full!

JOHN BAWDEN WINS ON 2 HITS

Johnnie Bawden, ace roundsman for the Shell "Oilers", chalked up his eighth consecutive City League softball victory, and only a loss, last night as the "Oilers" trahjied Tolsco "Oilers" "Oy" Young's Citizen Juniors 13 to 1.

The teen-aged kids counted but five hits off Bawden, both coming in the third when the kids scored their lone tally. All-in all the batters collected three hits, garnering the third of George Green's deliveries, as Green pitched the last three frames after the "Oilers" had taken a 12 run lead in the fourth.

The league leaders scored four in the initial frame, added a quartette more in the third and drove home five in the fourth to clinch the game. In the latter frames the Sedore-coached Shell squad withheld their attack. Consequently, however, the winners played sensational ball with Bawden and Sero making several fine plays. Shell collected 14 hits off the combined pitching efforts of Steve Hook and Lum Carson.

Bawden scored the Juniors' lone tally after singling and coming home on Shiier's hard extra base blow in the third. Geyer got the third Junior bingle in the ninth, for the greater part the hits of the winners were singles, Sero, Dickey and St. Louis getting doubles, while Bawden and Steve Hook in four trips. The win was the ninth registered by the "Oilers" in ten games and clinched first place in the league standing for the Sedorites.

Tennis Champion Plays Game Boring To the Spectators

Wimbledon, England, July 8 (CP) —Bobby Riggs, the new Wimbledon champion, plays tennis as if he was being paid by the hour. His motto seems to be, "never finish a match in three hours if you can make it last five."

His type of play is not liked here —for two reasons; first, it's boring, and second, it cuts into the tea hour.

When Bob takes it into his young head to stand at the baseline and keep the ball in play for 10 minutes without the slightest attempt to win a point, he does it. And when he decides to give points and games away, he just does and watches the ball whizz by.

And that is apt to annoy the spectators. He did both things yesterday several times in his five-set conquest of his doubles partner, Elwood Cooke, and before long a lot of people got up and started looking for the tea tent.

"All right, I'm a careless guy," he says, "but that's the way I like to play."

"What I'm worrying about now is first how I'm going to win that Goebright Cup when I get back home and how America is going to keep that Davis Cup."

Riggs took all of five sets as he defeated Cooke, 2-6, 6-4, 6-2, 6-3, 6-2, in the final to succeed Don Budge as the all-England champion.

Then he teamed with Alice Marble to reach the final of the mixed doubles. They had to play two matches, defeating G. E. Jones and Ermyntrude Harvey, Britain, 5-7, 6-1, 6-3, and Camille Moitroy, New Zealand, and Betty Nuthall, Britain 2-6, 6-2, 6-4, in the semi finals.

Cooke and Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan won a semi-final berth with a 7-5, 2-6, 6-3 decision over A. Russell of Argentina and Mrs. Freda James Hammersley, Britain.

OPEN CHAMPION VERY CAUTIOUS

St. Andrews, Scotland, July 8— (AP)—The 1939 British Open Golf Title rested today with a man who practiced it most—Dick Burton. The Cheshire professional brought faultless golf to a faultless course with the pressure was on and won with a 72-hole total of 290 strokes to 302 for John Bulla of Chicago.

For four days the pick of Great Britain's players, a strong American line-up and Bulla and Lawson Little from America, struggled with the links. Everyone from John Brown, the somewhat pompous young Shre player, to the Argentine, Martin Pose, had a chance to win it at one time or another.

In the end it was Burton, a Ryder Cup player and ordinarily just a run-of-the-mine pro, who cashed in the title worth only £100 ($468) in cash but thousands more in prestige and endorsements.

He won it decisively, and there is no doubt he was the best man in the field when all the scores were in. It was a good field to be beat-man in, too, for down the list were Reg Whitcombe and Alf Perry, champions in their own right, at 294; Pose, who fumbled his chance yesterday with two 79's and had 296; Bobby Locke, the brilliant South African, a stroke behind, and Sam Snead at 298 Bruen and the great Henry Cotton.

Burton is about what you'd expect the winner at St. Andrews to be. He hits a healthy drive but not overlong. His approaches are sound but not spectacular. His putting is better than it looks. He putts carefully, but he controls the ball on the lightning-fast rolling greens. He takes advantage of every good line, every following wind.

Ireak of Scottish weather. He is cool, steady and cautious.

Lady Bowlers From Belleville Win at Cobourg

Cobourg, Ont., July 8—(CP) — Girls from Toronto, Oshawa, Port Hope, Belleville, Oshawa and Peterborough took part in a ladies tournament and banquet here today and last night. Mrs. E. Hilliard of Cobourg was third with 17 and a plus of one.

Other members of her rink were Mrs. Cuthbert, Mrs. G. Mitchell and Mrs. Gilchrist.

Sligh with two wins was Mrs. Mitchell of Belleville and she plus of three and high with 22 shots, and was Mrs. J. Watson of Cobourg with 16.

With Mrs. Ward were Mrs. Bawden, Mrs. Hanley and Mrs. Black and on Mrs. Watson's rink were Mrs. Sproule, Mrs. H. Ward and Mrs. G. Perris.

SYRACUSE TEAM EDGES CLOSER TO 2ND PLACE

Defeat Montreal Royals Twice While Giants and Wings Split

The current Jersey City-Rochester struggle for the International League lead is stirring up a lot of excitement, but unless one of them can earn a decisive victory somewhere it may be just too bad for both of them.

So far their hand-to-hand struggle of the past two nights hasn't done anything to put break their ties for first place. The Wings felt the sting last night when Marty Marion, shortstop, injured the thumb of his right hand on an infield play in the second game, while the Little Giants indicated their morale may be suffering from their unmolested five errors in losing 9-4 after taking the opener 7-4.

The even break kept the Giants one game ahead.

Marion was the pitching hero in the twilight game, scattering 11 blows with his mates pounded four Rochester hurlers over the seventh inning rally. Al Johnson went the distance for the Wings in the nightcap to earn his fourteenth victory of the season.

While the two leaders were battling for a draw, Syracuse Chiefs edged closer to second place by taking both games from Bill Zuber's Montreal by identical scores of 4-3.

The second game went eleven innings before Butch Meyer's single scored the winning run. The double defeat extended Montreal's losing streak to six games and dropped the Royals to within one game of the last place Toronto Maple Leafs.

The Leafs defeated Baltimore, 4-3 in 12 frames for their second straight win over the Orioles when Harry Matuszak belted Pitcher John Persullo with the bases full to force in the winning tally.

Buffalo Bisons swept their four-game series with Newark by downing the Bears twice, 8-5 and 6-1, before 11,790 spectators, the largest night crowd of the season at Buffalo.

Johnnie Bawden tacked his eighth consecutive City league mushball victory to the mast last night and has yet to be scored on. Bawden had little trouble with the Citizens Juniors as the Shell Oilers won 13-1. They got two hits and one run off Bawden in the third and were practically retired in order thereafter, with Tommy Green taking over the pitching in the seventh to set a little color to the game. He was the Oilers' ninth win in ten starts.

After the game Art Cole, well-known newspaper correspondent, softball player and basketball expert, took a photograph of Frank Sedore's Oilers. Now there's an old sport and one who has something to do with a line being attached to a team having its photograph taken after the winning of a championship. It's supposed to bring the players luck and is usually frowned upon by the best of 'em. Proceeds of the silver medal posed for Mr. Cole, who is also a member of the Oilers' closest rivals, the Derby's Aces, and after the picture was snapped, Sonny Green approached Mr. Cole and asked him why he had taken the picture. "Oh, just thought you'd like to see how the pictures and it's only hitting the jinx will be on your side of the fence." However, only time and idle will answer that one.

FORMER "IRON MAN" OVERCOME BY FANS' AP PRECIATION DISPLAY

Lou Gehrig, for 14 years an inseparable part of the New York Yankees, for whom he played 2,130 consecutive American League games before being forced to the sidelines by infantile paralysis, is overcome by emotion as he receives tokens of appreciation from his teammates, the fans, writers and ball park attendants at Yankee Stadium on "Lou Gehrig Day", staged in his honor by the club on the American July 4 holiday. More than 50,000 fans looked on as tributes were paid to one of baseball's all-time greats. Lou is shown here as, with voice breaking, he said "thanks" over the microphones. In the background at the left can be seen the greatest of baseball's sluggers, Babe Ruth, who Gehrig formed the game's greatest one-two punch at the plate when they played on four championship teams together.

In the years to come there will be one thing at least to say in connection with heavyweight boxing champion Joe Louis—he was always willing to defend his crown and will undoubtless be known as the fighting champion. After disposing of Tony Galento last month, Louis signed to meet Bob Pastor, the New York boy who stayed the rounds with the champ in 1937, in Briggs Stadium late in September. The ink of this signing was no more than dry when Promoter Mike Jacobs announced Louis was seeking a winter bout with "Tootpandy Tommy" Farr who Louis also failed to knock out. The Brown Bomber feels he has a grievance against both Pastor and Farr, simply on the grounds that both men stayed the limit with him in their previous bouts.

Although the Athletics went out and won for their fourth Connie Mack yesterday, the news failed to rally the 76-year-old veteran baseball mentor, whose health shows little improvement. At the same time Lefty Grove and Feller chalked up his fourteenth victory of the season in the American League and as the Indians beat the Chisox 7-3 to move up into a tie for third place, Cleveland's Municipal stadium drew over 18,000 saw "that young fellow Feller" turn in a sparkling mound effort.

DID YOU KNOW THAT—Jimmie Pollock, star basketball performer with the O.A.C., is home for his summer vacation, as is Wally Hilborn, sterling Western University running half. . . . We have several in accord with the proposal to have the abandonment of the city softball schedule and to concentrate the O.A.S.A. playoffs proving. . . . Many are fans who saw last night's fracas. . . . Skyfar Brown is seriously considering an open air boxing show at Simcoe Island in Toronto this summer, sounds logical at that.

Johnnie Bawden tacked his eighth consecutive City league mushball victory to the mast last night and has yet to be scored on. Bawden had little trouble with the Citizens Juniors as the Shell Oilers won 13-1. They got two hits and one run off Bawden in the third and were practically retired in order thereafter, with Tommy Green taking over the pitching in the seventh to set a little color to the game. He was the Oilers' ninth win in ten starts.

After the game Art Cole, well-known newspaper correspondent, softball player and basketball expert, took a photograph of Frank Sedore's Oilers. Now there's an old sport and one who has something to do with a line being attached to a team having its photograph taken after the winning of a championship. It's supposed to bring the players luck and is usually frowned upon by the best of 'em. Proceeds of the silver medal posed for Mr. Cole, who is also a member of the Oilers' closest rivals, the Derby's Aces, and after the picture was snapped, Sonny Green approached Mr. Cole and asked him why he had taken the picture. "Oh, just thought you'd like to see how the pictures and it's only hitting the jinx will be on your side of the fence." However, only time and idle will answer that one.

Toronto Argonauts' rowing eight covered itself with glory yesterday when they swept all British opponents before them to advance to the finals in the grand challenge trophy for rowing eights versus Harvard University today.

Efforts to form a maritime hockey league for next season are under way down in Moncton, with E. A. Day manager of the Moncton stadium, leading the way. It is to be a revival of "big four" hockey and representation from Truro, New Glasgow and Amherst is being solicited to join with Halifax, Saint John and Moncton in forming this group. . . . Do you remember when half a century ago today, John L. Sullivan fought his last bare knuckle fight. He stopped Jake Kilrain at Richbury, Miss., in 75 rounds. "John L." was the last recognized bare knuckle champion, and his Richbury fight the last unpiloted tourney of consequence in the U.S. Sullivan died Feb. 2, 1918, at Abington, Mass.

When the 1930 Belleville Kiwanis "Drop Beer Derby" is run off second on Tuesday, the public will have an opportunity to see in operation the finest electric starting ramp on this continent. The ramp was constructed under the supervision of Arthur Young, manager, and Stewart Warner-Alemite Company and is completely wired in every detail to make it perfect, as each ramp is a separate unit. The starter stands afront of the ramp and merely pushes a button, which puts the electrical equipment into operation with perfect precision. The Kinsmen club is highly indebted to Mr. Young, who prepared the effort in the construction of this modern starting ramp-unit. We've seen the starting ramps at the world "Soap Box" races in Akron, Ohio, but the ramps Arthur Young has so minutely designed and constructed are the very latest and undoubtedly the best on the continent," stated President Bill Ehrett in reference to Mr. Young's handiwork today. "Congratulations Art"—is this correspondent's acknowledgment also.

Kinsmen Eye Clinic Helps Children to Better Sight

The President's Message

WM. N. HURST

We take pride in presenting this fourth annual Kinsmen Edition of the Daily Ontario Intelligencer to the public of Belleville and district and outside points, pride that is partonable in that much of the vast amount of work in preparation of this annual Children's Classic must now been assisted by our membership of loyal workers of the Belleville Kinsmen Club—and pride in the knowledge that in this work we have had the full and wholehearted support of Belleville residents generally.

To the Daily Ontario Intelligencer we wish to pay our tribute and compliments for the splendid help and assistance we have been given in placing before the public in such clear fashion our aims and objects —the reasons behind our effort to assist boys of Belleville and Ontario to find and develop that latent talent and initiative necessary to this splendid sport.

To to the business men and the citizens of Belleville, we offer our deep thanks for the loyal and generous support which have helped make our annual contributions to the cause of boyhood so eminently successful.

We are happy in the knowledge that our trend toward this principal object, the provision of better sight for children threatened with partial or total blindness, has won the full approval of the public, as approval which has been concretely backed by financial support so badly needed in our undertakings.

The fourth annual classic of the Canadian Soap Box Derby championship for which young citizens of Belleville and district have been zealously and eagerly awaiting is presented to the public with the sincere belief that it will be beneficial in many ways. We hope that by the staging of these annual events not only a spirit of achievement will be instilled in the minds of the young contestants participating, but a spirit of good fellowship and friendly feeling may be engendered between our friends in the United States and ourselves on this side of the seas.

We hope that in the Akron finals at Belleville boy may win the honors and laurels of this great contest, and the splendid prizes with which this event is endowed. But whether they do or not Belleville residents may know that at least we have tried in trying have displayed the game as good sportsmen all.

We are conscious of the fact that our effort in the promotion of this fourth annual Soap Box Derby has the unqualified support of all who are helping us on to still further achievement in this grand work of ensuring that those eyes are kind may see. For this we are grateful, and in the name of underprivileged childhood we thank you.

Wm. N. "Bill" Hurst,
President Kinsmen Club.

Many New Cars Seen This Year

This season will see a further step in the evolution of the Soap Box Derby car. Some of the cars which will appear on Derby Hill will demonstrate an amazing amount of ingenuity on the part of their builders, and the many mechanical features but in streamlined body design as well, all cars in accordance with Derby Rules, must be limited to a maximum weight of 150 pounds—and not over 300 pounds with driver. Other rules governing wheelbase, length of car, size of steering wheel and other specifications, so that no boy can build a car so far superior to others as to give an unfair advantage or spoil the keen competition of the race.

BELLEVILLE HOME SOAP BOX DERBIES IN THE DOMINION

Belleville is and has been the home of Soap Box Derbies in Canada since the origin of this unique boys' sport in this country. Soap Box Derby has taken such hold on young people in these locations and the interest of Belleville residents that the course on which it is annually staged at "Hell Mar Derby" the first race of this kind before an estimated crowd of 5,000 people when the first tree-shaded streets of Derby Hill, streets which were literally flanked and enclosed by the use of miles of snow fence which kept participants and viewer.

In the following year the Kinsmen again sponsored a similar race on a larger and more prentious scale, drawing a record attendance of 7,000 people to see the distinctive contests staged in this thrilling sport. Through Belleville Kinsmen Club Canada forth Businessmen's Association was encouraged to stage a similar competition in connection with their annual picnic in the following year, and the Soap Box Derby race was launched throughout the Province. Other cities and towns quickly followed suit, and the race has become one of the most prominent and interesting events held for young boyhood of Canada. It was to Derby Hill Entertainment Derby that a Belleville youth won the All-Canadian Championship and the laurels and honors which went with this signal win.

Belleville has led the way in this matter of Soap Box Derby racing, and the name of Belleville has been advertised throughout the length and breadth of the continent through the efforts of the Belleville Kinsmen Club and this popular sport year after year. This city

Soap Box Derby Recognized by Gov't

In the State of Michigan last year special licence plates pattern, ed after the regular automobile licence plates of the State were issued and issued exclusively to the annual Soap Box Derby contest at Akron, Ohio.

Thus is the Soap Box Derby given official recognition by the State in which the idea originated. And officials of the Kinsmen Club of Belleville in charge of Belleville's fourth annual Soap Box Derby, who have carried this Derby on in a creditable manner in time different sections of this country will emulate the plan adopted by the State of Michigan, marking by distinctive lettering the cars participating therein.

It's a new sport, a clean, thrilling and competitive sport in which the youth of Belleville and the country are compelled to play the game of life through sheer ability and genius. There's a freshness and individuality in the new game of motorless racing down steep hills under the guidance of the driver which and carefully the safety of those who compete.

It's not just four wheels and a soap box in which the boys of Belleville will ride down Derby Hill (North Front Street) on the evening of July 11th, but a creation of real skill and art, a machine built in their own design. Upon their skill of construction, the ideas they have put into their own particular vehicle, will depend the winner.

good sportsmanship and clean play has become known as the home of competition.

It is axiomatic that true competition breeds better sportsmanship, and in no better manner is this exemplified than by the success of the past Soap Box Derbies,

Every Driver Gets a Helmet Like This

Safety is of prime importance in Soap Box Derby races, so all drivers are supplied with these solid-steel helmets for adequate protection. The helmet, given free to drivers, becomes a permanent possession of each Derby entrant and is a valued souvenir of this colorful event.

Racer Should Be As Heavy As Rules Permit

Ever Soap Box Derby contestant knows or should know the importance of the ratio of his car's weight and his own because the combined weight must not exceed 250 pounds.

The builder must consider this important item of weight during the time he is building his car, and it is a mistake to think only of weight in terms of a top limit which must not be exceeded. It is usually better to work on the basis of the relationship between the car's weight and the builder's own.

A study of the information on the polts collected at last year's international finals at Akron, Ohio, brings out some interesting and significant facts. In the cases of the boys who finished in first, second and third places, it was found that the car weighed more than the driver. On the basis of these facts it appears that, all other things being equal, the ideal combination is that of a light boy and a heavy car.

Theory Supported By Fact.

This theory is supported by evidence compiled by Toledo Scales engineers on all weights recorded at the national finals. Most of the heats in the finals were won by boys driving the heavier cars. The boys who were heavier, themselves, which made the cars proportionately lighter finished first in about one-third of the heats.

Taking the case of the number of competitors who lasted through to the rounds before the semi-finals, it is found that they averaged 99 pounds in weight. The evidence in favor of the heavier car is quite conclusive.

Plan Before Building.

A good approach to the problem is for the boy to determine his own weight accurately before adding the final touches to his car. He should take into account any factors such as recent illness which might have resulted in loss of weight.

When he is sure of the average weight, he should subtract his weight from the possible limit. That gives the maximum weight of the car. He should then try to build all of that weight into the car. The best way to be sure he is keeping within the specified limit is to keep in touch with his local official weigh master, a Toledo Scale man. This official will gladly provide the certified weighing service which is to be used throughout the country by the Soap Box Derby.

Remember that all weight must be an integral, built-in part of the car. Loading the car after it is built with loose or concealed weight will result in his disqualification, by the inspection committee which will go over every machine very carefully. Builders will do well to regard the weight as an addition to strength and will use material for frames, axles and bracing which is heavy enough to bring the weight to the desired mark without the addition of extra ballast in the form of sand, cement or other heavy weight.

Belleville's Fine Record In Derby Racing

The winner of Tuesday's race is to compete with other Canadian City champions at the International Races in Akron, Ohio, this summer. Toronto, particularly, is definitely out to develop a winner to take the Belleville boys, who have defeated Toronto lads in Toronto the past two years in succession. It is understood that they are seeking their best boys over to Buffalo for trial runs, to get new ideas on car design, driving and racing technique in general.

Whatever other cities may develop in the friendly rivalry of this now keenly contested sport, Belleville will be ready to take on all comers in the race at Akron, which will bring together the fastest and cleverest drivers in the country. The ability of Belleville boys to design fast cars and drive them to the finish line like champions has already been demonstrated not only in this city, but in Cobourg, Toronto, Montreal and Akron.

Those who throng the sides of Derby Hill on Tuesday may expect plenty of thrills as these speedy little racers go hurtling down the grade to come up smiling, win or lose. It's good, clean sport with a big kick in it even for the lucky ones. We'll be seeing you at Derby Hill, 6 p.m. Tuesday, July 11th.

Officials of the derby on Derby Hill (North Front Street) at the Soap Box Derby are as follows:

MANY REASONS WHY 1939 DERBY IS HELD IN CITY

Members of the Belleville Kinsmen Club ask that Belleville be chosen as the site of the 1939 All-Canada Soap Box Derby Championship because of the fact:

Belleville is the only Derby-conscious city in Canada.

Belleville's Chamonix representative, Mr. "Bert" Boyce is one of our most progressive and civic minded citizens and merchandisers.

Belleville's daily paper, the Daily Ontario Intelligencer, is ready and willing to support the Derby in the same manner it has supported the event for the past three years.

Belleville city fathers, service clubs, manufacturing concerns are offering whole-hearted support to the increasingly successful venture.

Members of the Belleville Kinsmen Club are again ready to give of their time and energy to ensure the success of this annual event which is so eagerly looked forward to by so many of the younger residents.

Not least of all, Belleville has a natural course, a wide, sweeping avenue on North Front Street which is able to accomodate thousands of spectators. As it has in the past, under perfect conditions.

With these reasons clearly entered for the consideration of other cities of the Dominion, we ask that Belleville be chosen as the site of the National Soap Box Derby Championship. It is known that Belleville has led the way in the fostering and arranging these Derbies and has gone on to repeated success year after year. It has the sound backing of all who are interested in clean sport.

President Belleville Kinsmen Club.

Gore

Gore—The farmers in this vicinity are kept very busy these days with their hay which has turned out to be more bountiful than was expected.

A large number of neighbors and friends gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Herb Fulmer on Tuesday evening last to honor their son Winston and bride with a miscellaneous shower. Rev. W. H. Boomhour called the gathering to order and the following address was read by Mr. Douglas Redner:

Gore Centre, June 27, 1939

Dear Winston and Flossie:

There is an old saying that "in springtime a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love" and this spring of 1939 seems to be a glowing example of not only love, but its natural consequences and as a result of these consequences we have gathered here this evening.

We have come, as we have come before on similar occasions to extend to you our congratulations on your recent venture of matrimony and to tell you that we join in your happiness and wish the best for you in the years to follow.

Winston, we have known you from the time you said "goo goo" to daddy and have come to admire you as an upright example of young manhood of which this or any other community might be proud.

We believe that it will not now be so necessary to brave the elements during the unpleasant season of the year when there appears to be a tendancy toward getting stuck in snowbanks and bending one's ears.

We believe also that you have chosen well and we take pleasure in welcoming to our neighborhood the one who has become your bride and will be your helpmate in the struggles and triumphs of the passing years.

Flossie, you came to many of us as a stranger but from the community you have left comes the word that a treasure will be difficult to fill. That loss will be our gain. We congratulate you, too, upon the name you have chosen to carry through life because the name of Fulmer stands out over our community as a synonym of good will, truth and Godliness.

And now we wish again to convey our good wishes by asking you to accept these worldly gifts with the hope that each may find its place of usefulness in your home and carry with it an earnest desire to share with you the happiness and prosperity which we trust will be yours.

Signed on behalf of the community, Morley Moy, Kathleen Giles, Bernice Fox.

Two little girls, Barbara and Joan Redner carried in the baskets laden with the parcel of which the bride and groom carefully unwrapped. Both bride and groom thanked everyone and invited everyone to come and eat them. After a social intercourse everyone left for home wishing both bride and groom the best of luck.

A rousing charivari followed and all were invited in and treated to ice cream and strawberries, cake and the boys cigars.

Champions on parade! Paced by motorcycle police, and stepping out to the rhythm of many bands, the Soap Box Derby champions from all O. over the sixth annual running America and many foreign lands march up Derby Downs, in Akron, of the great boys' sports classic will be held this year on August 13.

Soap Box Derby Rules Simplified for 1939 to Encourage More Boys to Enter Race

A bigger, better race for an even greater number of boys than those who competed in 1938 was the theme behind revision of the Soap Box Derby rules for 1939, according to J. D. Gormley, national director of the great sports classic for youth, which is co-sponsored here by this paper and the Chevrolet Motor Division.

"When the national technical committee met early this year in Detroit," Mr. Gormley said, "the prime purpose was a revision of the entire rules book to rewrite all rules with a view toward encouraging more boys to enter the race in 1939. Although few major changes were made, the technical committee studied every regulation thoroughly recommending simplification of construction details. When the 1939 finals are run off at Akron on August 13, we hope more boys than ever before will have had a chance to enjoy the thrills and excitement that are a part of the Derby."

Age Limits Changed

The age limits have been changed for 1939, with the new age requirements set at from 10 to 15 years, inclusive. Formerly, 9 year olds were allowed to compete.

The principal rule change concerns the wheels of the midget race cars. Because of some doubt existing in previous years as to which type of wheels were permissible under the rules, great clarification of that issue is found in the 1939 code. Wheel size, however, remains the same.

Overall length of the race cars has been increased for 1939, according to the committee's ruling, with the present maximum set at 80 inches, as compared with a maximum of 72 inches in 1938.

New Weight Ruling

Combined weight of car and boy for 1939 is again set at 250 pounds, the rules disclose, but the car itself cannot weigh more than 150 pounds. The latter restriction is another new 1939 ruling.

Cost limit on the 1939 racers is the same and is set at a maximum of $10 per car. However, one change has been made in the regulations covering this phase of the pre-race preparation. If a contestant employs any automobile steering wheel and shaft, the cost of this item, whether purchased new or second-hand, or acquired free, is not included in the overall cost of the car. This ruling, the committee points out, was made purely in the interest of constant safety.

As in previous years, the rules body asserts; the first interest of the Chevrolet Motor Division, aside from the successful race from the boys' standpoint, is promotion of safety, both in the national finals at Akron and in local races.

committee consists of Harold Blanchard, technical editor, Motor; Irving Crump, managing editor, Boys' Life; Julian P. Leggett, editorial representative, Popular Mechanics; Franklin M. Reck, managing editor, American Boy; Chris Rinsabaugh, editor, Automotive News; Arthur Wakelin, home workshop editor, Popular Science Monthly; H. M. Jellison, director of vocational training, Akron Public Schools; and E. O. Stallsmith, Lower Vocational High School, Akron, general chairman of the committee.

The Finals Race Committee Chairman is J. S. Schlemmer, sports editor of the Akron Beacon Journal; track arrangements and supervision are again under the direction of B. E. Fulton, manager of the Akron Airport.

2,500 LIBERALS WILL TAKE PART

Toronto, July 8.—Commemorating the 30th anniversary of Rt. Hon. William Lyon MacKenzie, King's nomination as leader of the Liberal party in Canada, leading businessmen, educationists and statesmen from all parts of Canada will assemble at a banquet in the Royal York Hotel on the evening of Aug. 8.

"It is expected more than 2,500 persons will be in attendance," declared J. P. Travers, president of the Toronto Central Liberal Association. "It is not a political meeting, but a tribute to the contribution made to Canada by a great statesman during the past twenty years. Men and women of all walks of life and of all political affiliations have already signified their intention of attending."

Rt. Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Minister of Justice and close friend of the Prime Minister, will preside during the evening while all Federal cabinet ministers and provincial premiers will occupy the head table. Representatives of many Liberal clubs and organizations in Canada, including members of the Twentieth Century Liberal Club, will also be present at this unique historical occasion.

Arrangements have been made to have the speech of the Prime Minister broadcast over a national hook up of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation from 10 until 11 o'clock while earlier in the evening addresses will be delivered by Rt. Hon. Ernest Lapointe and several provincial premiers.

Col. Wm. P. Mulock, K.C., M.P., is chairman of the committee in charge of arrangements. Plans are being made to have the banquet as informal as possible. A musical program is being provided.

While it has been blisted in some political circles that the Prime Minister may announce the date of the forthcoming Federal election during the course of his radio address, no confirmation of this was available. Banquet headquarters in the Brock Building, Toronto, reported that there had already been a heavy demand for tickets which are available through local members of parliament.

Derby Day In Akron Soap Boxers Take Over Boys' Day and Boys' Town

World Championships and World Records and Many Valuable Prizes For Contestans to Strive For — Greatest of All Prizes is The Opportunity of Taking Part in The Event and Being a Part of Derby Day at Akron With All the Thrills And Sensations—Soap Box Derby Champions Take Over Big Municipal Hotel and Make it Home.

Derby Day in Akron, Ohio, where the international finals to decide the championships of all Soap Box Derbys are held, certainly presents a busy, holiday appearance—for that day it is Boys' Town. Boys' Day, a day to instill in grownups the spirit of Tom Sawyer and Huckleberry Finn, and the fervent wish that to be boy again, just for the night, or the day, or as long as the fun could possibly last.

Headquarters at Akron for the boys from all over the world who come to try for stellar honors is the big Mayflower Hotel, which is annually taken over from lobby to roof to accommodate the boys, their newspaper escorts, such parents as make the journey, and the many officials who are required to handle the program. The boys will arrive August 11 and 12, and their cars will go on display in the auditorium of a big department store near the hotel. The visiting champions will have a chance, on the afternoon before the race day, to try out their cars on the splendid hill Akron has built for the event. None of them will ever have "driven" the course before, for this year's rules specify that no city champion may complete two consecutive years.

The hill is worth detailed description, for it is the only one of its kind anywhere. It is of concrete, laid 30 feet wide, without crown, and measuring 1183 feet between the start and finish lines. From its greatest grade near the top, it levels out gently toward the bottom. Joints between the concrete slabs are ground smooth to eliminate bumps. There are ample gutters at either side to carry off a cloudburst if necessary, and the banks of the cut through which the course runs will accommodate a huge throng of people.

Steel Bridge for Judges

At the top of the course is a large level paved area, where the entries are lined up for their heats. The service pits, for pre-race and last-minute adjustments, adjoin this area. At the finish line, there is a newly-built double-decked steel bridge, to accommodate judges, timers, radio announcers and commentators, and the Derby Technical Committee scrutinized further along. Latest equipment for electric timing and the photo-finish, most recent racetrack innovation, is used.

Grandstand and bleacher seats accommodate 26,000 to 30,000, and standing room along the edge of the course will handle several times as many more. Acres of parking space are available on the adjacent airport. Press stands, with complete wire services, are provided for newspaper correspondents and the various wire and photo service representatives. The finals will be on the air over major national networks Sunday afternoon, August 13, nationally famed announcers furnishing the running description. Following the race which decides the All-American champion, there will be run the International Derby, in which boys from other countries will compete with the American winner for the international trophy.

Police of Akron and nearby cities will join with Ohio State police in setting up and maintaining special traffic routing to and from the scene a job which they handled so expeditiously last year as to earn many compliments. Seldom has a crowd so large been moved with so little delay.

Many Trophies Awarded

In addition to the scholarship award mentioned, there are numerous other trophies designed to appeal to boys. Not only the winners of first, second and third places, but the builder of the best-designed car, the builder of the car with the best-designed brakes, and the builder of the best upholstered car are recognized. All champions qualifying for the Akron finals by winning their local races receive lesser awards, also presented with the compliments of Chevrolet.

Checking of the entries for observance of the rules governing weight, dimensions and design is rigidly carried out, as this is essential to safety as well as fairness. Ever since the Derby was organized this check has been carried out by the Technical Committee, consisting of men well known in the technical publications world. These men do not simply supervise the job; they take off their coats and do it. The

First 1939 Soap Box Derby champion in the United States is Robert Clements, Tucson, Ariz., shown here receiving the Al Capp Coyle Trophy symbolic of his victory, from Gov. Robert T. Jones of Arizona. Since the temperature stood at 110 when young Clements won his home-town race, he's promised to set a "hot" pace for the more than 100 competing local champions who will meet in Akron next Aug. 13 for the sixth annual running of the All-American and International Soap Box Derby, co-sponsored by Chevrolet and the nation's leading newspapers.

Automatic Starting System To Be Used on Derby Hill

Device Will Ensure Quick, Safe and Accurate Start for All Cars

SEPARATE UNITS

Soap Box racing on Derby Hill next Tuesday will see the inauguration of a new, automatic starting system. Belleville Kinsmen have had three individual starting ramps constructed, fully equipped with the latest devices to ensure a quick, safe and accurate start for every car.

Each of the ramps is a separate unit, with side coping to prevent any possibility of cars running off the edge or swerving in to one another at the start. The race will be run off in three-car heats. Each car will be stationed on the top platform of a ramp, the front of the car resting against a metal shoe so placed that all three cars are lined up exactly on the three ramps for the start of the heat.

Radio-Type Starting Control

The official starter will stand some distance down the course from the ramps. A simple touch of a button on his part will release the lock holding the cars in place, so that all three start rolling at the same instant. Simultaneously with the start a signal is automatically flashed to the judges'stand at the far end of the course, for the timing of the heat.

As the cars approach the end of the ramp, the ramp levels off to the radius of the road — an anti-friction device of the engineers, which prevents slow-up due to a sudden shift from the grade of the ramp to the grade of the road. After leaving the ramp, the cars are subject to call-back until all three have safely passed the timer some distance down the course. Should any mix-up occur between the ramp and the starter, it is declared "no heat" and all cars must return for a fresh start.

Loudspeakers Announce Winner's Time

After every heat, the name of the winner and his elapsed time will be announced over a loudspeaker system to the crowds. Spectators will find it interesting to keep a note of the winners and times in each heat for comparison and speculation as to the ultimate champion.

The entire starting system has been constructed in Belleville for the Kinsmen's Club of this City, with the co-operation of the engineers of a local manufacturing concern. The sturdily-built ramps and radio-type control ensure a uniform start for every car, thus the mean added safety and added speed and should result in a keen contest for every heat.

Quebec City Movies Will Again Flicker

Quebec, July 8—(CP)—A moving picture "famine" of more than five weeks in this old city has almost ended and residents will see their first flickerings on the silver screen Monday since June 2 when the theatres closed. Operators of the 11 theatres closed shop in protest against a 10-per-cent increase in the civic amusement tax.

After the provincial government stepped into the impasse Thursday, Bernard Devlin, counsel for the operators, announced last night that the theatres would open Monday following an agreement between Premier Duplessis and Mayor Lucien Borne for repeal of the amusement surtax.

The Premier, in a letter to the city's Mayor, had suggested "immediate" abolition of the tax boost. Mr. Duplessis' letter followed one by Mayor Borne who asked how the city should proceed to repeal the tax because it had been put into effect by the provincial legislature.

JAPANESE HATE BRITISH PEOPLE

Director of Army Bureau Makes Statement Discussing Chinese War

Tokyo, July 7.—(AP)—In the strongest official statement yet issued about Anglo-Japanese relations, Colonel Moritaki Shimizu, director of the Army Information Bureau, said today that "never in history have the Japanese people born in their hearts such hatred for Britain as exists today."

His manifesto was issued in connection with the second anniversary of the Chinese-Japanese conflict and voiced the contention that Great Britain was primarily responsible for China's continued resistance.

Shimizu reviewed Anglo-Japanese relations at length and concluded: "Japan and Britain were destined to become enemies the day the British-Japanese alliance was abolished."

"Even if British assistance to Chiang Kai-Shek should end immediately," the statement said, "no one could guarantee that those who lost brothers, fathers or husbands on the China front would be ready to change their feeling."

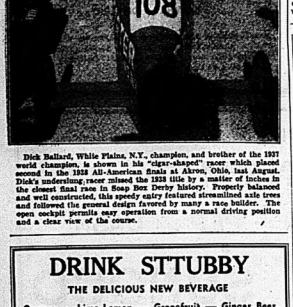
One hundred members of a patriotic society demonstrated in front of the British Embassy but were prevented by police from entering the Embassy gate.

The demonstrators shouted anti-British slogans and displayed anti-British banners. W. B. Cunningham, counsellor of the Embassy, received three representatives of the group, who presented a memorandum demanding that Britain change her policy in China.

TENDONS OF INSTEP HURT IN DIVING

While diving into the waters of the Bay of Quinte, near the Government Dock, Phillip Claus, 77 1-2 Church Street, sustained a severe foot injury yesterday. Claus was rushed to the Belleville General Hospital where it was discovered that the tendons on the instep of his right foot had been badly torn. It is believed that Claus' foot caught on some rugged piece of metal or spike as he was diving. The tendons of the instep were badly injured and a very delicate operation was needed to replace them," stated Dr. J. J. Robertson today after attending the injured man. Claus will be an invalid for at least a month as the result of the accident.

A Favourite Style With Racer Builders



Dick Bellard, White Plains, N.Y., champion, and brother of the 1937 world champion, is shown in his "cigar-shaped" racer which placed second in the 1938 All-American finals at Akron, Ohio, last August. Dick's underslung racer missed the 1938 title by a matter of inches in the closest final race in Soap Box Derby history. Properly balanced and well constructed, this speedy entry featured streamlined axle trees and followed the general design favored by many a race builder. The open cockpit permits easy operation from a normal driving position and a clear view of the course.

Next Year's Champions?

Eager eyes were on the track as the National Soap Box Derby finals were run off in Akron, O., last year. These spectators, who crowded close to the fence for every race, included some boys who look like future champions.

KINSMEN CLUB IS DEVOTED TO SERVICE

"To assist the underprivileged—to ensure that those children of Belleville and district who cannot help themselves be given those things which are needed most in this highly competitive world—good eyesight and better health."

That is the shining beacon, the pledge which motivates the work and efforts of members of the Belleville Kinsmen Club, men of the ordinary trades and pursuits and professions of Belleville, young men of civic progress all, who have taken unto themselves the task of caring for Belleville children.

"Why the Soap Box Derby? Why the Karnivans and other endeavours of this civic minded organization? It has been asked so frequently.

"In order that the sightless may see. That better health may be regained by the proper prescription and care.

"There is probably no more energetic organization of younger men in any community than those who go to make up the Kinsmen Clubs of the towns and cities. In Belleville the club has flourished and grown through the efforts and work expended by its active board of directors and directors, supported by each individual co-worker of the club.

The Belleville Kinsmen Club is an affiliate of the National Association of Kinsmen Clubs of Canada, composed of some fifty-three clubs. Back in the year 1932 several Belleville men, imbued with the desire to help the growth of their city conceived the idea of organizing locally and with the help of the Ottawa club, held its first meeting in December. The Belleville club received its charter on July 5, 1934, and has steadily grown.

Service work has always been the aim and business of the club. In this work they have devoted their efforts principally to relieving conditions among the underprivileged children of Belleville, a work which has characteristically been carried on without advertising or thought of personal recognition or personal glory.

Early in 1935 the club sponsored a dramatic production in which its gifted members took part, a project which netted its first funds necessar for the setting up of an eye clinic for the Belleville children. This clinic was under the direction of Kinsmen Dr. Ralph Bird, a clinic which has been carried on continuously since, and one which has earned the undying thanks of Belleville for its work. This service, however has meant a continuous and steady outlay of money, and it has become necessary from time to time to organize other projects to secure funds to continue.

New glasses have been purchased and replaced. Special examinations have been made continuously and prescriptions filled. This work is done without cost to parent or city and many an underprivileged child has been able to enter the world of work and business fully endowed with those natural advantages so sadly lacking but for the interest of members of the Kinsmen Club.

Again this year, encouraged by the success of the three other annual events, members of the club are staging the fourth Soap Box derby. Originally sponsored by active past-president Cleo Colling, this annual competition which has attracted world-wide attention and brought Belleville the fame of being the first Canadian city to hold such an event, has brought also the thrill of thrills to the young participants and spectators alike. This year it will be new and different with a larger registration of competitors than ever and with new and better effects to make the race more thrilling and keener in competition.

It is an event that has been copied by other municipalities of Ontario and Canada and one that annually returns to the hard working members of the Kinsmen Club, just a small part of the funds needed to bring Belleville children better eyesight and better health.

But help and assistance of the people of Belleville is needed to ensure this success, to carry on this worthy work and Kinsmen ask that that same support of past years be given.

The Ontario Intelligencer

Daily voice of the busy life of Belleville, and recorder of the deeds, doings and local history generally of this city, wishes to congratulate the officers and members of the Belleville Kinsmen Club for their helpful interest and activities in behalf of the Betterment of Belleville, particularly in the efforts of the Club in behalf of children with eyesight defects, some in danger of going blind. Helping children to better sight is a noble work and worthy of hearty commendation—that these children should have to face life's battle with such a handicap as defective eyesight when it is possible to remove that handicap with expert treatment is unthinkable. The slogan of Better Sight means Better Citizenship and the Belleville Kinsmen Club is making a valuable contribution to the Betterment of Belleville.

Congratulations are also due the Kinsmen for their interest in juvenile sport which has produced the Soap Box Derby contests which give every boy a chance to compete for valuable prizes, to exercise inventive genius in the building of his own speed vehicle, encouraging initiative, courage and confidence and skill. The Soap Box Derby is more than appears on the surface and its development year by year will be watched with interest by all as a worthy adjunct in the training of youth for Better Citizenship.

That the Belleville Kinsmen may flourish and grow great in good works is the wish of THE ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER.

A Feast of Champions!

The annual champions' banquet marks the close of a busy, busy day for champions at the National Soap Box Derby finals in Akron, O. After the race is won, there's only one boy in first place—but every boy is a champion at the dinner table. Parents and escorts fill the huge armory, where the Champions' Banquet is held, and where the awards are made. And there's always "stand-ing room only" at this big banquet!

"But it can to me," she said, and her lips closed so sharply that for a moment it seemed she had really swallowed her confidence after all. However, she went on more coolly: "Have you ever heard of Adam Probert?"

"The millionaire?"

"The same; money seems to be his whole reputation. Well, Adam Probert is tearing down the woods in Court Brandon to build semi-detached houses. I don't know whether you'd heard about it from Perry?" She raised a glance of enquiry over the edge of her cup. He shook his head.

"Perry doesn't tell me very much; we don't meet very often these days. I suppose he's busy, and I know I am."

"Lyddon—" Her hands moved together upon the edge of the table, and fastened nervously upon each other. She was in common an still that any gesture of hers seemed weighted with an obscure symbolism. "I love Court Brandon. You don't know how; I wouldn't wish you to know how. It isn't a comfortable state. But it means that he can't have it; he can't go on despoiling my trees, fouling my brooks, building his crude little bungalows on my meadows. It means I can't bear that he should. If he succeeds, I believe that I shall die."

She looked up upon his little murmur of protest, and smiled in bleak reassurance. "No, not alkies, my dear, don't worry; but just that I shall be an uprooted tree, and die for lack of food to keep me alive—that's all. Oh, I know it sounds far-fetched; so many of the truest things on earth do. But you see, it's all I want, all I've ever wanted. Towns, and seas, and France, they've all tried to supply that blood of life to me; but I never feel it anywhere but here, near Court Brandon. So you see that I have to stop him, before it's too late."

"But how can you," he cried. "Oh, I'm sorry, my dear, even if I don't understand. But what can you do?"

"I don't know yet, except that I know how to begin; and afterwards perhaps there will be some new inspiration. You see — it's simply an error really, a transaction of about seventy years ago which never was recorded—but that torn up my hedge, sold my holly trees, and is beginning to build on my ground. It's sheer luck, because knew I possessed until now. Look at this!"

She reached for her bag, and drew out from it, and laid before him, the letter and the year-book, and explained, with some despairing eagerness now, but still not as the bitter and desperate Catherine who had faced Adam Probert, the meaning of both, and what she hoped from them.

"I see!" he said slowly, and turned the leaves of the year-book in his hand. "And you want me to see Hart for you; is that it?"

TOO LATE TO WITHDRAW

"Either you, or both of us together. There are no Pooles left now to be hurt; and all we want is a copy of his signature, or failing that, a witness to it; and perhaps, if we're very lucky, this man Hart will remember things his father said about Poole. He was an eccentric, you know, and so all his doings were news; and though there was no one but himself and Green to talk about this, and I don't think either of them would read it very far, still he may have mentioned it to his solicitor. Will you help me, Lyddon?"

"Why am I living else?" he said simply.

"Do you remember," she asked softly, what you said to me the day that I came home? You asked me to promise to come to you if I wanted something less than the moon."

"I remember. I have said that, to you, Catherine, in words or in my mind, every time that ever we have been together."

"Well, this is my something less. Will you back me in this law-suit, Lyddon?" She leaned forward, suddenly cold and trembling, until his face was close to hers. The first beginning to spring up soft but sudden over the quiet tables scattered round, for they had forgotten where they were; but nothing could break into the spell of her desperate single-mindedness that hypnotic influence which swept aside all lesser interests body from her path and his, and left only this one end and meaning, the destruction of Adam Probert.

"That's the use of beating about the bush? I haven't a chance, and you know it. What there was went in paying for the cruise that cured me. If there had been just a little less weight of persuasion. I don't believe I should have consented to spend it that way. I didn't want to be cured. But at the time I was too tired to argue; it was easier to fall in with everything they planned for me. There was the cruise, and the long stay in Bayonne; and then there was little left, and I spent that on a Paris wardrobe. Why not? It was only the final drain.

"Now, I have just enough capital to bring me in an income of a few pounds a week. Oh, I'm not complaining for myself. But it leaves no provision for fighting law-suits, does it?"

She knew that she had hurt him profoundly by the coldness which came upon his face, and by the swift movement of his hand which flew silently over the space of table between them and lit upon her hand. She saw him open his lips to protest, that she must—yes, and knew what she must—she must marry him, that she must let him take care of her, and not go back to that poverty. She closed her eyes, to shut out the sight; the sound she could not escape, though she had not meant to arouse it. But oddly the sound did not come. Lyddon Strang sat staring at her face, and it came to him that this was not the time, that he had had his chance, and that it was not to be mishandled at this hour. Instead of the wild words he had meant to utter, he said in a low voice:

"You know that everything I have is yours. I should have been angry if you had gone to anyone but me."

"Then you will back me?" she said eagerly, opening her dazed eyes again in a passion of excitement.

"To the last ditch, my dear. What did you think?"

"But supposing we lose our case? I don't see how we can, if all these points come out right; but supposing we do?"

"I shall not care. If the fight is yours, then it's mine, too." He looked at his watch. "It's still only six, or rather ten minutes to six. Would you like to see Hart now, if we can find him? He's usually at home by this. He's an old man now, and likes to be in early, and spend the evening very much at his leisure. Would you like to hunt the Hart?"

"If you think there's time. Where does he live?"

In a bachelor apartment near here, central and yet quiet. And very nice, too. It's my belief the old man will be retiring pretty soon. Come along, we'll take a taxi."

They left the cafe, and found a taxi crawling in the narrow streets of the old town for the homeward fares he often found there at this hour. This old district was still the business headquarters of the town, and knew more secrets, and handled more money, than the more showy offices in the new streets around it.

Catherine leaned back in her corner with a long sigh and turned her cheek against the glass. She still felt his eyes constant and cool upon her, now and then noting which she felt even though she did not meet them. It was as if he had already won his battle, though just then she felt rather as if she had lost than gained by that stormy confidence. Why had she reminded him of the words he had said to her on the platform? "If ever you want anything less than the moon, promise to come to me—" It sounded too much like a formula. It sounded like a rite, something performed by midnight to win a fortune, or a sweetheart, or something else one deeply desired. Catherine's heart knew a superstitious tremor, as if she had called up some elemental she would find it impossible to lay.

They drove, and she did not speak; and as for Lyddon Strang, he sat as ever, tender and immaculate and irreproachable, watching her; but even so that uneasiness remained. The magic word, whatever it was, was said, and could not be recalled. She put it from her mind, but not without effort, as they drew up at the discreet door of the building in which Mr. Hart had his apartment.

The person of Lyddon Strang had powers, of that there was no doubt; it opened doors with a greased smoothness beyond effort, and without a word, at any rate in this old man's home.

They were shown into a cosy room, half library, half study where there burned a fire unwarrantably large for the time of year and the hour of the evening; and presently came in Mr. Hart himself, a tall old man, grey-haired but still wonderfully straight in the back, and still shrewd-faced behind the mask of wrinkles left by the keeping of fifty years of secrets. Whether he was glad or sorry to see them was a thing impossible to tell; but he made them comfortable.

"And now, Mr. Strang, what can I do for you both?"

Lyddon exhaled smoke in a thin blue cloud, and asked "Do you ever remember hearing of a man called Richard Poole?"

LYDDON PROPOSES

Old Mr. Hart looked from one to the other of them with a reflective smile, and said:

"I remember a whole tribe of Pooles by reputation, but I never knew but one of them myself, and he was an old man when I first went into the business. I gather he must be the one you want, for he hailed from Court Brandon, which I think must be your country, Mrs. Court."

"That's our man The last of his family, I believe, except for one daughter." Lyddon glanced at Catherine with brows lifted in enquiry, "Is that right?"

She nodded. "You see, Mr. Hart, the Pooles are now extinct, as of course you'll know; and the last of them was my husband's grandmother, Anna Poole, Richard's daughter. Now, we have evidence that Richard Poole made a rather farcical purchase of a strip of meadow and a hedge which could not possibly be of any use to him. The purchase was made, according to our account, in 1864, which naturally puts it out of your recollection; but if you could even show us a signature of his to pair with the one we have—" She stopped, a smile breaking on her lips, for the old man's wrinkled face was laughing gently. "I see you do know something about it."

"Oh, yes, it was before my time, of course, but the old fellow lived until 1896—he was eighty-six when he died—and I got to know him quite well. I certainly never expected to hear of that business again; it was a thing of which he was far from proud, but it passed as a joke between him and my father. It was after his death I first heard about it, when we were clearing up his estate; and a pretty muddle it was, too. Naturally we were discussing the old chap and his eccentricities, and this story came up among many others which no one but my father knew, and which I'm sure he passed on to no one else."

"And a better than I hoped for" said Catherine, with flushing cheeks. "Please tell us, Mr. Hart, I admit it puzzled me; it seemed so senseless; it even made me, in my own mind, doubt the evidence I had."

"There's no need the purchase was genuine enough, though of course he never attempted to exact any advantage from it, never tried to get a penny more out of it, and as far I know, refused to let my father repay it personally as among his possessions. That is why we had no record of it. The old man said; 'It's my own fault, and it's lost me a hundred kulneas; and I'll never cry over it; it's done. Which I'm sure he passed on to no one else."

"The distinction between motion pictures with a message and self-seeking propaganda is one delectable only through the processes of common sense."—Will H. Hays.

UP THE LADDER

By B. H. WILKINSON

Mariel Hardwick would one day be famous. All her friends knew it. They told Mariel as quite openly, and she agreed with them.

Mariel didn't believe in false modesty. Her drawings were good and she knew it.

Sibs kept them from the ranks and she felt there was a lot of credit due her.

The top was still a long way off but she could see it rising above the horizon, and she felt satisfied that one day in the not too distant future she'd reach it. It was a comforting thought.

Other girls in Mariel's circle of friends, many of them older than she, were still wallowing in the muck of oblivion.

There was Carola Andrews, for example.

Carola was Mariel's closest friend. Mariel felt more sorry for her than for all the others. For Carola had ambitions. Or did have, once. She had wanted to be a violinist. But after high school she'd given it up. Said she'd merely taken up music because it was her folks' wishes anyhow. Sour grapes. Pride, she'd had her chance and thrown it away. Hadn't been willing to sacrifice anything for the future. And now—Mariel sighed again—now where was Carola? Working in a politician's office in Washington. A stenographer—something. Poor Carola.

Mariel smoothed out a clean sheet of paper and picked up her pen. She must write to Carola.

It had been almost six months now since the last letter, three years since Carola had gone to Washington.

The girls had—kept up a scant correspondence, but Mariel knew or suspected that Carola had never got over the last hurt they had had together.

"You shouldn't be doing this, darling," Mariel had said.

"You have talent. Through misuse you can make your bid to fame. It's worth sacrificing something for."

But Carola had only smiled and gone off smiling with a look in her eyes that Mariel had misunderstood.

Carola had gone and Mariel had stuck to her earliest ambitions.

She had continued to draw cartoons and submit them to editors. And at last had come first success.

A newspaper syndicate bought a drawing. Later they bought more, and still later she signed a contract with the same syndicate to do a scheduled series.

Now she had an office of her own, and was relishing her reward.

She was famous among her friends; sometime she would be famous in the world. And poor Carola, who had quit in favor of a $30 a week office job was "somewhere in Washington."

Mariel chewed the end of her pen.

An idea flashed across her mind. Some day she was going to be famous.

Some day her letters, the little informal, personal notes such as she wrote to Carola, would be famous too. They would be in demand. The public would crave them. And those people who had long been written would share in that fame. It would be said of them that they had been the ones who were nice friends of the great and famous Mariel Hardwick. They would be shadowed only by the great Miss Hardwick.

This thought was stimulating. Mariel smiled to herself, and flushed with the pleasure of it.

It would be kind, she thought, kind and generous to write little notes often to Carola, to say things that would please and please her. She had read, to assure Carola of her fondness for her.

When later the letters were exploited for her benefit of the public, it would reveal what a loyal, devoted, magnanimous friend she had been. It would add to her popularity.

Mariel dipped her pen.

"Darling Carola," she wrote, "It has been so long since your last letter came I think of you often, and of the jolly times we used to have together. We were such good friends. Perhaps you have heard of my slight success; Millie mentioned that she had written to you about it. Please don't feel for a single minute that I think any more of you or feel superior in any way whatever because of it. We are just the same, darling, and always will be to you. Success has meant nothing save the satisfaction of an ambition, and even though further fame should reward my efforts, I shall continue in my present role.

"I know that it must be terribly monotonous and boring for you, tied down up in a stuffy office down there in Washington during this hot weather. I do wish you could come up for a week-end. We could go to the country together and—"

A knock sounded on Mariel's door and she stopped writing.

"Come in," she said.

The door opened, and a young man, wearing a slouch hat and a smart sport suit entered. He looked around curiously.

"Are you Mariel Hardwick?"

"Yes," said Mariel.

"Well, I'm from the National Weekly Journal—"

"CRI!" said Mariel. Her cheeks flowed. "Do sit down."

"Thanks". The young man sat down and produced a pad and pencil.

"It's an interview, then!" Mariel cried.

"Well, yes," said the young man. "In a way. Do you know Carola Andrews?"

"Carola Andrews? Why—yes. Why? Has she—done something?"

"I'll say she has! She's running for congress! And she'll be elected, too!"

"What?" said Mariel.

"Miss Hardwick we've learned that you and Miss Andrews used to be pretty good friends, used to correspond. We want those letters for our paper, Miss Hardwick. They would be shadowed only by the great Miss Hardwick.

This thought was stimulating. Mariel smiled to herself, and flushed with the pleasure of it.

Little Benny's Note Book

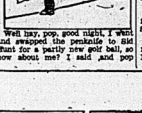
Pop was smoking and thinking and I was just thinking, saying. Darn that guy.

Are you alluding to Hitler, or is it perhaps Mussolini? pop said, and I said, No sir, neither. It's Fuds Stinkins.

O, that guy, pop said, and I said, He went and swapped me his one bladed penknife that's suppose to open by itself when you push the spring, and here it only worked about once every 35 times and by that time I was exhausted pushing, darn that guy.

Dont exhaust yourself still further by darning him, his conscience will assume you many times over, pop said, and I said, That darn guy has no conscience.

Perhaps he hasn't, on the surface, but psychology sees further than we do, pop said. According to psychology our real conscience is berried deep in our sub-conscious and operates all unknown to us. In other words Fuds may apparently forget the trick he played on you, but his ghost will haunt him all the rest of his life. It will bob up out of his subconscious mind all through the years and make him feel simply terrible, even though he doesn't quite know why, and it may even give him a little bald spot when he least expects it. In other words it will be on his conscience, so you can even afford the luxury of feeling sorry for him pop said.



Well hay, pop, good night, I wish and swapped the penknife to Sid Hunt for a partly new golf ball, so how about me? I said and pop said. Yee gods this is serious.

And he felt the top of my head a spell. I dont feel any bald spot yet, but you better call Sid up right away and give him a chance to swap back, and tell him why.

Which I did, and Sid claimed the knife was working perfect on account of him having put oil on it making me feel worse instead of better.

"It just doesn't do to close your mind to everything!"—Ida M. Tarbell.

"It is not change alone which is the challenge; it is the rate of change in our economic and social order."—William O. Douglas.

"History records many attempts to impose domination upon Europe, but all those attempts have sooner or later terminated in disaster for those who made them."—Lord Halifax.

It's a Gruelling Pace for Champs!

And this little champion took time out for forty winks. All togged out in his snappy official racer's uniform, he climbed into this handy box, placed his chrome-plated helmet on his knee, and dozed off to dreamland. But it's no wonder a fellow gets a little tired at Akron, O., where they hold the Soap Box Derby finals. There's just so doggone much to see and do!

U. S. Cuts Foreign Silver Price to 35 Cents an Ounce

Treasury May Intervene to Set World Silver Price

Shipments of Silver from London Made at Profit Today for First Time in Two Weeks

33.84c AT LONDON

Officials at Washington Do Not Say What Disparity in London and Washington Prices Means

Washington, July 10—(AP)—The United States Treasury cut its foreign silver price again today to set a price of 35 cents an ounce.

This figure was sufficiently above the London Silver Market price of 32.84 cents to make shipping of the metal across the Atlantic for the first time in about two weeks.

The 35 cents represented a reduction of 1.75 cents from the last quoted price Friday.

With the London market price at 32.84 cents, and since it costs only about one half of one per cent an ounce to ship silver across the ocean, it became profitable to buy silver in London and ship it here for sale to the United States Treasury.

Disparity in Prices

Officials would not say what the disparity in the new treasury and the London price means, but private observers commented the difference might mean that the treasury once more would intervene to stabilize the world silver price.

For about four years before June 26, the treasury had virtually dictated the world price of silver, by holding its offering price steady, regardless of what the London price was. Consequently, the London price usually stayed a fraction of a cent below the treasury price.

Why the Weather!

Air distribution! Ordinarily one thinks of the atmosphere as evenly distributed over the earth. But this is never really so at any season of the year.

The sun at this time of the year shines with the greatest intensity over the northern hemisphere, and the air is lighter there than in the southern hemisphere by several billion tons. The greatest flow from the southern to the southern hemisphere is from March to May inclusive, and from the southern to the northern is from September to November. In midsummer the northern is from September to November. In midsummer the northern hemisphere has about 10 trillion tons less air than the southern. This is about one sixth of one per cent. of the whole mass of air.

ONTARIO PREMIER AND DUPLESSIS MAY HELP MANION

Premiers Impatient at So - Called "Do Nothing" Policy of King

BREACH IS WIDE

Toronto, July 10—(CP)—Premier Hepburn of Ontario and Premier Duplessis of Quebec may "actively join" the forces opposing Prime Minister Mackenzie King's government, the Globe and Mail today quotes "usually well informed sources on Parliament Hill" as saying.

In a newspaper story, the paper reports Hon. Ian Mackenzie, Minister of National Defence, visited Premier Hepburn's farm near St. Thomas last week as a "dove of peace" but there is a "strong possibility" that the Premiers "will openly support Hon. Dr. Robert J. Manion," National Conservative party leader.

"Impatient and appalled, it is said, over the do nothing policy of the Mackenzie King government in the face of awesome Canadian economic and employment problems, Premiers Hepburn and Duplessis of Ontario and Quebec" may actively join the anti-King government forces in an attempt to establish a Ottawa some directional drive for betterment," the report informed sources on Parliament Hill declare as an expected fall election draws near," the paper states.

"Hon Ian Mackenzie, colorful and personable Defence Minister in the Mackenzie King cabinet, was despatched last week to the Hepburn farm as the 'dove of peace,' and while he returned to the capital not too disturbed and somewhat optimistic, it is known definitely that

EASTERN CANADA FATALITY TOLL MOUNTS TO 33

Twenty-Four Persons Drowned in Eastern Canada at the Week-End

HIGHWAYS JAMMED

Girl at Perth Drowned and Sister Meets Same Fate Trying to Rescue Her

(By The Canadian Press)

Death struck in the water from the Maritime Provinces to Ontario as 24 persons drowned in Eastern Canada over the week-end. Only Nova Scotia escaped the fatal creep, recording 15 drownings, Quebec six, Prince Edward Island, two, and New Brunswick, one.

Eight other violent deaths brought the total number of accidental fatalities to 33 in the East. Heat prostration, a falling tree and a train each accounted for one death, while five were killed in highway accidents.

In all provinces thousands sought relief from extreme heat, jamming highways and crowding beach resorts. At last week end the sun chased the mercury to four-high marks in many sections of the east.

Of the drownings, eight were double fatalities. One woman was drowned at Arundel, Que., while seeking to rescue a man who drowned. A man rescued near Newcastle, Ont., in a saltwater mishap in which his son was drowned, died later in hospital.

Sentimental Bets May Go Down On Trapper's Horses

Edmonton, July 10 (CP)—More than one sentimental bet is expected, will be placed next week when the Governor of the Edmonton exhibition meet on three horses brought here from the bush on a rail two weeks ago by George Brown, trainer, trapper and gold miner.

Railbirds at the exhibition ground saw little chance of one Brown's horses even running, considered another a big question mark, but in the third fly are possibilities.

They saw no chance of a victory for Last Chance, a 14-year-old half-thoroughbred that got little or hurdle race here last year and refused to take the first jump, for Brown's grandson, Gordon Campbell II, a two-year-old that hadn't even been broke to the game to Edmonton.

Then there is Flaming Lizzie, a six-year-old mare. Although exercised little during the winter, she has sounded fine since she fell with another week of training she is expected to ready to go after her master's—and her stable-companions—best.

Brown was down to his last $5 when the racing season ended last year, so he waited his horses to the place at Keeps Hills, in the bush country 16 miles west of Edmonton. During the winter he lived in a tent, scraping a living from his trap lines.

This spring his leading rat was wasted away and he was forced to build another, 36 feet by 18, on Edmonton's outskirts, moving to Edmonton down the North Saskatchewan River.

Inhabitants of Mars, If Any, Must Be Breathers of Carbon Dioxide

Pasadena, Calif., July 10 (AP)—Astronomers watching the 15-mile-a-second approach of the Planet Mars believe its inhabitants, if any, must be carbon dioxide breathers.

If raiders from Mars rode space ships to the earth they would need an immediate supply of dry ice The ice would keep them near their accustomed temperature and the carbon dioxide fumes from the melting ice would give them their kind of air.

Astronomers place Mars' noon temperature at 40 degrees, ranging downward to 100 below zero at night.

Dr. Walter S. Adams, director of the Carnegie Institution's Mount Wilson Observatory, said Mars has "as in the case of Venus, the most surprising results is the almost complete absence of oxygen on Mars, the most recent observations showing the quantity must be less than one per cent of that over equal areas of the earth's surface at sea level."

Astronomers estimate that Mars on July 27 will come within 36,000,000 miles of the earth, its nearest approach in fifteen years.

CBC Sets Up Policy For Use of Broadcasts In Election Periods

Ottawa, July 10 (CP)—Under a new policy of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, established national parties will be allotted on a proportionate basis free use of the coast-to-coast network for broadcasting political argument in general election campaigns.

The new C.B.C. policy was set forth in a statement issued Saturday following meetings of the Board of Governors. No time will be purchasable for broadcasting on the national networks between the time of dissolution of parliament and voting.

Free time for provincial campaigns also is contemplated once the system has been tried out in a general election, according to the statement which also covered other aspects of controversial broadcasting, political and non-political.

Although the corporation will make provision for wider expression of opinion by private individuals, it will place restrictions on use of the national networks for controversial broadcasts on purchased time.

It also is set forth that time may be purchased for political speeches and that the C.B.C. organization in progress, that is between an election date and the date of dissolution of parliament.

None of the corporations plans for election broadcasts alter in any way the regulations under the Broadcasting Act forbidding broadcasts later than 48 hours before the polls open, and forbidding political dramatizations.

Before the plan was accepted, it was discussed with official representatives of party organizations. It has been accepted on behalf of the Liberal, Conservative, C.C.F. and Social Credit parties as a fair and equitable basis for handling the problem.

The plan is designed to place campaign broadcasts on a more orderly and democratic basis than in the past. From the listeners' point of view, it also aims at keeping the total amount of political broadcasts within reasonable limits.

The corporation also announced that, under the new arrangements for administering subsidiary hook-ups to privately owned stations, to be effective Sept. 24 ,the corporation itself will deal with sponsors and agencies, book time and quote rates.

The corporation said the new arrangements did not involve the taking over of private stations or interfering with their operation. Neither did it affect any existing regulation. It was largely an "administrative procedure".

CENTRE ISLAND SCENE OF PANIC AS STORM BREAKS

Thousands Mob Ferry Docks in Toronto and Some Injured

CROWD CROWS ANGRY

Toronto, July 10—(CP)—Life at Centre Island returned to normal today. Residents welcomed the quiet after witnessing stampedes like scenes as the resort experienced the most hectic hours in its history last night.

Caught in a sudden shower, a crowd estimated at 24,000, seeking relief from heat on the mainland, mobbed the ferry docks. They created a bedlam of screams and shouts as the crash of thunder sent panic through their ranks.

Grown men and women in the long wait and tight jostling in the heat, holidayers grew angry and tried to shove their way by a few police constables and the gang-planks of waiting ferries.

Extra boats were placed into service but the crowds were too large to be handled. Thousands pressed toward the edge of the dock and there was continual danger of some being pushed into the water.

Larger ferries, making the regular 10-minute trips to and from the mainland, were incapable of handling a crowd of 1,300 people last night made many trips with 2,000 aboard. The people forced their way on to the ferries as Toronto Transportation officials were unable to pull up the gang planks in time.

Carried to Mainland

Racing across the dark and choppy waters of Toronto harbor, a life saving station boat, shuttled back and forth steadily, carrying escaped and injured people to the mainland. One girl suffered a crushed foot when the gang plank dropped upon it as a surge of passengers boarded one of the ferries.

Hundreds of persons were separated from their families and friends. Fathers, mothers and children lost their way on the crowded land, hoping the next boatload would produce those they had unwittingly left behind in the crush.

With each arrival of a ferry, a cheer went up from the crowd, many of whom had been waiting for three to four hours. All the intense atmosphere of panic swept through the closely-packed thousands, some of them started singing "O Canada" and the crowd joined in the tune.

When the crowd finally climbed out, broken heels, clips and various pieces of personal equipment were scattered over the dock.

COOLING WINDS SCATTERED RAINS BRING RELIEF

United States Has Breathing Spell From Heat Which Claimed 50 Victims

112 DEG. IN ARIZONA

Chicago, July 10—(AP)— Cooling winds and scattered rains gave most of the United States a breathing spell today after the most torrid weather of the year.

The heat relief began to fade yesterday but it was hot enough to score its record mark in the 1939 mark in some cities and above 90 in scores of communities.

Heat discharging forces moved over the northern lake region yesterday and were expected to penetrate sections by tonight.

Heat claimed 50 victims directly to the heat in Detroit yesterday, bringing the death toll for five days to more than 100. There were heat victims in at least 17 states.

The mercury climbed to 112 yesterday at Yuma and Phoenix, Ariz. It was within a degree of the hottest July 9 at Phoenix since establishment of the weather bureau there 44 years ago.

59 Circus Men, Mostly Laborers Are Taken Ill

Montreal, July 10—(CP)—Officials at Notre Dame and St. Luke's hospital reported today an improvement in the condition of 59 circus workers, mostly laborers, who were brought to the institutions after arrival of the Barnum and Bailey circus train here Saturday night. They were believed suffering from ptomaine poisoning.

The patients, all men, were not believed in serious condition. The 7-year-old Napoleon Cyr received the last sacraments of the Roman Catholic Church after his admittance to Notre Dame Hospital at an early hour this morning.

An official at Notre Dame, where 20 of the men were admitted, said: "Their condition is a telephone call at 2 p.m. from a doctor who had examined the patients at the railway station. The men were brought to the hospitals in ambulances and taxicabs.

The circus opens a two-day engagement today.

STUNS TROUT WITH STONE

Owen Sound, Ont., July 10 — (CP)—Mr. H. Peck, of Toronto made a record catch here. Standing on a dock, he saw a large speckled trout near the surface of the water. He picked up a stone and threw it at the fish. It stunned the fish long enough for him to get it with a pike pole. The trout weighed two pounds.

MALTA IS ADDED, TOITALY'S DEMAND SAYS NEWSPAPER

Resto del Carlino Wants Mediterranean to be 'Free Sea'

RAW MATERIALS

Italian Newspaper Claims Special Agreements Should Furnish Raw Materials

Rome, July 10 (CP-Havas)—Malta was added to Italy's territorial demands today by the newspaper Resto Del Carlino. The Fascist organ also demanded Gibraltar for Spain.

"Its real pacification desired," the newspaper asked, "a pacification which will make possible armaments limitation and economic collaboration, and in general will make a period of constructive peace possible."

"To get a real peace it is necessary to start from a new basis. Therefore Italy should have Tunis, Djibouti and Suez. Italian lands like Malta should be Italian and Spanish lands like Gibraltar should be Spanish.

"Only thus will the Mediterranean be a free sea. Only then will be able to guarantee free passage in that sea to the English. Germany should have: Danzig and the Corridor as well as its former colonies.

"These demands should be negotiated to furnish Italy and Germany with raw materials which they need without forcing three two nations to weaken their own gold reserves."

TWO TRANSIENTS GIVEN 18 MONTHS

Roy Clarke and Herbert White Sentenced for Theft of Car and Gasoline

Roy Clarke and Herbert White, two transients who were arrested on June 29 last following a hectic police chase on the Kingston road and who were subsequently charged with the theft of a motor car, the property of Thomas Fenton, were each sentenced to serve eighteen months in the Ontario Reformatory, with an indeterminate period thereafter in the Ontario Industrial Farm, when appeared before Magistrate F. J. Butler, K.C., for sentence today after having pleaded guilty to the previous court.

On a second charge of the theft of five gallons of gasoline the pair pleaded guilty and were sentenced to three months in the same institution, the latter sentences to run concurrent with the former ones, however.

Both men had lengthy records of previous convictions as presented by Crown Attorney H. C. Donnelly, K.C., today. "This matter of stealing automobiles is becoming much too frequent and the courts must try and stamp it out with severe punishment," stated his worship.

Britain is Firmly Resolved to Carry Out Undertakings

Prime Minister Chamberlain Reiterates in House of Commons Pledge Given to Poland to Maintain Her Independence

A BLUNT WARNING

Chamberlain's Statement Made After Consultation With Polish and French Governments Over the Weekend

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, July 10—(CP Cable)—In a carefully-worded statement Prime Minister Chamberlain told the House of Commons today that Great Britain is "firmly resolved" to carry out her pledge of assistance to Poland should a German coup within Danzig cause Poland to fight for her national existence and independence.

Chamberlain's statement was designed to remove all doubt about the extent of the Anglo-Polish pledge. He referred to the constitutional situation in Danzig as "neither lastingly unjust nor illogical" but expressed the belief it might be capable of improvement by negotiation in a calmer international atmosphere.

Five Rise to Fears

"Recent occurrences in Danzig," Mr. Chamberlain declared, "have inevitably given rise to fears that it is intended to settle her future status by unilateral action, perhaps used by surreptitious methods, thus disturbing Poland and other powers with a fait accompli.

"If such circumstances any action taken by Poland to restore the situation would, it is suggested, be represented as an act of aggression on her part, and if her action were supported by other powers that would be accused of aiding and abetting her in the use of force."

If the sequence of events should in fact be such as is contemplated by the British and honorable members (the house) will realize from what I have said that the issue could not be considered as a purely local matter involving the rights and liberties of Danzigers, which incidentally in no way are threatened, but would at once raise graver issues affecting Polish national existence and independence.

Firmly Resolved

"We have guaranteed to give our assistance to Poland in the event of a clear threat to her independence, and we consider it vital to stand with her national forces, and we are firmly resolved to carry out this undertaking.

The Prime Minister's statement was made in consultation with the Polish and French governments.

Unlike earlier warnings from Viscount Halifax, Foreign Secretary, it dealt specifically with Danzig and the possibility of a Nazi coup. Prime Minister Chamberlain said he is no question of any oppression of the German minority in Danzig. He said they had control of the civic administration and their liberties were not curtailed.

The Prime Minister reminded Germany that Chancellor Hitler himself had agreed once to maintain the present status of Danzig until 1944 by treaty. Until last March the Germans apparently be-

Lord 'Tiger' Gort too Busy As Chief of Staff to Hold Birthday

By PAT USSHER

London, July 10 (CP)—Viscount Gort, Chief of the Imperial General Staff, nicknamed "Tiger" for his energy and industry, is earning that nickname to the full these days.

Summer months mean holiday time to millions of Britons but not to "Tiger" Gort.

Ever since War Secretary Leslie Hore-Belisha's sweeping army reforms in December, 1937, to the highest position on Britain's Army Council Lord Gort has been up to his elbows in work. And there's no sign of a respite in his task of bringing the country's armies to the peak of efficiency.

Lord Gort is far too busy with 100 and one details to celebrate the occasion. He's carrying on with the complete job of preparing the military forces of the country for any emergency, dealing with that goes the equally important job of how to dispose of the forces available. That, incidentally, is particularly to the liking of "Tiger" Gort. Get results, is his motto.

And military strategy has always been one of his favorite studies.

Only a few months ago Gort toured the Maginot Line, France's vaunted defensive system against the German frontier.

A stickler for detail, he still finds time to inspect, first hand the training of Britain's new recruits—the militiamen and the territorials as well as those in the regular army.

When the "Terriers" began their summer field training by manning anti-aircraft defences in London Lord Gort, army chief was there on his desk in the war office to see the militiamen at work. There was no need to worry that things will be left undone as long as "Tiger" Gort is on the job.

ESKIMO LANCES UNEARTHED

Quebec, July 10 (CP)—Six ancient lances, believed by authoritative persons to have been carried by Eskimos, have been unearthed at Havre St. Pierre, on the Quebec North Shore, it learned today. The lances, measuring about 30-inches in length and all in perfect condition, were dug up by Paul Cormier, a coastal trader, while digging in a garden at the Havre. Five of the lances are carved from slate stone, while the sixth was made from quartz.

BRIGHTON CHILD KILLED BY CAR

John Bradley of This City Unable to Avoid Striking Child as She Runs Directly in Front of Vehicle

In sight of her home, four-year-old Floye Craig, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Craig, Prince Edward street, Brighton, died of injuries received after being struck by an automobile driven by John Bradley of this city, and ran directly in front of the latter's car. Mr. Bradley immediately tried to swerve his car to avoid striking the little girl, but she had darted out into the street so quickly that the driver was unable to avoid striking her. Mr. Bradley stopped his car in a very short distance as he was travelling at a moderate speed, fifteen miles per hour, he later told Constable Sidney Hampton. Medical aid was immediately summoned but the little girl had succumbed to her injuries before the arrival of Dr. Clarke and Coroner Rundle.

Floye Craig, who was survived by her brother Paul, was enroute to Brighton from Toronto where she went to join their parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Bradley of this city who were enjoying a day's outing at the Point.

"I was proceeding southerly on Prince Edward street at a very moderate rate of speed when suddenly a little figure dashed out from in front of a child directly in front of my radiator. I swerved the car and jammed on the brakes, but it was too late, the front part of the car struck the child knocking her down," Mr. Bradley told Constable Simpson. Although an inquest was ordered for today, no suggestion of carelessness was attached Mr. Bradley, police authorities announced today. "We are satisfied the regrettable accident was purely accidental and no person feels the effect of the tragedy more than Mr. Bradley, who was acquainted with Mr. and Mrs. Craig," Provincial Police authorities were informed this morning.

BASS SIGNS ARE PROMINENTLY DISPLAYED

New bass signs issued by the Ontario Federation of Anglers have been received in the city and placed on prominent display in sporting goods and hardware stores calling attention of visitors to the fact that no more than six bass may legally be taken in one day by any fisherman. A legal bass is at least ten inches from the tip of the snout to the centre of the tail and may be caught only during the period from July 1 to October 15.

TWO MORE ENTRIES FOR THE DERBY

In Tuesday night's Kinsmen Soap Box Derby on North Front street, the car driven by Ronald Barrett, age 13, of 118 Pinnacle street is being sponsored by the John Forsythe Shirt Company, and a car driven by Robert Holland, age 11 of 69 Moira street west is sponsored by Holland Bros. Service Station, dealers in Firestone tires.

SOUTHERN RESIDENTS FIND WEATHER WARM

Touring Ontario in an effort to escape a southern heat wave which had been felt in parts of Southern Georgia, two residents of that state who entered a downtown service station in North Front street this week perspiring brows and declared their intention of turning their machine where it's cooler, unless you fellows can provide a little better weather than this."

"They told us it was generally cool up in Canada," one visitor explained. "But we've had to tote blocks of ice around the car to keep cool since we came here."

BASS NOT BITING IN BAY OF QUINTE

In local business houses and at tackle shops and elsewhere anxious fishermen gathered this morning the same story was told by unsuccessful anglers who hied forth over the week-end: "If there are any bass at all in the bay this year they are certainly not biting."

Returning anglers who arrived in the harbor late Sunday evening brought with them only three or four bass all told, a catch that will barely above the legal limit. The bass fishing, some which in the past have been well patronized on Sundays were dead quiet over the week-end. Those who managed to catch any bass did so by casting. But worm and chrome anglers reported only perch, and sunfish for their trouble.

SEVEN N.C.O.'S. LEAVE FOR CAMP BORDEN

NO GAME DUCKS DEAD AT ISLAND

"There are not thousands of dead ducks and Canada Geese lying in the shores of the Main Ducks Islands in Lake Ontario off Prince Edward County, as reported in a New York dispatch received in Ontario Saturday."

"There are no dead geese at all, or if there are, we didn't see any. There are, however, an abundance of fire or six hundred dead fish ducks littering the shores," stated the district Game Inspector Herb McCabe this morning.

A visit to the Islands was made last week by Inspector McCabe, where conditions were found to be fairly normal for this time of year. Annually some 15 to 20 of wild ducks is reported through each unknown cause, but the report of New York authorities that the loss this year is of thousands of game ducks is not correct, it was stated.

ALL DETAILS ARRANGED FOR SOAP BOX DERBY

Everything is in readiness. The last detail has been completed or will be completed by the Belleville members of the Belleville Kinsmen Club today and tomorrow for the annual grand race of the Soap Box Derby on North Front Street on Wednesday evening. Today work of officials at their temporary headquarters at 191 Front Street had about reached its peak. Scores of the small racers had been received at the headquarters and are checked for the weighing in this afternoon. An atmosphere of excitement and tenseness reigned over all.

Tomorrow from 2 to 5 o'clock there will be given a thorough scrutiny and framing by the department of public works to ensure a smooth roadway for the racers. Not even a straw will remain on the asphalt surface to impede the progress of the speeding cars. Tomorrow night the huge ramp and starting system together with the electrical signaling and loud speaking system will be placed. Nothing now remains but the full support of the public in th's worthy venture, of the local Kinsmen.

Band Concert at Victoria Park With Guest Conductors Closes Kilties Weekend Reunion Here

Twenty Members of Original Band Under Late T.P.J. Power Attend Reunion.

MRS. RYAN HONORED

Banquet at Country Club Enjoyable Affair as Old Memories Revived

Thousands of citizens thronged Victoria Park last evening to enjoy one of the most unique musical presentations ever presented in this city when the Belleville Municipal Band, augmented by twenty ex-members of the famous Belleville Kilties of thirty years ago, presented a band concert which was featured by guest conductors throughout. All members included on the program were conducted by ex-members of the old Belleville Kilties Band, managed by the late Thos. P. J. Power.

Last night's concert concluded a two-day convention and reunion of the Kilties Band of Canada Ex-Members Association. Ex-Members from all parts of the North American continent registered at the "Kilties" headquarters at the Cornwallis House, while on Saturday night the association members were entertained at the Belleville Country Club with Mrs. Zita Ryan, proprietress of the Queens Hotel as the host of honor. Many of the invited guests that numbered well over 100 were accompanied by wives while the night was spent in the outstanding club-house of the well famous musical organization that brought so much distinction and honor to this city.

Twenty Originals Present.

Some twenty members of whom were original members of the old "Kilties" presented the band concert at Victoria Park last evening, which included many old favorite musical numbers. The program and guest conductors were:—"Maple Leaf Rag" by Jim Hinchey. This number was especially composed by Mr. Hinchey to commemorate the reunion and dedicated by the composer.

"Overture, William Tell" by Rossini. The overture was conducted by Mr. Ronald Robinson, of the Old Royal Regiment, Hamilton. Capt. Robinson was the original conductor of the famous Belleville Kilties Band on their first European tour when the band played by command concerts before the late King Edward and Queen Alexandra and were decorated and presented with a diamond studded baton by the late Queen.

March, "El Capitan" by Sousa, was conducted by Mr. Ifielder Connan, bandmaster of the Bryan, Ohio, civic band. Mr. Connan, who was associated with the famous Kilties and is a charter member of the Ex-Members Association, came all the way from Bryan to fraternize with his old bandmates today.

Reg pipe solo by Alderman Archie Sellock, former Kilties, of Toronto. This number proved a monster ovation as Mr. Pollock played the pipes with the Kilties Band in 1918. Albert Johnstone, said to be the finest player of bag pipes in the world today.

"We MacGregor Patrol" by Amsters, conducted by James Napier, former Kilties and also a member of the old 90th Battalion Band of 1916.

This number was a dual arrangement composed by Jim Hinchey, the first being a fantasy, "Lebistraun" by Liz and the second an arrangement of the popular song, "Beer Barrel Polka". These numbers were conducted by Mr. E. Addison, ex-Kilties and now conductor of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra.

"Land of Hope and Glory" by Sir Edward Elgar and conducted by William Bopal, member of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra.

Reveille was conducted by Lampe, who was a bandsman in the old Kilties Band of 1916 and a member of the Originals Club Band of that city, and "Auld Lang Syne."

The concert closed with singing "Till We Meet Again" and the National Anthem. The audience showed its appreciation of the splendid program as provided by the augmented bands. It is the hope of the Kilties that the invited guests that numbered well over 100 will return to Belleville next year while the night was spent in the outstanding clubhouse of the well famous musical organization that brought so much distinction and honor to this city.

Band Organized in 1909.

The local speakers at the reunion banquet on Saturday night were Laurie Lewis, McLean Haig and Jack McIntyre, Belleville members of the Kilties Association presided. Secretary Dick Jose and Treasurer Harold Ryan, of Belleville were in charge. The program included in part of numbers by the Belleville quartette: Messrs. Rankin, Moorman, Evans and Howard with Mr. Ted Rigg at the piano. Jack Green and Ted Hinchey of this city who received over the years the title of "Kilties" gave cornet and clarinet solos respectively.

Not wishing to miss this unique occasion, Glen Allison Gibson, formerly one of the Belleville Municipal Band, arrived at Victoria Park at 8 o'clock and was successful in getting to add his felicitations, having driv. 400 miles for same. Mr. Gibson is the World's Pair to be present at the annual reunion of the Kilties Ex-Members Association.

The Toronto committee in charge in connection with the reunion consisted: Dunc Reid, treasurer, and Mrs. Reid, Mrs. Lampe, ladies' entertainment committee ex-Kilties members, Mrs. Zita Ryan, Billy Grant, and Lieut. Charles Clairmont. Fred Johnson, Garn Dobbs and Walter Asleline, associate members.

RELIEF FROM HEAT MOST WELCOME
Cooling Winds from North Take Away Humid Weather
Relief in the form of cooling winds from the north came today to end the five day siege of hot, sticky weather and perspiring humidity which held Belleville in its thrall during the past week.
Business returned to normal within the city today after last week's unsettled conditions of time off for short trips, the heat in many factories and business concerns, and in the rural districts where during the peak of rising temperatures late last week farmers were forced to suspend haying and threshing operations to save baked fields. Stock was left in the barn as fear of sun stroke continued to menace the section.
Yesterday the 'apparent break in the heat wave, with cool sea breezes from the west, to dispel the early sultriness and growing sun which above from cloudless skies during the forenoon. Even on the waters of the bay the heat reflected in dancing waves which have been shimmering in the July haze for the period.
Soft drink manufacturers of the city, dependable barometers of the summer, this morning reported the first increase from almost constant four hour activity in the work of making and delivering their products. Ice cream and soda fountain bars in drug and candy stores along Front Street reported business back to summer normal after a week's rush which taxed capacity to handle.

DON'T TAKE CHANCES

An immense population goes on wheels during week-ends of the summertime. And often a very tragic story is told with a list of accidents which cannot but take the pleasure out of motoring.

Every road of course is crowded with all makes and ages of cars and all sorts of drivers at the wheel. Much criticism has been levelled against the slow-moving car which is charged with tying up traffic and irritating a lineup of drivers behind. There is no doubt that slow type of driver may be a source of accident. But it must also be accepted as a fact that speed has something to do with many accidents. Not many weeks ago, in one of the busiest weeks in Ontario, with dense traffic, few accidents and those not of a serious nature occurred —that was at the time of the royal visit. Drivers knew that the ultimate in carefulness in driving would be required and few accidents occurred.

It would be a tragedy if it became accepted that motorcar accidents are inevitable. There must be some that may be avoided. Sometimes of course the judgment errs and there is an accident, but rarely can blame be laid on the mechanical equipment of cars. That however does not remove from operators the obligation to see that their brakes and other equipment are functioning as they should function. Ottawa Journal on Saturday gave a list of explanations of accidents, in an effort to find out why they happened and here are some taken from news accounts of accidents:

"A light motor truck crashed into a parked automobile."

"... attempted to cross the highway and stepped into the side of a car."

"Fell out of the rear seat of a taxi."

"Left in the ditch by a hit-and-run motorist."

"The two cars side-swiped."

"Fell from running board of a truck."

"Crash between an automobile and a horse-drawn vehicle."

The Journal also stresses this, that it is very rarely a mechanical fault that is responsible, but stories of collisions, side-swiping, cars crashing parked vehicles, abound.

The Journal points out the moral—"it does not pay to take chances—there is too much at stake. Motorists who live long, and most enjoy their motoring are motorists who practice safety, who drive at moderate speed, who don't pass another car if least element of danger is involved, who make allowance for carelessness or stupidity on the other fellow's part, even though it means the surrender of their technical rights on the road."

Avoid accident will continue to be the advice, so that somehow this monster tragedy of the highways will end.

THE NASCOPIE

One of the most interesting voyages is that of the supply ship Nascopie on its far-north trip. This sturdy supply carrier of the Hudson's Bay Company makes a yearly cruise to the Arctic with supplies, and covers ten thousand miles of voyaging.

Saturday the Nascopie sailed on her way to her first port-of-call, Hebron, on the Labrador Coast. Thence she will go as far as Craig Harbor on Ellesmere Island, within 750 miles of the north pole.

The ship carries necessaries for the men who are stationed at the far-flung posts in the Far-North. She carries also mail, and the luxuries that are granted to them in their lonely stations.

The Nascopie is gone until September. She carries R.C.M.P., red-coats, scientists, doctors, missionaries, and tourists who take the long jaunt with Capt. Smellie for the pure fun of the voyage. This is the Captain's sixteenth season.

This year, for the first time in the history of the Hudson's Bay Company, its Governor, Ashley Cooper, was at the dock at Montreal to say farewell. It is this year too that the first of the British Kings, King George VI, paid the first royal visit to the Hudson's Bay territory. It was King Charles II who in the year 1670 granted the company its charter.

It will be remembered that this year the King was presented with two elk heads and two black beaver pelts by the Governor and this act is done only when the Sovereign himself enters the Hudson's Bay Company country. This was the first time the royal tribute was paid.

Those who know their history have some knowledge of the company of gentlemen adventurers trading into Hudson Bay and its association with the development of Canada.

Oh, for the life of an Eskimo!
With his fields of ice and mountains of snow.
To be in his land tonight would be
The most joyful thing that could happen to me.

On a cake of ice I'd joyfully sit,
And then I'd get up and dance on it,
Then roll in the snow, and shout with glee
To be in a land so cool and free.

I'd build me a hut with squares of ice,
And with plenty of snow the chinks I'd splice.
But! Plenty of room for a big wide door,
For above all things, stuffy rooms I abhor.

Of walrus meat I'd have good supply,
And I'd eat it off ice, without batting an eye;
With all this ahead, and so far from strife,
I could live with the Eskimos the rest of my life.

ONE GLANCE AT THE ENTRY LIST for the Fourth Annual Running of the Belleville Kinsmen Kiddie Kar Derby shows the great interest being taken in this event this year by juvenile citizens of this district between the ages of six and sixteen. This interest manifested with the running of the first Kid Kar Derby here has been cumulative, and the members of the Kinsmen Club are to be congratulated upon the efficiency with which these annual events have been managed. The Kinsmen conceived something new and carried it out in faultless fashion, presenting the Belleville meet, first in Canada, and then taking the winners to Akron, Ohio, to contest for international honors under the auspices of the Chevrolet Motor Car organization Soap Box Derby international championships.

The Ontario Intelligencer is proud to be associated with the Belleville Kinsmen Club in this worthy enterprise, in the promotion of clean sport, competition and creative ambition with boys between the ages of ten and fifteen, an age during which boys generally are paid little attention to and permitted to go their own gait, subject generally to parental and public criticism and fault finding.

The Belleville Kinsmen Derbies have uncovered five juvenile citizens, clean sports, and full of ambition. The thousands who will eagerly watch the Belleville races and the many thousands who will fill the grandstands at Akron, Ohio, for the international finals, which will be reported by the best writers of all the prominent newspapers of the United States and Canada, and broadcast on the radio as well, indicates the deep and widespread interest taken in this unique sporting event.

Until tomorrow, then—for thrills, laughter, and a comforting sense of community work well done—we'll meet at Derby Hill, Belleville, and be a boy again just for one day at least.

MODERN WAR IS SUCH A DIRTY THING THAT THERE IS NO SENSE OF DECENCY LEFT IN IT, apparently, dating back to the use of poison gas and liquid fire in the Great War. What new deviltry is being hatched for the next war time will reveal. The war in Spain and the undeclared war in China certainly made high marks in savagery, featuring the war in the modern manner of showing high explosive bombs upon non-combatants, men, women and children, and glorying in it. Here's a development of modern war which would be hard to believe were it not for a mass of corroboration. A prominent Fascist newspaper in Rome recently published this advice: "Italians living in France should enter the French army, purpose: sabotage." The editor was astonished to receive a rebuke from the Fascist Secret Police, charging him with betraying official secrets.

NO GO

He was driving very carefully, and his wife in the back seat grew very impatient.

"We're moving like a hearse," she grumbled at last. "Can't you go a bit faster?"

"We can," retorted the husband without looking round. "We can but we're not going to. This darned car is so expensive to run that we shan't have any money to spend when we get to where we're going."

The local G.T.R. baseball team went to Port Hope with the determination to beat Solomon's Peterboro team and they did, the final score being 6 to 2. It was one of the most sensational and thrilling games witnessed for some time. Both teams fielded exceptionally well. Morden of the local team, got one of the finest catches of the day. The same boy also started the doings for Belleville in the fourth by using when he connected for a lovely two-bagger. Then the other boys came along and the necessary taps and netted 5 runs in the inning. Weir at short step played a nice game. Gerow was injured early in the game, but played a steady game throughout. Centrefielder Ross accepted five or six chances without a miss. He also punished the horsehide for a nice two-bagger. Goyer and Mills are right there and steady the whole team by their fine work. Manager Whalen did the coaching and handled that end of the game just right. The following composed the G.T.R. team:—Ross, c.f.; Weir, s.s.; Gerow, 1st; Mills, c. Morden, l.f.; Goyer, p.; Keliher, r.f.; Meagher, 2nd; Smith, 2nd; Pringle, Cook and Whalen, spares. Dyer—Kay, of Peterboro, at the plate; Rosevear of Port Hope, on bases.

Day Dreaming May Be An Early Sign of Mental Illness

"It is by no means an uncommon experience for most practising physicians to have worried mother consult them as to the reason why her child is failing in his school work or failing to show the normal liveliness of others of his own age. In many of these cases the mother speaks of "day dreaming" spells. She will complain that for longer or shorter periods the child will sit with a pre-occupied manner, often almost vacantly into space and possibly grimacing or smiling to herself when he is supposed to be doing some task or supposed to be reading or even listening to her radio. When spoken to, the child gives a start before answering. The child seems to prefer sitting alone rather than taking part in the activity of other children."

I am quoting Dr. H. R. Brillinger, Hamilton, in an article on 'Day Dreaming' in the Canadian Medical Association Journal.

In its mild form, day dreaming is normal. The bright child in the class completes its task and while waiting for the others to perform theirs, engages in day dreaming. The child who is not so bright, who has difficulty with his school task, sits and day dreams instead of working at this task.

Day dreaming in an exaggerated or advanced form can be serious and parents, teachers, and physicians must be on the alert to detect this exaggerated form in its early stages.

Day dreaming is just "imagining" and may act as a spur to greater effort. On the other hand, day dreaming where the child imagines he is accomplishing great things or performing great deeds really satisfies the child who in real life with other youngsters actually has an inferiority complex.

Sometimes the surroundings, or circumstances, give it an inferiority complex and in day dreaming it makes up for this in his own mind.

Sometimes there may be some slight defect in hearing, vision, or personal appearance that the child tries to overcome by imagining itself to be absolutely free of all defects.

There are some cases where infection—teeth or tonsils—is lowering its vitality for some time. Brillinger states that day dreaming is normal but it readily becomes abnormal, which is a sign of incipient mental illness. When treated early, the results are usually very gratifying.

ENGLISH TENANTS THROW UP BARRICADES IN RENT "STRIKE"

When residents of a section of the apartment houses in old London differed with the landlord over rent, maintenance and a few other items, they expressed themselves on the matter by going on a "rent strike." After many weeks of this the landlord sought action from the bailiffs, only to have his tenants thwart this and effected an entrance, but not without meeting "armed" resistance as the residents belabored the invaders with saucepans, broom handles, and a miscellaneous assortment of culinary utensils. LOWER RIGHT, shows one of the tenants exhorting his comrades to be calm and not carry their efforts to too great length. He stands on the back of an ambulance, in attendance for emergencies.

And think of those who have gone above,
And when are smiling from above,
'Tis hard to smile, I know too well,
When sorrow comes our way,
But think of Him, who died for us,
And when you'll meet some day.
He smooths the rough ways in our life,
And all good will repay
And those who left us sorrowing now
We'll meet on Judgment Day.
'Tis then we'll see why such things come,

MURTAGH—McCABE

The Church of St. Michael the Archangel was the scene of a charming mid-summer wedding at nine-thirty o'clock this morning, when Anna Helen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John McCabe, of this city, became the bride of Mr. Thomas James Murtagh of Detroit, Mich., son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Murtagh.

Red and white roses and ferns adorned the altar and sanctuary. The ceremony was performed by the pastor, Rt. Rev. J. P. Nicholson, D.P., V.G., and Nuptial Mass, was celebrated by Rev. J. J. Murtagh of Manchester, New Hampshire, brother of the groom.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a lovely gown of white chiffon, in floor length style, with short jacket. A shoulder veil fell from white tarleton and she carried Butterfly roses.

Miss Winnifred McCabe, who was her sister's bridesmaid, was gowned in pale peach, marquisette and lace in long flowing style, with dainty Colonial hat of blue flowers. She carried an old fashioned bouquet of sweet peas in peach tones, roses and blue cornflowers.

Mr. Joseph Murtagh, Detroit, brother of the groom, was groomsman and the ushers were Mr. Raymond Murtagh, Detroit, brother of the groom, and Mr. Edward McCabe, brother of the bride.

Mrs. James Grant played wedding music and Miss Kathryn Callagher was soloist, singing Rosewig's "Ave Maria" as the Offertory and "On This Day, O Beautiful Mother", during Communion.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, following the ceremony. Mrs. McCabe, mother of the bride, attired in royal blue lace with corsage of Supreme roses, and Miss Rose Murtagh, Detroit, sister of the groom, wearing Queen blue silk brocade chiffon with shadow cinquefoil and corsage of Supreme roses, received with the bride and groom.

Later Mr. and Mrs. Murtagh left on a motor trip to Montreal, Quebec, and Ste. Anne de Beaupre. The bride travelling in a navy blue suit frock with white accessories. Upon their return they will reside in Detroit.

Guests were present at the wedding from Detroit, Wesurville, Gardiner, Manchester, N.H.; Lindsay, Smith's Falls and Oshawa.

ASLESON—BEACH

Cool greens and white were the motifs of the wedding appointments at the marriage on June 22nd of Miss Betty Beach daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter B. Beach, and Robert B. Asleson, in Marylowe Community Church, in Minneapolis, Minnesota.

The all white church lent itself beautifully to the color scheme. White snapdragon and green ferns were used on the altar and against the white walls. The bride's father read the service and the nuptial music was provided by Orville Trenton, organist, and Gordon Dahl, soloist. The day was also the twenty-fifth wedding anniversary of Rev. and Mrs. Beach.

Hoop-skirted Colonial gowns of soft green lace over taffeta were worn by the bride's attendants. They were Miss Doris Burnett, maid of honor, Belleville, Ontario, and Misses Lillian Day and Juel Delan of Minneapolis. White velvet ribbons were used on the gowns and to tie in long streamers their white Colonial bouquets. Each wore a string of pearls, the gift of the bride.

The bride wore a Vionnet model of imported satin lace. She fitted circular skirt extending into a full court train. The shirred bodice of lace was long sleeved. Her full length veil in bonnet shape was edged with seed pearls. She carried a Colonial bouquet of white orchids, lilies of the valley and stephanotis with white satin streamers.

The groom was attended by James Griffith, as best man, Kenneth Asleson and William Helen, acting as ushers.

A reception in the church parlours followed the ceremony. Mrs. Beach wore a gown of rust lace with corsage of white orchids. Mrs. Asleson gray in pleated gold chiffon with corsage of bronze orchids.

COX—QUINLAN

Marmora, July 10.—Sacred Heart Church, Marmora, was the scene of a pretty summer wedding at 10 a.m. on Saturday, July 8th when Rita Margaret, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Quinlan of Rawdon Township became the bride of Robert Joseph Cox, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Cox, Toronto. The ceremony was performed and the Nuptial Mass was said by Rev. W. P. Healey in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends.

The bride who was given in marriage by her father was becomingly attired in a tailored suit of white sharkskin, large white picture hat with matching accessories and wore a corsage of pink roses and baby breath. She carried a bridal shower of lily of the valley. The groom was gowned in pale peach, marquisette and lace in long flowing style, with dainty Colonial hat of blue flowers. She carried an old fashioned bouquet of sweet peas in peach tones, roses and blue cornflowers.

Mr. Joseph Murtagh, Detroit, brother of the groom, was groomsman and the ushers were Mr. Raymond Murtagh, Detroit, brother of the groom, and Mr. Edward McCabe, brother of the bride.

Mrs. James Grant played wedding music and Miss Kathryn Callagher was soloist, singing Rosewig's "Ave Maria" as the Offertory and "On This Day, O Beautiful Mother", during Communion.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, following the ceremony. Mrs. McCabe, mother of the bride, attired in royal blue lace with corsage of Supreme roses, and Miss Rose Murtagh, Detroit, sister of the groom, wearing Queen blue silk brocade chiffon with shadow cinquefoil and corsage of Supreme roses, received with the bride and groom.

Later Mr. and Mrs. Murtagh left on a motor trip to Montreal, Quebec, and Ste. Anne de Beaupre. The bride travelling in a navy blue suit frock with white accessories. Upon their return they will reside in Detroit.

Guests were present at the wedding from Detroit, Wesurville, Gardiner, Manchester, N.H.; Lindsay, Smith's Falls and Oshawa.

ASLESON—BEACH

Cool greens and white were the motifs of the wedding appointments at the marriage on June 22nd of Miss Betty Beach daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter B. Beach, and Robert B. Asleson, in Marylowe Community Church, in Minneapolis, Minnesota.

The all white church lent itself beautifully to the color scheme. White snapdragon and green ferns were used on the altar and against the white walls. The bride's father read the service and the nuptial music was provided by Orville Trenton, organist, and Gordon Dahl, soloist. The day was also the twenty-fifth wedding anniversary of Rev. and Mrs. Beach.

Hoop-skirted Colonial gowns of soft green lace over taffeta were worn by the bride's attendants. They were Miss Doris Burnett, maid of honor, Belleville, Ontario, and Misses Lillian Day and Juel Delan of Minneapolis. White velvet ribbons were used on the gowns and to tie in long streamers their white Colonial bouquets. Each wore a string of pearls, the gift of the bride.

The bride wore a Vionnet model of imported satin lace. She fitted circular skirt extending into a full court train. The shirred bodice of lace was long sleeved. Her full length veil in bonnet shape was edged with seed pearls. She carried a Colonial bouquet of white orchids, lilies of the valley and stephanotis with white satin streamers.

The groom was attended by James Griffith, as best man, Kenneth Asleson and William Helen, acting as ushers.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Beatrice Fairfax Letters

Dear Miss Fairfax:

A year or so ago I went with a young man who was a little older than I, and who seemed to consider himself a little better as he had a more liberal education. Every time I see him I like him better. Although he doesn't make it a habit any more, he comes up to the house occasionally and still seems fond of me. We work in the same building, and every time he sees me he has a compliment about something I'm wearing, or how I look.

Since I don't go with him, I've been going with other young men, but none of them interests me. Do you think it would be proper for me to ask him to a party, to which I've been invited and asked to bring a young man?

Louise

By all means, ask him to the party, look your best and give him an opportunity to pay his usual compliments with interest. My best wishes.

He Mother Changed When He Became Serious Over a Girl

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have been going with a very pretty girl of 18, although I am only 20, for about a year. Both my father and sister liked this girl, when all of a sudden mother changed. It is true we are both still of young to be serious, but just the same I want to keep on dating her, although mother has hinted that she'd like me to stop going with her.

The girl broke her last date with me, without giving a good excuse. She has many friends, all which whom I don't admire. Would you advise me to break off with her, as my mother advises, or what?

Wondering

My dear boy, my advice to you is very simple. Try to make the acquaintance of some other girls, and do not take any time out with but lots of them. You are too young to pin all your hopes on one girl. You will find that if you are just yourself, and don't try too hard to please, but be nice to them all, the girls will begin to bid for you. Best of luck to you.

He Wants Her to Elope With Him

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm 18 years old and deeply in love with a man of 24. My parents have forbidden me to see him, but we meet on the sly. I know he loves me and has asked me to run away, and marry him. What do you me some advice; I need someone's help.

Anxious

If you will look about you, my dear, you will not find many many happy marriages, where the parties did what you are proposing to do. You parents have your reasons, yes at heart, I know, and perhaps they have a good reason for not wanting you to see him young man. Talk it over with them seriously, and I sincerely hope you will not do this rash thing.

Wise Traveller Travels "Light"

One of the fundamental differences between experienced and inexperienced travellers is that the former will be the ones who travel light while, usually, the inexperienced one takes along an assortment of bits-a and this-a that means extra and unnecessary luggage, extra space for continual packing and unpacking, extra expense, and a vast amount of unnecessary worry and trouble.

You may not be an experienced traveller, but you may, if you are willing, acquire a foresight that will serve you almost as well as experience. Look strong-mindedly at everything you consider taking and ask yourself "Do I really need this?" And also: "Can something else I have packed take the place of this item?" If you are clear-eyed and stern with yourself you will be greatly helped.

Today's traveller is fortunate in having many aids to "light" travelling in the compact types and light-weight fabrics of luggage. A large trunk may or may not be essential. With the convenience and increasing popularity of plane-sized pieces of luggage and of good-looking hat boxes, the popularity of trunks is waning. Trunks require checking, more service, more consideration than the piece of luggage we can keep with us, whatever our destination may be, many people do not take a trunk now ever on a trip abroad.

An overnight bag fitted or not, is now regarded as indispensable for the traveller. Its very convenient to have an unfitted overnight bag for small suit case, if you prefer it and in it put one of those everready rectangular toilet-cases containing the essential articles. You will find this a great saving in time and trouble, for this bag, if packed with the proper items, will be the only one you need open on an overnight trip.

In your other suit case or suitcase will be the other necessary clothes, arranged in the order in which you will need them. Then, if you wish, a combination hat and shoe box. If you won't need a shoe-container, consider getting one of the very lightweight hat boxes, not much larger than a mother's medium-sized hat box, with the comfortable handle. But to be economical in the number of pieces of luggage you'll take, in the number of clothes you take, and in the wise arrangement and packing that will avoid repacking.

Today's anticrease fabrics are also a boon for the traveller. So is the fashion of an ensemble or costume (dress and short jacket; or bolero), formal without the jacket, informal with the jacket. Consider, for instance, the decorative and inexpensive seersucker ensemble of this season . . . . a delight for travelling convenience and adaptability.

Don't clutter up your luggage and your time-while-travelling with unnecessary accessories, such as too-fragile "lingerie luxuries" of satin bars and cuffs, and blouses. Unless you are travelling luxuriously, these don't come under the heading of "essentials".

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

Will you please tell me whether it is correct to send a wedding invitation to both boys, sixteen years of age? If so, what would be the proper form for the address on the envelope?

M.

I am sure that each of these young gentlemen would prefer to have a card of his own. So, as a matter of compliment, I suggest that you send individual oirthday cards, in separate envelopes.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Attention to Mental Hygiene Will Prevent Weeds Called Adult Abnormalities

In cities all over this continent children are familiar with the school nurse and the dentist who visit their grounds and look them over for defects. This attention to the physical well-being of our children is spreading gradually, and I look forward to the day when the same solicitude for mental well-being will be under such care.

It has all been a recent development, but already I see great results. It is such a contrast to the days when, beyond providing schools, the state didn't seem to bother much about its children. I remember when I was the only outsider to visit the schools, and that only when there was an epidemic of some sort in the neighborhood.

As I say it is a very fine thing, this attention to the bodies of our children, but it does seem unfortunate to me that we have made no provision in our schools for teaching mental hygiene in the same way physical hygiene is taught. I say this because we know today that mental derangement is just as dangerous as scarlet fever or appendicitis.

Many of our cases of mentally deranged persons could have been prevented had proper care and teaching been given them when they were children.

Then, we don't often see children with mental diseases. Most of the children who are subsequently deficient mentally are unfortunate persons who have been born with certain hereditary mentalities or with an abnormality of the brain. Those children are usually cared for by public institutions, along with the children who develop serious mental diseases. As I have said, however, there are very few children who develop mental trouble as serious as to require care in mental hospitals. In fact, I know of only two hospitals on this continent for the treatment of mental diseases of children.

People who are admitted to mental institutions are, as a rule, over the age of adolescence. When they are examined, and their past history is obtained, we find the beginning of the trouble, it is found all too often that the seeds of the disease was in childhood. Very often we find that if they had been given some special attention when the trouble started, they would never have needed to be put in an asylum.

One of the mental diseases which almost inevitably begins in childhood is what we call dementia praecox. This is one of the most common and unfortunate of the mental diseases and is first symptomed by a tendency to shun people; when to work and play alone.

The Stars Say

For Tuesday, July 11

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

A FAIRLY active and fortunate state of affairs is presaged by the ruling transits. While things move at a lively pace to attain definite goals, there also may be a disposition to be impetuous or to become anxious by impetuous impatience and overstrained measures. With calmness restraint and alertness to a deceptive or complicated situation, there may be favorable developments. The social, domestic or emotional life may be lively and happy.

Those whose birthdigy it is have the prospect of a fairly fortunate turn in the affairs, with expanding fortunes, providing there is no indecision or impossibility or behavior that is too aggressive. An undercurrent of duplicity calls for vigilance and shrewd handling. Private affairs flourish and bring happiness.

A child born on this day may be capable and fairly ambitious. But it may defeat its aims by tempestuous, impulsive combative mode of action. In private life it should be sociable, popular, affectionate and sympathetic.

Skating keens star's ankles strong and shapely

Ankles must be shapely. They won't be if a woman permits herself to take on weight. That happens when she indulges too much in the good things of the table. A few dance steps for five minutes every day, lifting on the toes, twirling around with an occasional kick will worry the fat off the lower portions of the legs. Dancing is highly recommended, not only to sliver down ankles but to reduce fallow calves. Sitting in a low chair, crossing the knees, raising the little foot in little circles will also turn the trick.

Henna has been used for hundreds of years. Beauty shops are still using it. The purpose-red of the pure time is seldom seen because women have learned that hair dyeing isn't child's play, that if one wants the job done properly, a professional had better do it.

To apply a henna pack to pepper and salt hair is better for the hair, threads will come out a pleasing auburn, but the white ones will be pink. No novice should attempt that treatment.

It is possible to give a red cast to brown hair by using the henna rinse, which is a simple method of hair coloring than the pack which must be put on evenly, timed correctly. After the rinse, steep two tablespoonfuls of henna leaves in a quart of boiling water for a few minutes. Strain through muslin, let it cool, pour over the head while the hair is still moist from the shampoo. Don't expect to come out a raging redhead, the rinse merely impart brightness. Never use the henna on hair that has been bleached. If you do, you will bloom out a carrot top, that won't make the lady in the mirror any happier.

Whenever a fever blister decides to come and make you wretched, it is sure to be when you want to look your prettiest. They're hateful things; one's face looks as if it has gone to seed.

Don't tamper with the blister. It often happens that a mere touch of the fingers will produce extreme swelling and an irritation of the glands of the neck. Nature can cure the blemish better than you can.

Some sufferers find that they are afflicted with these eyesores when the digestion is upset. So if you are among the victims, mind your groceries, avoiding rich foods, too much pastry, an excess of sweets.

"CENTS ARE LOVE IN EDEN"

by PETER BENEDICT

"The actual facts were these: Mr. Poole was a stock gambler, and somewhat at variance with this early dream. He was coming home under full set of sail one night when there happened to be a high wind blowing, and his hat blew into Green's field. The old fellow of course went after it, and having been so unwise as to get off his horse was unable to get on again. Green found him moaning about midnight lying asleep under the hedge, with his horse quietly grazing a few yards away. Naturally he shook him awake and tried to get rid of him, but the old chap was comfortable, and refused to budge. Green ordered him off the property, and pointed out that the horse was grazing his land. The old man, then, was never any trouble to Green he was sobering after a high night, and said he thought he had what he did buy, the hedge he was lying under, and the strip of turf he was on—the horse was cropping."

"Green made out the agreement as I never heard the exact terms, but I gather they made it impossible for him to console himself even with an occasional glance above its price—but Poole was then sober enough to see that he understand it, but not sober enough to refuse to sign it. Of course his blood was up. At any rate, he stayed there all night, and came to in the morning with the ink of the agreement in his pocket. He laughed, and thought that the money was paid, and technically the land was his, but he could not avail himself of it practically in any unique case, I should say. At least I hope so." He paused for a minute, and smiled. "Does that help you, Mrs. Court?"

"I'm sure. The point that's bothering me is, will the agreement stand, then, if he was drunk when he signed it? I'm infinitely obliged to you for what you've told me already, Mr. Hart, and it makes everything plain; but is the ground really mine, after all?"

"It's certainly a debatable point; but two factors which I think could decide it are: first, the fact that the money actually passed in payment, and second, the land was covered; secondly, that it was the old man's intention to be expressed with that the agreement should be honoured. I should say that only your considering it a gift on the behalf of his line, could prevent it from standing."

"There's no fear of that, then," said Cathrine, grimly smiling; and she looked at Golden with a very covert glance.

"I suppose," said Lyddon slowly "you'll have no objection to repeating that story for us in court?"

Mr. Hart's eyebrows rose above the shrewd eyes, and he looked from one to the other of them with no expression at all; but Cathrine did not see him thinking, none the less clearly: "Good Lord! yes, who would have suspected this girl of scrubbing with her own hands to that silly, commonplace tune?" and also: "There is no right herself in his eyes; the downrightness of her own heart was enough, but the cleverness of explain gravely:

"The land is being used for a purpose of which Mrs. Court does not approve. Have you ever, been in Court Branch?"

Several times, but usually for only a short spell, and passing through, I'm sorry to say, but I can bear witness that it's very lovely."

"It was," said Cathrine soberly. "It is now, too, I suppose, but the planning of a cheap housing estate, can determined that the process shall be stopped by evidence to stop it. It seems to me a bit of remarkable luck that the Council should have sold him that particular field; and as the opportunity has offered, I am going to use it. I am going to bring an action for damages, and fight it with all the forces I can collect. I don't want the strip of ground; I know it's useless; but it will serve my purpose, and that's all I want. Will you help me?"

"Naturally, if I am asked to testify to the truth about the deed's purchase. I shall do so. It seems to me rather like cutting off your nose to spite your face, I'll admit. Mrs. Court, but naturally, again, that is your own affair."

On that they took leave of him, and the former was not too much time left before Catherine's train was due out. They had gained the information they needed, and more than they had dared to hope for; there was as silly in a true sense of the word.

They took a taxi to the station, and once again they were close together in the dimness within, the slightly grey air of the evening hardly separating them, shoulder against shoulder, only briefly and occasionally turning their heads to look at each other, and always when they met those strangely glances, they met eye to eye, in a disconcerting openness.

Cathrine's still elation went a new sense of fatalism, as she knew now that she had no control over say power in her own hands, but that the whole thing which she desired with all her heart. So much energy flowed from her into the pursuit of Court Branson's freedom, that none was left to care what happened to herself and whatever followed now—and suddenly she knew that she had quenched at last the restlessness that singularly little. She felt him draw nearer, but there was no fear or distinct for the moment: this was the real hour, for which he had been sent to her, "the gift of the artist" and she turned and looked at him full into the face, with the impressiveness at that moment time had been at least so kind to him.

"Catherine,—I am to thank you for the privilege of this journey," he said, and smiled. "Does that help you, Mrs. Court?"

"I'm sure. The point that's bothering me is, will the agreement stand, then, if he was drunk when he signed it? I'm infinitely obliged to you for what you've told me already, Mr. Hart, and it makes everything plain; but is the ground really mine, after all?"

"Naturally, if I am asked to testify to the truth about the deed's purchase. I shall do so. It seems to me rather like cutting off your nose to spite your face, I'll admit.

"Cathrine," he said, "I am going to be a benefactor or a monster. It was not in his nature to care greatly what was said of him: even then there was not too much in his mind, a weight on one side, flinging the whole machinery out of balance. He diagnosed, with a smile which was not altogether his amused, the influence of Catherine Court.

He had seen her but a few several times since that stormy interview at her hill cottage; and each time he had passed with only a glance, and a distant inclination of the head, as if he had been a distasteful acquaintance, not sufficiently offensive to be discarded altogether, but sufficiently pleasant to be admitted into any nearer relationship than politeness demanded. To occupy so incomplacive a position was for him something new, and not altogether humiliating; in practice he found it only irritating, and in theory, with his instinct for combat, but a challenge he was determined to refuse. He supposed the irritable and the self-discipline between them must be responsible for the horrible sense that was experiencing for the first time the disagreeable effect of wearing a false face.

He strolled to the end of the train, and looked out absently over the near corner of the cross-roads, looking at the new red bricks of the new city, and the white arts of the glade which all his money had bought him.

He was still surveying that scene of triumph and disaster when the morning bus from Stalchester came purring round the corner, and the driver, known to all Greybound. Three or four people got out. He saw them vaguely, noticed them, but his wandering eyes recorded their entrance into the scene without emotion but interest, for there were very few people and still fewer people who did not interest Adam.

The last of them was a little middle-aged man in a dark blue waterproof coat and a bowler hat; a thin, sandy, colourless person, man who seemed typical of something, if it could but think what it was typical of. Then his eyes did not know Court Brandon, had never heard of Cathrine Court, perhaps before; for he stood for a few minutes under the hanging sign of the Golden Arms, and then he brought from tracery, and looked at vacantly at the place as if with patiently not impressed with any particular of it.

Then his eyes settled upon Adam, placidly lighting his pipe on the corner opposite, and then moved briskly from the pavement and crossed the road.

Adam waited for him. The interrasion in his mind was still unexplained, but it was a pleasant interest now, for that inquisitive face in the distance was rest for long from its probings into every question which presented itself.

"Excuse me," said the little man, in a hesitating for a place called Holly Lane. Can you tell me where it shall find it?"

"Holly Lane?" said Adam, recording only a minor coincidence, but beginning to feel settled upon him. He pointed cheerfully with the bowl of his pipe, and thought that the quiet of the place, the rest

Boston Red Sox Whip Yankees Five Straight in Stadium For Biggest Upset of Season

Joe Cronin and Jimmy Foxx Hammer Homers to Win Pair Sunday

White Sox Strengthen Hold on Third Place by Beating Tigers Twice

By JUDSON BAILEY

It looks as if somebody ought to ask the American League to break up the Boston Red Sox.

Their feat of whipping New York Yankees five straight in Yankee Stadium comes close to distracting everybody's attention from tomorrow's major league all-star game in New York and the baseball entertainers are likely to last a lot longer.

Since June 26 the Red Sox have won 12 out of 14 games, the last eight in a row. They have taken two consecutive series from the world champions and climaxed the drive by stifling New York in successive doubleheaders. And they have cut the Yankees' lead from 9½ to 6½ games.

Manager Joe Cronin and big Jimmy Foxx were standouts in yesterday's 4-3 and 5-3 victories. In the first game Red Sox were trailing by a run until the eighth inning when Cronin smashed a homer with the left field stands with one on. In the second, they had a two-run Margin but Foxx, evidently sensing trouble, hit his fourteenth home run of the season in the eighth to withstand a final two-run thrust by the champions.

See Exhibit Both Games.

The Yankees outhit the Sox in both games, 24 to 16. DiMaggio made six hits in eight times at bat during the day, including the five that drove runs in the second game.

The breaks that once went for the Yankees now are going against them. Bump Hadley got so flustered yesterday he threw two balls into the outfield, letting in three runs and forcing the beating hime-set. Dahlgren came to bat with the bases loaded and hit into a double play. The day before Joe Cronin missed a touch-out at second base and helped himself out of the game.

Sunday's other American League doubleheaders all were one-sided. Chicago White Sox strengthened their hold on third place by whipping Detroit Tigers 4-3 and 6-2. Errors and Earl Averill and Bill Dietrich wrecked a four-hit game for Buck Newsom in the opener and Luke Appling, Marvin Owen and Kreevich hit singles with the bases filled to beat Schoolboy Rhe following day.

Cleveland Indians went on a hitting spree to beat St. Louis Browns, 14-2 and 5-1.

Rookie Leads Attack.

Jim Vernon, Washington's newest rookie first baseman, led a hitting attack which helped the Senators trim Philadelphia Athletics as the Senators stopped the A's 8-4, in the first game. Ken Chase contributed an effective pitching chore to take the nightcap, 4-3.

Cincinnati Reds crushed the Chicago Cubs 15-5 in the National League as Bucky Walters scored his thirteenth victory on five hits. The New York Giants concluded their invasion of Brooklyn with a 3-2 triumph when Hal Schumacher, hitting for pitcher Harry Gumbert, drove in the deciding run with an eighth inning.

Philadelphia Phillies ended an 11-game losing streak by swatting the Boston Bees in both ends of a double-header. They took the first, 3-1, on Kirby Higbe's six-hit pitching and won the second with a four-run rally after two were out in the ninth inning. Emmett Mueller homered with one on during the spree to make the score 7-6.

Cardinals Divide.

St. Louis Cardinals and Pittsburgh Pirates divided their bargain day with the Redbirds taking the first game, 7-3, and dropping the second, 6-5, in a slugfest. Johnny Mize led the winner in each game.

In Saturday's American League pill Boston's win from the world champions was the big item.

St. Louis Browns split a doubleheader with Cleveland Indians dropping the first 5-3 and coming back to take the after piece 10-9. Chicago downed Detroit Tigers 10-3 and Philadelphia split a bargain bill with Washington Senators, winning the first 6-5 and dropping the night cap 6-3.

Saturday's National League card saw Chicago Cubs down Cincinnati Reds 7-6 and Boston Bees blank the Phillies 4-0. Brooklyn and the Giants split a doubleheader, Brooklyn Yesterday taking the opener 8-3 and the Dodgers winning the second 3-2. St. Louis and Pittsburgh was rained out.

HOW TO OVERCOME ITCHING PILES

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful pain of short duration is a warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from J. S. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. The formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is a physician's prescription and is highly recommended. It is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for any one to risk an operation when a simple remedy which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost.

Hank Leiber, Chicago Cubs' outfielder and one of the most valuable players in baseball's all-star selection, hit a definite "in" day on the American League diamond. He drove three runs in the first game of a doubleheader his team played with St. Louis Cardinals. The Cards won, 6-4, and Hank's fourbagger accounted for all the Cubs' runs.

RUFFING TO BE STARTING HURLER IN ALL-STAR GAME

Five Other Yankees Will Have Starting Places in Lineup

SENTIMENTAL CHOICE

Greenberg of Detroit and Cronin and Cramer of Boston Given Berths

By GAYLE TALBOT

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, July 10 (AP)—Proving he has a heart full of sentiment under his amply stuffed uniform, Manager Joe McCarthy announced today his own Red Ruffing would be the starting hurler and five other Yankees would be in the American League lineup for tomorrow's all-star joust with the National League.

Only Boston and Detroit of all the other clubs in the junior circuit will be represented when play starts in the seventh annual midsummer classic in Yankee Stadium at 1 o'clock (E. S. T.).

Record is Set

This will set a record for representation by one team and make the event truly a test between the two American League clubs and the National League, whose lineup was to be announced after Manager Frankie Frisch arrived on the scene later today.

Yet the single real surprise on the roster was McCarthy's selection of Ruffing for the No. 1 pitching assignment. Ruffing has not appeared the certain choice but the big right-hander has been shooting with a sore arm and has lost his last two starts.

Faith Unswerving

After 15 years of yeoman service he no longer is the leading pitcher in the American League on any basis you care to calculate. Nowever, Marse Joe's faith in the men who are close to him is unswerving. Resting Ruffing might be beneficial for the Yankee star, evidently his whitewinged pitching corps, but the man who gave Lou Gehrig the chance to be the game's most bitter end now is giving another well-beloved the break, if he feels is due.

The American Leaguers, victorious in four of the six previous contests and secure in the knowledge that the Yankees consistently in an American League Park, have been one-sided favorites at 2 to 1 by local betting commissioners.

COMSTOCK CUP WON BY OTTAWA

First Time in Eleven Years Ottawa Has Won Paddling Title

Ottawa, July 10 (CP)—The Comstock trophy, emblematic of the Eastern Ontario association's championship, was proudly displayed at the Ottawa Canoe Club today for the first time in 11 years.

Slipping quietly over the waters as the Ottawa River course on which they last won the trophy in 1928, Ottawa crews won eight first places, six seconds and seven thirds for a total of 89 points to win the 19th annual E.R.A. regatta Saturday.

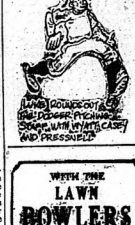
Cornwall Rowing Club, defending the trophy won over their home course to Ottawa, gained second place on four firsts, five seconds and three thirds for 76 points, while winner of the cup for five consecutive years previous to Cornwall, Brockville, Lachine and Ottawa Canoe Club the only ones eligible for the trophy.

Toronto Athletes Show Good Form

Dunkirk, N.Y., July 10 (CP)—Three Toronto athletes yesterday turned well-known United States stars in competing in the St. Mary's Academy invitational track meet here. The Canadian squad placed second and third in three events, Larry Gallagher, Argonaut Club triple hurdler, ran second by two yards in the 220-yard low hurdles in the scratch man, Ray Cochrane, 400-metre champion of Canadian Indian University, O'Connor received a three yard handicap. The time was 24 4-5 seconds.

Tony Powell of Toronto, who was seeded 16 inches, placed third in the handicap shot put to Bill Watson, Michigan, scratch, and Howard Schaefer, Buffalo (20 inches). Watson's distance was 40 feet, five inches.

In the 300-yard dash, run from scratch, Al Zeiss of Toronto was second to Cochrane in 32 4-5 seconds.



The past week has been a great week for our club. We started at Belleville on Monday, Stirling on Wednesday and the ladies broke 15 at Cobourg on Friday.

Our tournaments on the holiday was a good one, some real games took place. Harper and Vanner took second in the consolation and Harvey Perkins and Rev. Wight won the Hard Luck with Clarence Clapp and Alf Symons coming second in that event.

On Wednesday three teams of mixed rinks went to Stirling and each team landed a prize. Mrs. Shaw, John Shaw, Mrs. Zeran and Mr. Zeran skip, won first money with a score of 35 plus 5 for three wins.

Mrs. Robson, Fred Harper, Mrs. Watkin and Geo. Watkin skip won second with a 38 score plus 5 and Mrs. Correll, Dr. Edwards, Mrs. Hyde and Frank Correll skip won third with a score of 34 plus 3, this is something unusual in one tournament, our bowlers must be getting real good.

On Friday a team composed of Mrs. Black, Mrs. Cross, Mrs. Conners and Mr. Ward skip went up to Cobourg and came home with two wins high. In their first game they played Bellevue for first and ex-perts from Toronto. Belleville were three ahead up on the last end but Della got four to win. team that can hold Della that way must have been playing a real game. "Good girls."

Dues are due and due.

Have you got your partner for the club doubles. Don't be left pasted in the club house, get busy.

On Wednesday Charlie Sulman will be going to Kingston with his rink to defend the cup he has won two years in a row, good luck Char-lie. The team is John Shaw, Catcher, Rod McNeil and Charlie skip.

LACROSSE GAME ROUGH AND TOUGH

St. Catharines Defeat Orillia 19-8 to Pull Further in the Lead

Each time St. Catharines meets Orillia in a lacrosse game it's bound to be rough and tough because the two clubs have been feuding for a long time.

There was no exception at the Athletic Saturday night when the 1938 Canadian champions beat Orillia 19-8 in a scrap destined to more further ahead in the senior "A" Ontario Lacrosse Association race. Not one of the other five teams in the league can do much against the Saints, and now that is clinched, it seems.

The lowly Brampton Excelsiors, who have won but one game in twelve played, did deeper into the cellar in the only other game played during the week-end. They fell before the second-place Hamilton Tigers 17-9. A one-minute silence was observed at half-time in memory of Bert Booth, former league executive and lacrosse player, who died in hospital Friday.

Bouncing Bucky McDonald, who spends his winter hitting opposing forwards on the National Hockey League defence of Toronto Maple Leafs, repeatedly rallied the Orillia forces with pretty three from his rearguard position but the charges failed in the face of close checking and speed of the St. Kitsmen.

Most of the Orillia goals came when their opponents were shorthaned through penalties. When both teams were at full strength the Orillia squad was overwhelmed by the three and four-man attacks of the Mann Cup holders. More than 4,000 watched continuation of the feud.

St. Catharines have twenty-five points, seven more than Hamilton, Hamilton have fifteen and Orillia fourteen, with Fergus two points lose.

Sports Roundup

By EDDIE BRIETZ

New York, July 10 (AP)—Week's end brings a lull in the baseball war over the Giant-Dodger feud the Brooklyn Eagle got out a special in the Sept. 1st edition . . . and Chicago is almost a cinch to get the 1940 all-star baseball game, the Wrigley Field . . . Note to Mello Bettina: Phil Cavo is so rough on his sparring partners they're walking out on him. . . . Ray Bradley, fight czar of the Empire City meeting, looks, 100 per cent better than he did a year ago.

Bob Pastor will train for Joe Louis at Tom Luther's old camp at Saratoga. . . . Joe DiMaggio made his first appearance of the season among the American League's "five batting hitters" the other day. Now let's see you get him out of there.

Jack Singer, New York Journal-American: "Paul Derringer never should have settled that $6,000 bonus ment out of court. . . . Now he'll have to pitch to Dihlegrin, Dickey, Greenberg and Foxx in the all-star game."

Anything can happen in Brooklyn and usually does. . . . During the Giant-Dodger series two guys dressed like Greenpoint gals tried to get in on ladies' day tickets and landed in the clink. . . . A photographer rigged himself out in a football helmet, shoulder pads and chest protector before trying to get a picture of Zeke Bonura. . . . Sofi drinks were sold only in paper cups at a protective measure for the Giants and umpires. . . . Paus raised $25 in pennies to pay Durocher's fine for slugging Bonura and tried to dump them on the home plate.

Believe-it-or-not: The Michigan licence plate of Del Baker, manager of the Tigers is D-2-L. . . . Bobby Hemsley now is referred to as a steadying influence on the infield-ers.

BUFFALO BISONS SLUGGED WAY INTO 3RD PLACE

Look Like a Good Long-Range Choice to Win Pennant

GIANTS LOSE GROUND

Leafs Split on Saturday and Lose in Ten Innings on Sunday to Wings

(By The Associated Press)

Since Jersey City and Rochester have practically worn each other out battling for the lead and Newark's two-time champion is known have slumped clear into the second division, the pennant for Buffalo Bisons now look like a good long-range choice to win the International League flag.

Despite their pitching weakness, the Bisons have strengthened their way into third place.

The Red Wings couldn't take the lead in direct conflict last week with the Little Giants, but yesterday the Jerseyites lost a doubleheader to Montreal Royals, 7-4 and 9-0, while Rochester was taking a 10-inning 7-6 victory over Toronto Maple Leafs.

That put the Red Wings a half game in front of the Jerseys, and incidentally gave Manager Dowdy's threat to leave the cellar at Montreal port together with the slumping winning streak over the week-end after losing six games in a row, tacked on sixth, a shade ahead of Baltimore.

Bisons Win Two

And while this was going on the Buffalo Bisons were making Orioles in both ends of a bargain bill, 12-8 and 7-5, to move within striking distance enough to whip Syracuse Chiefs, 7-2, and Newark Bears, 8-3, in third place, a game ahead of Syracuse. Those two victories made it seven in a row for the Bisons and 12 in their last 20 games, a stretch that has carried them ahead of the Orioles to a contending position.

Buffalo backed their usual slugging style, with 22 hits, including homers by Joe Martin and Lou Hamlin have fifteen and Orillia Hamlin batted in three runs in his game in the nightcap, losing a shutout when Newark's relief hurler bounced off a tight pois into Ollie Carnegie's shin that still went for a homer. Newark's two sparkling pitching performances helped out. Max Macon limited Jersey to six hits for the opening shutout, when Ray Paul Andrews gave up only two blows to improve on a four-hitter by the Chiefs' Jake Mooty.

Rochester Wins

Rochester earned the league lead after spotting Toronto a 4-1 lead in four innings when a pass, Dewey Adkins's error and Bobby Sturgis and Sturdy produced the winning run in the fifth.

Sammy Bell led the Montreal attack on Jersey City Giants with six hits, including two doubles, in seven times at bat. Lee Rogers, young southpaw who pitched the Giants with six hits in the second game, was the victim of Bill Posedel. Sillis for five runs in the third inning.

Montreal broke their six-game losing streak Saturday by downing Jersey City, 7-3, in the first of seven fixtures the Bisons won 7-2 from Newark and Baltimore took a doubleheader with Baltimore, dropping the first 7-5 and taking the second 9-6. Jersey and Rochester were rained out.

Stolen bases—Case, Washington, 20.

Pitching—Donald, New York, 10-0.

RUGMAKERS' BATS BUSY SATURDAY

Amsterdam Five Games in Front in Can. - Am. League

(By The Canadian Press)

A good reason why Amsterdam will be playing in the Canadian-American League next season is found in their two weekend games. The New York Yankees' farm club had both the hitting and pitching to trounce each at the right time.

A deterioration of their pitching strength was given at Amsterdam yesterday when Jimmy Bianco served up four-hit ball to lead the Binghamton's 4 to 0 triumph over Cornwall Bisons. His rival Bisons could get only four hits off Bianco enough to win the one Rugmakers played at Amsterdam. Before against the cellar-dwelling Utica Braves the Rugmakers walloped 12 hits for nine runs in the second game. Yesterday, however, the Rugmakers bats were busy and they had to make only seven hits for a one-sided, 20-9 decision.

Seventh-place Gloversville Glovers showed plenty of hitting strength yesterday in their game against a doubleheader at home Schenectady Seamen, 12-4 and 4-1. They divided 32 base-blows, even in the hits department and six of them were four-ply clouts.

Other games saw Oswego Netherwood Knitters trounce Utica at Oswego with the homesters winning the opener, 2-1, and Colonels evening up with a 10-7 victory in the nightcap, while Ogdensburg Colts snatched an 8-1 triumph from the Braves at Utica.

In other Saturday games, Glovers defeated Rome, 12-8 at Gloversville in the opener, while Rome took a 5-3 victory over the Glovers in the nightcap. Another doubleheader classic was postponed by wet grounds.

The two Wilson boys, George and Bob, are not eligible to play in the 1939 Kinsmen's "Soap Box Derby", we learned this morning. According to the International rules and regulations any boy who win an International "Soap Box Derby" event is not permitted to race the next year. No doubt this will be welcome news to the 50 odd entries now on hand. In 1937 George Wilson won the All-Canadian "Soap Box Derby" and had the honor to be the first Canadian to race in the International world's championship at Akron, Ohio. Last year this honor went to his brother George and who's to say who the 1939 winner will be? President Bill Hurst today assured us that type and kind boxes being constructed by the ambitious youth of the community for the third of annual Canada "Soap Box Derby" were undoubtedly the best in the history of the event. Well, all I can say is bring 'em along and we'll see. And don't forget the 26th of July.

Hugh Fullerton, veteran baseball writer, is rejoicing over the recent arrival of a new grandson—Hugh Stuart Fullerton. The fifth of that name in a direct line "I hope he doesn't write sport," comments Hughie.

ADD—SPORT EYE ETC. Meh Wih Ralph "High Pockets" McCabe, former Belleville pitcher, in the driver's seat, the Copper Cliff baseball nine continued to dominate the Nickel Bell League with a win at the hands of ex-Creighton Saturday. McCabe scattered seven hits in a splendid performance and then came back to the bench talking to themselves for taking three free swings at nothing but ozone.

Eddie Murphy's Peterboro seniors moved into a contending position for the leadership in the senior-city senior ball loop on Saturday by beating the league leading Danforth Aces 5-4 over the week end. Carman Bush and Eddie Kennedy shouldered the 5-hit pitching duel as the Petes outhit the Aces 8-7.

The Vancouver University basketball quintette met a reverse in Tokyo, Japan, over the week-end when the Canadians were defeated the Canucks 31-27. The Japanese were playing the Orient. Since arriving in Japan the British Columbia cagers have won seven in row and are now completing a tour of Japan the Vancouver University students will tour the east coast of Asia.

The big sporting news of the week end was the ban placed on the services of the New York Yankees. Believe it or not the mighty men of McCarthy's have won the last five starts, dropping all to the Boston Red Sox after the series ended. All five games were lost in the Stadium and it is believed this is a record of consecutive losses to be chalked up against the Highbanders in their own backyard. Today's league standings shows them only 6 1-2 games in front of the red Sox. Looks as though McCarthy may have to call Joe Cronin and tell him things don't make a turn for the better soon.

Tomorrow sees the annual parade of the two major leagues' feature talent in the "All-star" game at the Yankee Stadium when the American and National Leagues hook up once again in this colorful baseball classic, featuring over the proposed line-up it would appear as though it was a case of the Yankees versus the whole National League, however.

AT THE BELLE

"Juarez"

The Belle Theatre announces that in line with its policy of securing the highest calibre film entertainment, it will present as its next feature attraction, the magnificent historical saga "Juarez", a motion picture which has been awarded with the greatest anticipatory interest ever since—in 1937—Warner Bros. announced plans for its production. Plans are under way for a brilliant premiere which will be attended by an impressive gathering of prominent local people.

Sufficient to justify the tremendous interest is the fact that in co-starring Paul Muni and Bette Davis, generally acknowledged to be the greatest American screen actor and the greatest American screen actress, for the first time since the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences formally proclaimed their pre-eminence.

And these two distinguished artists are aided by such notables of the screen as Brian Aherne, Claude Rains, John Garfield, Donald Crisp, Joseph Calleia, Gale Sondergaard, Gilbert Roland, Henry O'Neill, Harry Davenport, Montagu Love, John Miljan, Vladimir Sokoloff, Monte Blue and others.

Of such cast and such significance, by far the most ambitious production ever undertaken by any motion picture studio. Vice-President in charge of production was Hal B. Wallis, with Henry Blanke executive producer, and Henry W. Blanke associate producer Russell Hoplin in his settings from the magnificence of European palaces to the humble adobe huts in which a peon army won back the independence of Mexico, and Max Reinhardt, artistic invader, the production is calculated to dazzle the beholder with the splendor and convince with its fidelity and authenticity.

Against a dramatically backgrounded is told a story that is important not only in the history of Mexico but also in the annals of the United States, for it concerns the only large-scale attempt ever made by a European power to flout the Monroe Doctrine, and the reaction of America's policy which recent world events have endowed with increasing significance. It is a story of the defense of democracy all over the Western Hemisphere.

The production tells the story of the ill-starred attempt of Napoleon III to set up a throne for himself an empire in name but actually a vassal state of France, together with the sorry intrigue by which the people of Mexico were victimized, forced to vote for monarchial rule and accept as their monarch, Maxi, brother of Napoleon, Emperor Franz Josef of Austria-Hungary.

This well-meaning but futile would-be emperor is decidedly arresting at first sight. He is the idealist, the beautiful Carlota, when Benito Juarez, Mexican patriot and leader who has been president of the country flees to the north with his loyal cabinet.

From there, the honest and patriotic Juarez carries on an incessant guerilla warfare against the French troops, while they have sent over the Austrian Archduke Maximilian on his puppet throne, and meanwhile the emperor and his consort make futile gestures to win the affection of the Mexican people, the last of which is the adoption of a son.

It is on the very day of the adoption that followers of Juarez blow up the French munitions train in the capital city, and it is then, pressed by his generals, that Maximilian signs the infamous "black decree."

The people rally anew to Juarez, and help also comes finally from the United States, when the recently pro-occupied mean-while with its own Civil War. That conflict over, United States forces the Monroe Doctrine, forces Napoleon III to remove his troops from Mexico.

The great Mexican patriot, Juarez, is played by Muni and Miss Davis is the Empress Carlota, while Maximilian is portrayed by Aherne.

Against this background backgrounded is the story of the romance of Carlota and Maximilian, a superlative production, it has additional significance in the fact that it is the work of the same triumvirate which made such notable productions of "The Story of Louis Pasteur" and the "The Life of Emile Zola", namely, Muni as the star, William Dieterle as director and Henry Blanke as associate producer.

King George and Queen Elizabeth returning from trans-Atlantic triumph get Royal reception at Southampton and London, this and other events will be on the Belle News of the day, Larry Clinton and his melody Kings in a great musical revue will be presented on the same program.

Kingsbury Run, Cleveland, O., where several torso victims' dismembered bodies were found.

A confession that he murdered at least one of Cleveland's 12 torso victims has been obtained from Frank Dolceal, 52, bricklayer and former employee of a slaughter-house, by Sheriff Martin L. O'Donnell of Cuyahoga (Cleveland) County, Ohio. Sheriff O'Donnell also linked Dolceal with two of the other 11 torso murders which have baffled Cleveland police for years. The sheriff said Dolceal admitted, after two hours of grilling, to slaying and dismembering the body of Mrs. Florence Dawdry Polillo and throwing her head into Lake Erie at 6th street. The head was never recovered though parts of the body were found by police.

Bridge With Knees and Ankles Is One Piece Concrete Construction

By HOWARD BLAKESLEE
(Associated Press Science Editor
Urbana, Ill., July 10 (AP)—A bridge which has knees and ankles is cutting the cost of eliminating grade crossings this summer.

In principle this bridge is brother of the human knee and ankle which held the world on his shoulder. Engineers at Illinois university's engineering experiment station, in charge of engineering materials.

The bridge Atlas looks like a perfectly flat, concrete bridge set on vertical walls. But it is not quite what it seems.

The steel reinforcing rods in the concrete floor of the bridge bend around and extend down through the walls on which the bridge rests. The structure is one-piece.

The walls are thicker at the tops, so that if the abutting earth were removed they would resemble knees slightly outward bowed.

Near the bottom a few hundredths of an inch when the weight of a vehicle presses on the bridge floor. The floor sinks a fraction of an inch.

Then the bottom of the walls are ankles concealed in casual view by slots filled with soft material.

That the slots are cut diagonally downward, so that the walls taper, also their inner faces, according to Sheriff Martin L. O'Donnell, that he murdered one of Cleveland's torso

The slots are cut diagonally downward, so that the walls taper, also their inner faces, slightly. Crossed steel rods inside the concrete prevent breaking. The technical name for these ankles is hinges.

Without them the whole bottom of the walls would bear slightly with the action of the knees and this would skew the bridge foundations.

SISTER OF MAYOR VISITING IN CITY

Calm seas and a tranquil passage over the Atlantic was reported yesterday by Mrs. William Marr, Glasgow, Scotland, sister of Mayor Llewellin and other lodges in the district attended divine service at Centenary on Sunday. The members of the orders marched from the Orange Hall to the United Church where Rev. Bro. W. R. FISHING LICENCES SELLING RAPIDLY

Tourists with fishing rods have reached their season's peak in the district at the present time, it is revealed by the sale of non-resident fishing licences lately. Applications for the licences have been so heavy recently that the supplies have been ordered by Mr. Fraser Aylesworth, and a number of twenty-five new licences a week is at present being given out.

FIRE IS STARTED TO CLEAN OUT BOILER

While traffic was at its height in the downtown section on Saturday evening just previous to ten o'clock, clouds of smoke rolled from the roof of the city hall, waited over the parking of the building and descended to the street in a dark mist. A fire-conscious resident who turned in an alarm brought members of the fire department to the scene, who found the only fire, one in the boiler of the city hall heating plant, and extinguished the fire-box of the plant for this week's inspection of steamfitters.

ALEGEDLY FAILS TO MAKE TURN

Failing to negotiate the sharp turn into the Canadian Locomotive Co. hundred feet north of the city limits, a motor car driven by Ross Sweet, Thurlow, sideswiped several guard rail posts and collided head-on with a heavy Hydro pole early Saturday evening. Sweet sustained minor injuries to his face which needed medical attention from Dr. E. G. Kennedy.

Sweet later returned to the scene of the accident only to find his automobile mass, he later informed police and provincial police. Constable William McRiem went to the scene of the accident, but could find no trace of the vehicle reported stolen from facial injuries also however, the automobile was found by Mons Marr Street beneath a steep rocky cliff.

Sweet later informed the police that the unknown to him must have pushed the vehicle into the water during his absence. Charges are pending. Constable McBrien reported that the car was badly wrecked during the collision.

MOTORCYCLIST HURT IN COLLISION

No serious damage resulted, although Le Fleche sustained a nasty gash on the knee, which bled profusely to the point of impact when he was thrown off his motorcycle. P. ONTARIO PREMIER

Premier Hepburn is going to be very much in the anti-Ottawa forces in the coming federal campaign.

It is reasonably definite that Mr. Hepburn and Mr. Duplessis do not intend to form a united party in their reputedly pending joint effort to enthrone an administration of action at Ottawa. The well-authenticated information is that they will sit back and wait to see federal political developments, view them with political impartiality, and that there is strong probability they will openly support Hon. Dr. Robert J. Manion."

WALL STREET

New York, July 10 (AP)—Selected stocks made feeble motions toward recovery in today's market and, at its best, gains ran to a point or so.

Lack of vitality, however, again was a flaw in the picture and, with the ticker tape moving from the start, top prices were reduced in most cases near the fourth hour.

European markets were quiet and steady. Bonds and commodities, on the whole, did little either way.

Among the latter issues actors were Bethlehem Steel, Chrysler, U.S. Rubber, Montgomery Ward, Douglas Aircraft, American Telephone, American Smelting, Phelps Dodge, N.Y. Central, Great Northern, Coca Cola and Oil of N.J.

Backward were General Motors, American Can, Union Carbide, Consolidated Edison and United Aircraft.

Among Canadian issues McIntyre Porcupine and C.P.R. scored small gains, while most others were unchanged. A little pressure developed against Dominion 4's in the bond market.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, July 10 (CP)—Base metal issues posted moderate gains today on Toronto Exchange in response to firmer tone shown for copper while the golds were mainly firm to strong. Industrials and western oils showed little change. Only 111,000 shares changed hands.

The new decline for silver depressed the shares of the silver producers but only scattered sales were recorded. Aunor, Powell, Rouyn, Sylvanite and Preston were strongest.

Industrial leaders hesitated to move along with New York and the early advancing prices showed only narrow losses than gains. Utilities, Oils and Golds were off slightly. Walkers Common at 43 was down ½. Noma was off ¼ to 2.50. Imperial Oil firmed two cents and Royalite was down a fraction.

Demand Poor for Eggs-Butter Firm

Toronto, July 10. — Butter closed out the week on a firm note, while eggs held about even and cheese prices remained steady during Saturday's short session of the Toronto open market committee.

A fair demand met comparatively light offerings on the butter market, but trading was reported to have been arriving in any large volume and, with the general buying movement during last week, supplies were about cleaned up, the weekend. Western butter traded locally Saturday at 22 3-4c for No. 2 creamery solids graded at 22c for No. 1 grades and 21 1-4c for 3d score. No change was reported in prints at 23c to 23 1-2c for 1st grades, and 22 1-4c to 22 3-4c for 2d scores.

Demand remained poor with the continued flush season on the egg market, but prices maintained previous levels. Although receipts were still light, supplies were ample for requirements. Buyers are not inclined to have too large a stock on hand at the present time for fear of deterioration. Graded shipments were quoted at 22c for grade A-large, 21c for medium, 17c for 3rd and 15c for pullets.

Butter imported in Week.

Montreal, July 10 (CP)—Cheese and egg and potato prices backtracked on open produce markets here last week, but the better offerings strengthened slightly, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported.

Creamery butter prints to retailers sold for 22 1-4 cents a pound and solids for 22 1-2 to 3-4 cents. Western butter continued firm, the general was unquoted. Quebec No. 1 pasteurized prints changed hands at 22 1-4 cents. Receipts: 33,332 boxes, compared with 25,372 the week before.

Ontario white cheese was quoted at 13 3-4 cents a pound and colored at 13 7-8 cents. Quebec white cheese was quoted at 12 1-8 cents, and colored at 12 3-8 cents. Receipts 39,810 boxes compared with 38,456 a year ago.

Graded egg shipments in used tree cases was offered at 23 cents and loss off grade at 21 cents for A-medium. 17-18 cents for B-large and 15 cents for C. Receipts: 10,152 cases compared with 8,101 a year ago.

Trenton

Not in years has Trenton or the Surrounding District received the publicity which it has in connection with the arrival of Canada's the Bata shoe plant near Frankford, and already local people are taking advantage of the local locality for the purpose of observing developments, and collecting news. Toronto and other daily newspapers have carried a number of large space subject to go into. The last the reporters and estate booms in Frankford and the brightened outlook there, and it is not too much to believe that any prosperity which may be going to bring to the district will indirectly be felt in Trenton. At all events there is considerable optimism in evidence here, and certainly local men were not backward in taking an active hand in getting the deal this way than any others. Included in the list of those who met the mayor in view for the excellent work they have done are Mr. A. Pearce, Mr. Ed. Mortimer, Berland east, Councillor K. J. Coach who wrote 100 letters all in one hundred in the interests of the forest certain firms in backing the project, and Mr. Ross Thompson of the Chamber of Commerce, mayor and council, and Reeve George Spencer of Frankford, as well as many others.

Mayor Bone who razed the forms; Grand Trunk Railway and Building in the corner of King and Dundas streets have done a grand stroke of business and motorists especially commend the work as previously a tricky corner are glad to see the improvements visibility as all directions has been given. Town labourers are just finishing today and the last of the levelling and fill out is being covered with crushed stone. Many carloads of sawdust scooped out the basement in less than three days using a huge caterpillar tractor and a specialized air two-wheeled scoop towed behind. Excavation work on the foundation is practically complete and the walls will rise shortly.

Many anxious inquiries as to the condition of Mrs. Mills, Dufferin Ave., C. N. R. section foreman are being received by the foreman's family relatives and friends. Mrs. Mills was taken ill Monday when the jigger on which he and another man were riding was struck by a motor car. Mr. Mills suffered a multiple fracture of one leg and cut 13 3-4 cents a pound. Mr. Mills, of Toronto, C. N. R. auditor catching a ride from Frankford station to Mills station, also suffered a broken leg and possible fracture skull. MAYOR J. BONE SPEAKS PLAINLY OF GAS PROBLEM

Does Not Purpose to Have Round - Table Discussions Every Few Weeks, He Says

PRESENT OPERATIONS

Belleville residents who wish the city gas plant to prosper should use more gas, and take the annual use of ten or twelve thousand dollars now experienced, off the shoulders of the property owner of Belleville who is supporting the burden, it was declared today by Mayor Jamieson Bone in a review of the situation.

The Mayor recently a signed petition was handed to council requesting that on account of alleged unsympathetic handling of the Gas Department by the Public Utility Commissioners, that this department should once more be operated by the City Council," added the Mayor.

"Unfortunately I could not be present at council meeting that night, when a motion was passed that I name a committee of council, to go into the matter, with the Public Utility Commissioners.

"I think the public realize that the Mayor is one of three commissioners. The other two are appointed by council, one by the people, to operate the Utilities in the same manner that council may be pointed to run the other city affairs. I cannot see how council should interrogate the commissioners, any more than the commissioners should ask council. It is quite plain what they are doing about Public Works, City Hall or any other thing else.

"As one of those commissioners I have kept council informed on every item of any consequence. And in addition I asked the commissioners to meet council about two months ago, which was done and whole matter discussed pro and con. Council knew the position exactly that time, and I do not propose to have these round table discussions every few weeks, just for fun.

Every Consideration Given

"As far as I can judge the gas department is having, and has had in the past, every possible consideration from the commission. When I was an alderman about 20 years ago the Gas Works was a real Joker, and an attempt was then made to put it on its feet. I wanted to advertise for a competent engineer-manager, as the present arrangement, but this idea was voted down. At that time expert assistance was also obtained to try to make that utility pay. This was done years before and several times since. The history of our gas works would make interesting reading, but is of large subject to go into. The last the reporters and estate booms in Frankford and the brightened outlook there, and it is not too much to believe that any prosperity which may be going to bring to the district will indirectly be felt in Trenton. BRITAIN IS FIRMLY lieved revision of the status of Danzig neither was urgent nor likely to lead to serious dispute.

Denial is Made

A complete denial was made that the British guarantee was responsible for Britain's intransigence against negotiating with Germany. Mr. Chamberlain said the Poles, who had been forced to cede areas which had taken place in Austria, Czecho-Slovakia and Memelland," rejected German proposals over Danzig in March, extended support—at their own end took definitive measures—all before the British guarantee was given or even suggested to the Poles.

This was the first detailed statement on Danzig since the present crisis began.

He said the Free City was almost wholly German in population but that its prosperity depended to a very large extent upon Polish trade.

"Another power established in Danzig," he said, "could, if it so desired, bring the Free City's trade to a standstill."

"Those who were responsible for framing the present statute of the Free City must have appreciated all these facts and did their best to make provision accordingly."

No Question of Oppression

"Moreover, there is no question of any oppression of the German population in the Free City. On the contrary, the administrations imposed upon it are not of a kind to curtail the liberties of its citizens."

He said the present arrangement might be capable of improvement, but that it could not be regarded as "standing on a volcano."

Germany herself had guaranteed the status quo of the Free City, he said, until 1949 in the non-aggression pact between Germany and Poland.

In March, however, he continued, the German government started a press campaign for the return of Danzig to the Reich and Poland retorted on the 26th with a unilateral solution which she "would have to put into force."

Refused to Accept View

"Accordingly, I refused to accept the German point of view and themselves made suggestions for possible settlement provided which Germany was ingrested," he said.

"Certain defensive measures were taken by Poland on March 23 and a reply was given on the 26th of March 26. I ask the House to note the Polish government."

His reiterated Britain's willingness to fulfill her undertaking to go to Poland's aid in event of a threat "clearly a menace to Poland" which she considered it vital to resist with her armed forces."

Clear Obligation

It may,he, he said, "that in a clearer atmosphere possible improvement" of the situation could be found but that "even then the arrangements would have to be negotiated with due obligations equally binding to both parties concerned."

"His Majesty's government realize that recent developments in the situation in Europe have caused confidence and render it difficult at present to create an atmosphere in which reasonable counsels can prevail."

"In face of this situation, the Polish government have remained firm in the view that His Majesty's government hope that the Free City with its constitution will be preserved and prove as she has done before in her history that different nationalities can work together when their real interests coincide.

Refused to Elaborate

"Meanwhile, I trust that all concerned will abstain from any action calculation not to allow any incidents to arise calculated to disturb the calm and assume such a character as might constitute a menace to the peace of Europe."

When he had concluded he was asked by Sir Archibald Sinclair, Liberal servative, whether "the government have in mind any scheme or any attempt to change the actual de facto status of Danzig as they would take a serious view of any change the de jure status."

Mr. Chamberlain refused, however, to elaborate on his prepared statement.

Clergymen to Feed 200 Single Jobless

Toronto, July 10—(CP)—Clergymen will provide meals when unemployed forces at a meeting last night and announced that their guests will be charged they will feed 200 single unemployed, homeless men, the Ontario Unemployed Single Government relief.

Meals only for the three meals a day, the men must be under 45 years of age.

The churches also will select an additional group of 50 homeless and with the aid of trained social service workers will endeavor to obtain employment for them.

Transients in Ontario, outside of Toronto, were warned by those in charge of relief that, if they might be arrested if they attempt to get in on the Toronto arrangement.

POLICE COURT

Harry McDonald of this city, was sentenced to serve six months definite, with a further indeterminate period of six months, in the Ontario reformatory by Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C., in today's city police court after the accused had pleaded guilty to a charge of theft.

McDonald was arrested on Thursday last on a nominal charge of vagrancy and held for investigation by Plainclothes Constable Fred Izard. Today, however, the charge was changed to that of the theft of a valuable chest of silver, the property of Eaton Hinds. The theft took place last January.

When asked if he desired the counsel of a lawyer, McDonald replied in the negative, "Nay, I'm pleading guilty", he replied to Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C.

"Although he is not a calloused criminal, this man is always in trouble and perhaps the best plan would be to take him out of circulation," suggested Mr. Donnan to His Worship. The six to twelve months term followed.

"That's a pretty hard slap for such a small crime, don't you think," Magistrate Butler asked the accused indignation of the term.

Careless Driving Charged

James Ashton was fined $20 and costs on a charge of careless driving and after pleading guilty was fined $20 and costs. "This is that new charge as provided in the amendments to the Highway Traffic Act and it is something the courts have needed for many years," remarked Mr. Donnan as he announced the costs would amount to $4.75.

"That seems to be a large amount of costs for a city case where only one witness was called," commented His Worship as he disallowed the assessed $2.25 witness fee.

Albert Edgar Badgley, 17, of this city, was sentenced to serve two years less a day in the Ontario Reformatory after the accused had pleaded guilty to a charge of two metal patterns, the property of the Canadian Industries Company, valued at $150.00.

"I am informed these patterns were stolen from your employer," His Worship. Not only that, but these articles were wantonly destroyed with a hammer," remarked Mr. Donnan.

The accused appeared on charges of drunkenness and all admitted guilt. In the police court number of cases the accused men were given a fortnight in which to raise the fine of ten and costs, although two indicated they would serve the alternative jail sentence in default thereof.

Police Blotter

Leonard Courtneyes, Tweed, was arrested over the week end on the charge of driving a motor car, the property of C. E. Way, by fraud. Courtneyes was remanded to the custody of the County jail pending the official weighing-in ceremonies this afternoon.

Polished to a gleaming sheen, the tiny cars which showed signs of painstaking care and craftsmanship were lined up in solid rows in rear of the front office of the headquarters, carefully numbered and checked as each entry was received. The last mechanical detail had been given the speedy little machines at the last loving wipe of a dust rag had been tendered by the new paint. Another hectic thrills was in store as each boy placed his own particular creation on the track for the first time contestant, each specifically wonderful in his own eyes, and each one would do".

Many of the machines revealed almost professional workmanship; trim curves and rounded- corners were noticeable in the bodies of many portions. Paint jobs that; gleamed in the penetrating rays of the afternoon rigage painter's art covered the metal and wood with a high gloss and sparkling translucence. As inspection of the machines reveals that faithful copies of the speedliest and most durable of the recent prize winners in this world-wide classic of boyhood had been produced by Belleville and district youth.

This afternoon official weighing-in ceremonies will be held and undertaken by officials of the Toledo Scale Company of Canada Limited under the direction of Mr. E. Anderson, Canadian Sales Manager of this Company, assisted by Toledo's chief weigh-master and the

Frankford Not 'Ghost Town' Official Denies News Stories

Village on Trent River, Favored by Bata Company for Site of Factory is Prosperous and Has Had Noble Record—Founded Over 100 Years Ago

Stirring, July 10 (Special)—There is a general feeling of thankfulness shared by all the citizens of Frankford as heavily loaded transport trucks stream into the village bearing load after load of Bata machinery. But in recent days it has been overcast with apparent indignation. Their pride has been hurt by misleading stories gathered by newspaper reporters who have classified the town as a "ghost town" about to be revived, "a town with want, unemployed and relief." Looking back over a hundred years of pioneer life and history they resent the impression broadcast by sensational reporters who write of dusty, dirty streets, inactivity, dire need and so on.

According to several "prominent citizens" Frankford is thankful beyond measure for the new industry. But from the time of its beginning its very location has made it a thriving community and at present there are few towns its size better off. "We have less than a dozen on our relief rule," declared one official, "and one and some papers say fifty families. We've done all that could with the dirty dusty streets mentioned by one writer are paved or oiled. It is fortunate that founders of Frankford had sufficient foresight to settle in a district which today is such a desirable site for industry."

But Frankford is a successful busy centre with fifty places of business and only two vacant stores available. "We have fine homes and happy wide awake citizens," declared another source eagerly claiming such adverse publicity for our town.'

Frankford People Happy.

Frankford, selected by the experts of the moment as the site of the new plant because of the advantages it has to offer, is one of the most picturesque villages in the province. Only strangers driving along Dundas Trail fully appreciate the magnificent beauty surrounding the district. It has always been looked upon as an ideal location for a manufacturing centre. No doubt even the founders had no vision of such activity that within a few years will become a reality.

In 1827 Frankford was a post village known by the name of its founder as Scott's Mills. The mill was established by a Mr. Scott on Cole Creek within empties into the Trent River. During the administration of Sir Francis Bond Head he visited the hamlet and officially named it Frankford.

Paved Highway.

Along the Trent River in the early days was a trail which in 1852 became a gravel road and today is a fine paved highway that affords tourists one of the most beautiful drives on the continent. Winding hills rising high on both sides it is still known by the two names Iroquois Trail and King's Highway No. 2. In 1860 Frankford steadily moving forward had a population of 700 and operating successfully under waterpower supplied by Cole Creek were flouring mills; two carriage factories (capable of making 100 yards of cloth per day) owned by Messrs. Williams and Huffman; some tanneries and a distillery along with several merchant shops.

Frankford's Buildings.

The buildings now being used by the Bata Company were erected for a paper mill by Mr. Sills who manufactured paper entirely from straw. It later become the property of the Miller Company and still later was sold to Canadian Paper Mills. There is still a successfully operated pulp mill employing about twenty-five men. A fully equipped canning factory owned by Canadian Canners operates part of the year. There are four churches, United Church, Free Methodist Church, Church of England, and Roman Catholic Church. A fine modern grade A Continuation school building was erected in 1923 having a staff of seven teachers under Principal A. Warren; the old school building was transformed into a community hall and houses a complete public library and reading room. The town was one of the first of its size in the district to have paved streets and possesses two splendid parks including a tourist camp and recreation park beside the canal.

At the southern end of the town is a fine exhibition ground and race track where fall fairs and other field days are held and recently a new district branch office of the Hydro Electric System was established in Frankford with a fully equipped modern office building. Past history of the village also reveals keen interest in all branches of sport with baseball and hockey well supported by sport loving fans who was among the first in the Trent Valley League to erect a closed arena.

So, adding to the qualities portrayed in the loyal sons of men who had vision to see the value of locating Frankford, the energy, genius and determination of these new Canadians helping in their industry, Frankford will, in the not too distant future, become a place well known throughout the Dominion.

In the days when success smiles upon her, men will scan the pages of her history to see that municipal affairs of today, which are now historic in her being, were directed by men with ability, wisdom and good business honesty handed down to them such men as Reeve D. M. Spencer, Councillors G. W. Dickson, W. Lydea, Jos. Carr and George Montgomery and Town Clerk William Simmons.

City Slicker

By E. H. WILKINSON

Buffalo is a pretty large city, and when you come to it from a country town several hundreds of miles away where you have lived practically all your life it holds all the wonders of a veritable fairyland. Therefore when James Naomi Chase for refusing to marry Don Osgood the very month after her arrival,

Naomi was young and had been more or less suppressed heretofore, and life lay ahead of her, and she just couldn't see settling down with one man at all. Besides she wasn't sure but what Don was one of the proverbial "city slickers."

During her girlhood she had read about and been warned against city slickers.

They were, in her imagination, rounders of the worst sort.

Sleek, saurey, unscrupulous, born and bred of paved streets and always eager to take unfair advantages of poor, innocent country people. Young girls had much cause to fear them.

Don looked like a city slicker, but he didn't act like one.

He was tall and thin, and terribly good-looking. His manner was beyond reproach, and he had a way about him that attracted people.

In fact, Naomi, under the spell of his personality, almost fell into his arms within a month after her arrival, that he asked her to marry him—remembering only in time that more than one was prepared by a city slicker and therefore should be avoided, or, at least, kept under surveillance for a while.

She refused, tactfully, and felt sorry at the hurt look that came into her eyes.

Later, in her room, she tried to stop thinking about him, and couldn't. She didn't know it, but she had fallen quite as much in love with Don as he had with her.

The thing was incredible, because they had known each other only a month.

And then, too, the fear of falling into the clutches of a city slicker was so fixed in her mind as to suppress the knowledge.

Don didn't call her up for a week after that.

He asked her out to dinner and his manner gave not the faintest suggestion that he was a man in love and had been jilted by his lady fair.

Naomi was a little disappointed and, unreasonably wanting to hurt him still further, she casually mentioned meeting Rogers Inches and what he was.

Now Rogers Inches had displayed more interest as much interest in Naomi as had Don.

He was equally good-looking and he was a friend of some friends of hers. Moreover, he had that "man about town" air, and Naomi had always dreamed that some day a man about town would fall in love with her.

No one had ever warned her against men about town. Naomi wished she could fall in love with Rogers but whenever she tried she thought of Don Osgood.

Don listened to her babble about Rogers Inches for about five minutes, then he smiled offhandidly and said:

"Rather, eh? I've heard of him. A mighty fine chap."

Naomi gasped. She hadn't wanted Don to say that at all.

She wanted him to be hurt and angry, and have him send her. It was quite distressing to know that he approved of Rogers. And it was still more distressing to know that he had apparently taken her refusal to marry him as final.

Something would have to be done about that.

Naomi stopped talking about Rogers Inches abruptly and tried to be entertaining otherwise. Don's attention, astonishingly, seemed to be divided between her conversation and a silly little blonde who sat at a table nearby and was obviously attracted by his good looks.

That Naomi told herself after she had climbed into bed later that night, certainly confirmed her fears that Don Osgood was after a city slicker.

Nobody but a city slicker would flirt with one girl while he was in company with another. No, a man who had lived in the city all his life and was so indifferent to its wonders was not the sort to marry for her. She'd better start forgetting him at once.

Two nights later Don called again, and asked her to a movie.

She was angry at herself because she accepted and angry, too at the delightful pounding of her heart at the sound of his voice.

They dined first in a cute little downtown restaurant, and during the course of conversation, Naomi let fall that she had been out with Rogers Inches the night before and he certainly knew this town from one end to the other.

"And everyone in it knows him, too," Don said, nodding. "I tell you that man's popular, and a first-rate chap."

Naomi was furious.

According to all the laws of love he should despise Rogers Inches and attempt to influence her against him.

It was sudden and terrible thought struck her.

Perhaps Don had stopped loving her!

Perhaps he really wouldn't ever propose again—was only taking her out because he felt sorry for her! If that, what a predicament!

It would be all right if she didn't love him, but she did. She knew it now.

There wasn't any use fighting against it. She loved Don Osgood more than anything else in the world.

Buffalo and its fairyland no longer held a single charm, not unless she could have Don to enjoy them with her.

Naomi was miserable throughout the evening that followed and throughout the weeks that followed after that.

Don called her only three times and his casual indifference nearly drove her to distraction.

She would more than once that she were the man and he the woman, because a man can speak his mind and not be thought forward.

Rogers Inches called her almost daily and several times, hoping to distract her thoughts from Don, she accepted his invitations to dinner or the theatre.

But he bored her, bored her stiff. Another month passed and Naomi began to despair. And then one evening someone knocked on her apartment door and opening it she discovered Don. He burst into the room, grinning from ear to ear.

"Well, honey, I've got a job at last! And a good one!"

She stared blankly. "Job? Haven't you had a job?"

"I thought you knew I hadn't. I lost it a month after I came down from Wisconsin. Thought I told you the first night. Anyway that's why I haven't been able to take you out much and that's why I've been feeling so blue and why I haven't proposed every day. However, now—will you marry me?"

"Why yes," said Naomi faintly. "But you said something about Wisconsin?"

"Sure. That's where my home is. Little jerk place in the country. I'd never been to the city before. arrived the day after you did and—but, say, can't we celebrate this engagement with a kiss?"

"Of course, but—look here, Don, how does it happen you know Rogers Inches so well then?"

"Never heard of the man till you mentioned his name. Telling you he was a mighty fine chap and all is a little system we boys use up in Wisconsin. I had to keep you in love with me, you know—till I got myself another job."

Then he swept her into his arms and Naomi a little bewildered but quite happy, yielded gracefully.

Inspection was made, the Minister states, at the request of the solicitor for the company. Contract For New West Wing Of Hospital Is Awarded To Dickie Construction Co.

New Construction at Belleville General Hospital With Alterations Will be Completed by May 1st, 1940— Isolation Unit to be Established on First Floor of East Wing

$200,000 TOTAL COST

With Completion of New Wing Belleville General Hospital Will Compare Favorably With Modern Hospitals of Like Size in Ontario

Announcement was made today that contract for the construction of the new west wing of the Belleville General Hospital, and alterations to the existing building, has been awarded the Dickie Construction Company, Limited, of Toronto. It is anticipated that the total cost of the new construction and alteration will reach $200,000.

The new wing will consist of forty-two private and semi-private rooms. It will be complete with new obstetrical, X-ray and emergency departments; a central supply room and library equipped with the latest scientific aids will be inspected adjacent the nurses' rooms will be modern in every detail, and already many requests have been received from organizations and individuals to furnish these rooms.

Isolation Unit in East Wing

An arrangement has been reached between the Department of Health and the City of Belleville with the Board of Governors of the Hospital to set up within the Hospital proper an isolation unit, it was announced by Mr. Gordon A. Friesen, administrator of the Hospital, on behalf of the Board, and the first floor of the east wing has been set aside for this purpose, and when completed it will accommodate eight patients. This new unit will be entirely self-contained and will have its own particular outside entrance. It is being so arranged that the different types of communicable diseases can be cared for without any thought of cross-infection.

"This idea of having an isolation unit within the hospital was suggested by the Deputy Minister of the Ontario Department of Health, and although it is comparatively new it is considered the most practical," it was stated by Mr. Friesen in making the announcement of the contract.

Additions and Alterations

The additions and alterations to the existing hospital building will include extensions to the present diet department, a new passenger elevator as well as the installation of a water tube boiler of latest type manufactured by the Supreme Company of Toronto.

Not least of the new departments will be one section which will be set aside for the children, which will be furnished and equipped by the Belleville General Hospital Nurses' Alumae Association.

Including the many minor alterations which will be carried out at the same time the new wing is under construction, it is expected that the complete building program will be finished by May 1st, 1940, for the Belleville Hospital.

"We believe that when this new wing is added and alterations are carried out that the Belleville General Hospital will rank with the finest in the country," stated Mr. Friesen, voicing the sentiments of the Belleville Hospital Board.

The Women's Christian Association might well be proud of the progress it has made in providing hospital facilities to the citizens of Belleville and the surrounding district since the year 1886 when the present General Hospital took charge.

When the new wing is completed the Belleville hospital will compare favorably in size with any modern hospital in Ontario."

WOULD WIDEN DIVORCE LAW IN DOMINION

British Columbia Law Society Favors New British Law

GROUNDS IN CANADA

Grounds for Divorce in Britain Are Far Wider Than in Canada

Vancouver, July 11—(CP)—Widening of Canada's divorce law to bring it in line with recently amended British law was favored in a resolution endorsed by the Law Society of British Columbia at its fifth annual convention last night.

The resolution proposed enactment of a Canadian law of divorce similar to the "Matrimonial Causes Act" which was sponsored by A. P. Herbert in the British House of Commons and which became effective in Britain Jan. 1, 1938.

In British Columbia, adultery and bestiality are the only grounds on which divorce is permitted.

Grounds in British Act

Under the British act, grounds include also desertion without cause for three years, cruelty, and incurable insanity. As grounds for nullity it includes social disease at the time of the marriage, and pregnancy through another person at the time of the marriage, if, at the time of marriage, in both cases when unknown to the other party at the time of the union.

DYNAMITE FOUND, MAN IS ARRESTED

Explosives, Fuses and Tools Found Beneath Railway Bridge

Hamilton, Ont., July 11—(CP)—Provincial Constable William Hawkins lodged Adrian LePitre of Montreal in police cells here last night on a charge of vagrancy after the discovery of a quantity of dynamite, fuses and tools beneath a railway bridge near Dundas.

LePitre was arrested by Police Chief Carl Jack of Dundas, who commandeered a jigger from the Canadian National Railways section gang and travelled two miles to the spot where Hawkins held the man.

The explosives and a brace and drills were found beneath a C.N.R. bridge in a package in the James Street subway, east of Clappison's Cut, who had been picking berries in the area.

Barkley told police that when he picked up and opened the package a man came from behind a clump of bushes and tackled him. They struggled but the stranger broke free with the package, Barkley recounted. He then went to get Police Chief Jack.

The officer commandeered a railway jigger and, driven by C. N. R. foreman Hubert Hughes of Dundas, raced along the track until he found LePitre. The man was turned over to Constable Hawkins and the investigation continued by Provincial Police.

Constable Hawkins said LePitre did not have the explosives or tools of a laborer. Miners' papers were found

4 British, 15 French Subjects Must Leave Italian Frontier Area

Rome, July 11 (AP) — Fifteen French and four British subjects were reported today to have received orders to leave Bolzano Province immediately—some by messages the Italian government proceeded with the expulsion of foreigners from its frontier areas adjoining Germany.

Between twenty-five and thirty other Britons living in more remote mountain villages were expected in some quarters to receive similar instructions as soon as they can be delivered.

Some of several hundred foreigners living in Bolzano Province, in the Italian Tyrol, meanwhile, left for their homes in Switzerland, the Netherlands or elsewhere under orders to do so. Others were under their packing but had not yet boarded trains.

Apul Rougger, Swiss Minister to Italy, was due back in Rome tomorrow and it was reported that many of the Swiss who had received expulsion orders had been told to wait until he can get an explanation from the Italian foreign office.

It was said the Swiss Minister would remind Italian authorities that 135,000 Italians live in Switzerland, many more than the number of 64st zilliens in Italy.

Tripartite Pact Of Britain, Russia France Possible

Diplomatic Circles in London Say This Would Bind Three Nations to Go to Other's Aid in Face of Direct Aggression

THREE BALTIC STATES

Russian Definition as to Indirect Aggression Goes Farther Than Anglo-French Attitude—Russia Still Hopes for Agreement on Original Plan

By J. F. SANDERSON—

Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, July 11—(CP Cable) — With the Moscow negotiations bogged down again, diplomatic circles here are predicting that Russia, France and Great Britain will be bound by some military alliance of limited scope.

The newest stumbling block is a definition of indirect aggression, with Russia's ideas so far apart from Britain's that it is unlikely they will be able to get together.

If agreement becomes impossible on an all-inclusive anti-aggression pact the three nations may negotiate a tripartite treaty covering only themselves.

In that event the treaty would bind the three nations to go to each other's assistance in the face of direct aggression against any one of them. It likely would provide for immediate consultation if aggression were threatened against any other European nation.

Definition is Difficulty

The major difficulty at the moment is a definition of indirect aggression. The British are demanding an extremely wide definition relating to Russian Latvia and Finland, the three Baltic countries Great Britain and France have agreed should be included in the pact. According to reports here, the Russian definition would include economic penetration liable to change forms of government.

The British representatives in Moscow have pointed out that the last definition would make the three Baltic countries practically Russian protectorates, and that Finland, Latvia and Finland have feared all along.

5 Astrologers Advise Hitler Says Dr. Butler

New York, July 11—(AP)—Chancellor Hitler maintains an advisory staff of five astrologers, Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler said today, to read the stars and tell him what the future holds.

"At the present time," Dr. Butler said, "the advice of these wise men is that the climax of Hitler's career as master of the world approaches and that whatever he is to do to add to his fame must be done before that date.

"This may sound like nonsense, but it is the sort of nonsense which may easily give to modern civilization another terrific shock."

Dr. Butler, President of Columbia University, retired yesterday from London where he attended a conference of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, of which he is also President.

GRAIN HEADING OUT VERY RAPIDLY

Grains are heading out very rapidly in the district at the present time, and a slightly smaller than normal crop is expected to be harvested in the immediate area this year, it was predicted in local agricultural circles this morning. Dry weather of recent weeks has cut down the early promise of a heavy crop, it was declared.

According to the current report of the Ontario Department of Agriculture, straw on grain crops through the eastern counties in Kingston district is very short. Hay crops are below average in yields in the northern and central district, though some good crops of alfalfa and clover have been harvested in the southern section. Haulage corn and root crops seem to be making good headway, the report notes.

BELLEVILLE RESIDENTS SUFFER FROM SUNBURN

"Boiled lobster red" is a new color that best describes the complexion and shade of skins of scores of Belleville residents who are taking with a strong and sudden sunburn acquired in the open over the week end. Many children and adults have received severe burns, and illness has followed in many cases due to too long an exposure to the sun's rays.

"Sunburn is the same as any other burn, and the same treatments and care must be given these burns," it was stated today by one of the city medical men. Old fashioned remedies such as a solution of weak tea, vinegar in the bath water, cornstarch, vinegar and other balms are being tried by those afflicted.

CITIZENS ASKED NOT TO CROWD THE ROADWAY
Cooperation With the Kinsmen to Ensure Success of Derby Requested
PROTECT KIDDIES
Assured of the full support of the public of Belleville and district, and confident that this evening's attendance of spectators along Front, Bridge and North Streets would break previous records for this event, members of the Belleville Kinsmen club are presenting the fourth annual Soap Box Derby in Belleville this evening and that the same co-operation of the public in the past again be given to ensure the safe, accident free completion of the race.
Members of the Belleville Police and Fire Departments will be on hand and have volunteered to a man to assist in every way possible in the control of an expected huge crowd, but their presence will be but incidental. In order to assure perfect order during the race, every spectator is asked to co-operate in this matter.
Citizens are asked not to crowd the roadway at any point. They are asked not to cross the street while any part of the race or the parade is in progress. The presence of even a single individual on the track during the race may spoil the whole event for some budding hopeful, resulting in disappointment and grief for the one, who has worked so hard in preparation. There is no sorrow so genuine as that of boyhood's disappointed thrill.
In past years camera enthusiasts who pushed their way past barricades erected for the boys' safety in order to get close-up shots, were a particular source of annoyance to officials of the Kinsmen Club, who are entrusted with this serious business of accident prevention. Police cameras are again asked not to invade any section of the open road for this purpose.
As in the past every safeguard has been taken by the Club. Every foreseen contingency has been taken into account. Every unexpected angle has been explored. But in order to insure that the fourth annual Derby will be as successful as past events, citizens of Belleville and district, and visiting spectators will be asked to co-operate to make this year's classic even more successful.

CAT ADOPTS 7 RABBITS REPLACING DEAD KITTENS
(Lisbon, Ont., July 11 (CP)—A tabby cat owned by Mrs. Seibert Schneider of Lisbon added this is a cruel world for a mother. She gave birth to a litter of kittens recently, but the family disposed of them promptly. Then some of the farm hands brought a litter of seven jack rabbits and the cat adopted them. Now all is sorrow again—the rabbits disappeared.

MINIATURE CIRCUS ORIGINATES HERE
Parade and Circus Rings, Trained Animals, Clowns, Make it Real
Circus Day, minus perhaps the familiar wind-blown slap of the canvas of a billowing Big Top, the rasp and trumpet of elephants in the real and the snarl of live, caged tigers, but Circus Day, nevertheless, came to Belleville yesterday as the 1st Ice Bridge Street West and scene of Juveniles of West Belleville, and even adults, too, staged the extravaganza was all that could be desired.
It was a circus arranged carried out and executed to the last detail of blaring band and snapping whip by home talent only; a gigantic tremendous spectacle of thrills and fun whose chief feature presented the highly trained acts of Claude Farnham's pony, Stubby the trained bull jumping Tom and Bill Brown's flight wire walking cat.
The crowd in attendance was large and orderly. It was bound to be big for advertising of this event had been carried on through the west side of the city with penciled posters tacked plentifully to trees and telephone poles by the willing partners, with the admission price plainly marked: "Two cents for adults—one cent for children".
Two performances were held, performances which followed the afternoon street parade of pony, rabbits, dogs and cats, each other animals of the neighborhood and the evening grand finale which presented entertainment and fun until the last snap of the ringmaster's slightly frayed whip.
Clowns, tumblers and jesters mingled with the more acute bespangled feature acts of slack and tight wire walking, tumbling and balancing. Among the acts of interest with the amazing stunts of Tip and Tim and Tony and other acts of rabbits, dogs and cats, was a grand day of fun and frolic for West Belleville complete to even the bottle of pop and ice cream at the special booths erected to catch the overflow trade so heavy in attendance.

FAIR BOARD TO GIVE AWAY TWO OF CARS
Working in co-operation with the Belleville Fair Board, Belleville merchants will, commencing July 15th, present coupons with each purchase in local stores and these coupons will be used for the purpose of drawing for the two new cars, which will be given away by the Fair Board during the three days of the Belleville Fair.
The plan will be the same as followed last year when the lucky numbers were given away from a church in front of the grandstand during the evening performances of the Fair.
Names of the merchants who constitute the Belleville Fair Board Club, and who are officially designated to give coupons for purchases are now being prepared for printing and will appear in an early issue of the Ontario Intelligencer. Belleville shoppers are asked to patronize these merchants whose stores will be distinctly labelled, and thus help home industry.

To Learn Unfamiliar Terrain.
The agreement regarding joint training flights by British planes over French territory and vice versa, designed to accustom pilots to long-distance flights over unfamiliar terrain.
Taking off from airdromes in the centre and east of England, the bombers on today's flight divided into two groups to follow different routes.
More than 100 heavy bombers, including Hamerdens and Wellingtons were to cover 1,200 miles in a round-trip non-stop flight to Bordeaux, passing over La Havre, Le Mans, Rambouillet, Angers and Caen.
Medium sized bombers, including Fairey Battle and Blenheim planes, took a triangular course turning on Orleans and Le Mans.
All planes, with full military loads and normal crews of from three to five men, had instructions to fly at 6,000 feet, going down to 3,010 feet over cities. The entire flight was to take five hours.

Paris Day In France.
Paris, July 11 (AP)—The war ministry announced today that British defence leaders would come to Paris to review the July 14 parade, which officers said would be the greatest military display France ever has staged on her national holiday.
The July 14 will be the 150th anniversary of the fall of the Bastille and both celebrations are planned throughout France.
It was announced that Leslie Hore-Belisha, War Secretary, Admiral Sir Dudley Pound, Commander in Chief of the Mediterranean fleet, and Air Chief Marshal Sir Cyril Newall, Chief of Imperial Staff, Edouard Daladier's invitation to come to Paris.
The British Air Ministry announced last week that five squadrons of Royal Air Force planes would take part in the Bastille Day exercises in France.
An unscheduled "dress rehearsal" for the city's July 14 parade held up traffic in the Champs Elysees district this morning and made officers nervous.

BRITAIN'S STAND CLEAR ON DANZIG

It has been clearly placed before the Nazi Government of Germany what Britain's attitude will be in the event of interference with the status quo of Danzig, even by an inside coup, which has been expected in some quarters. Mr. Chamberlain pointed out yesterday in the British Commons that while Danzig is racially almost wholly a German city, the prosperity of the inhabitants depends to a very large extent on Polish trade, that the Vistula is Poland's only waterway to the Baltic and the port is its mouth is of strategic and economic importance to her, that there is no oppression of the Germans in Danzig, the administration of the Free City being in German hands and that its liberties are not curtailed.

Mr. Chamberlain said what may be taken as Britain's final word to the Nazis, "the present situation, though it may be capable of improvement, cannot in itself be regarded as basically unjust or illogical." He also pointed out that Adolf Hitler had guaranteed the status quo until 1944. But events happened in March which showed Poland that Germany had certain plans which Poland could not but refuse. He pointed out that Poland took action days before Britain gave Poland any guarantee.

The British prime minister has had experience with German methods in Czecho-Slovakia, Austria and Memel. So he spoke of fears of "surreptitious methods" which might result in a fait accompli.

The Nazi have been told that Britain stands by her guarantees to Poland and now Germany cannot claim that there is any doubt. If Hitler should attempt to change the status quo of Danzig Britain will intervene and back Poland.

Britain has also made known to the world something of her air strength, which even potent Germany cannot ignore or disregard. Since last September Britain has built up an air force, which was said the other day to be in many respects the most potent in the world for defence. Last September, according to all reports, Britain and France were not ready to compete in the air with Germany and Italy but immense strides have been made since that time, a test of fortitude, determination and financial strength. Today it is said Hitler's boasted air-fleet is not the menace it once was, But the end is not told yet. Britain moves on and on with longer and longer strides on big scale production of not only well known types of planes but of secret planes.

HOME IMPROVEMENT (RURAL)

How the Home Improvement Plan has been working to help country residents is explained in a statement released from Ottawa.

Under this plan, loans are available from the chartered banks and other approved lending institutions to repair and improve farm dwellings as well as farm situated buildings and utilities. In the case of farm properties, loans are also made to finance repairs and improvements to other farm buildings and to enlarge or build such structures as barns, silos, greenhouses and poultry-houses.

An analysis of the loan applications discloses that a large number of rural families have availed themselves of the Plan to finance the installation of electricity, pressure water systems, and new plumbing and heating equipment. Others have added new rooms, built new porches or had the house painted and brightened up both inside and out, thus increasing the enjoyment and convenience of the whole family.

Total farm loans made under the Home Improvement Plan to May 31, 1939, are divided according to provinces as follows:

Prince Edward Island	402	$ 75,705.22
Nova Scotia	961	220,382.60
New Brunswick	634	151,962.68
Quebec	1,252	417,281.99
Ontario	4,728	2,116,727.02
Manitoba	589	199,939.13
Saskatchewan	204	70,697.87
Alberta	1,244	450,435.72
British Columbia	448	154,182.37
	10,462	$3,857,315.60

If the Plan has thus been of considerable advantage in assisting urban building operations, it has also been of value in enabling farmers to improve their buildings and also, of course, in furnishing work to both artizans and those employed in factories catering to the building trades.

WOODLAND TRIBUTE

Offer arbutus, a bit snow-blown,
Tipton with joy at the quick surrender
Of winter's will,—and violets slender.
Calypso, sought from a path unknown,
Brush past the fir fans, where shall nod
Red Man's rapture, the moccasin flower.
Add to this coral-rock, deep in its bower,
The wild, sweet home of the forest sod.

But a threefold glory wakes to the air,
One bloom more is fit for a palace,
A strange white mystery, cupped in its chalice,
Hermit of blossoms, trillium fair!
Slip in an adder's tongue, star of gold,
Greenwood flowers for a Queen to hold!

ONE OF THE SHOW PLACES OF LONG ISLAND, that suburban paradise of rich New Yorkers where they love to scatter their money in stately palaces and expensive estates, has a new guest. The magnificent palace erected 22 years ago by Otto Herman Kahn, international banker, head of Kahn, Loeb & Co. This consists of a 100-room French chateau, swimming pool, farm, stables, farm buildings, 18-hole golf course, tennis courts, landing field, etc., comprising in all 441 acres. Here were given great entertainments with leading opera singers, 50 piece orchestras, etc. Otto Kahn died in 1934 and the family found the estate too expensive to be kept up. It was recently sold for a nominal sum to the Sanitation Department of New York City, and will be used as a club house and vacation spot for the thousands of workers employed in the sanitation department of the great city. Cottages will be built for pensioners and all the luxuries of club life will be available to members.

THERE ARE RUMBLINGS DOWN IN LOUISIANA of a big nation—shaking scandal about to burst, all the result, it is said, of "The Kingfish's" grandiose schemes. "The Kingfish," be it known, was one Huey Long, in private life, but who deserted private life to live with and on the public. Huey Long became a successful politician, who after conquering the state of Louisiana, including the city of New Orleans, the home of those bold pirates, the Lafitte Brothers, sought new worlds to conquer and using Washington as a base, began a nation-wide campaign on a bribe platform, his chief plank being "Share the Wealth," holding out bigger and better promises of more than Townsend and others of the ilk which promise something they know they cannot give and fatten on the credulity of old folks including widders.

Huey Long became Governor of Louisiana, and virtual dictator of that state. Those who didn't ride on the Huey Long bandwagon just simply were on the outside looking in and had a hard time of it.

Now Governor Leche is the latest of it. "The Kingfish" to pick but he managed it with the aid of State Troops who laid seige to the City Hall and made the political leaders of that section see the Long light. Huey then secured one of the Seats of the Mighty at Washington, a ringside seat, where he soon made his presence felt, However, like all dictators, Huey Long's reign was comparatively brief for he stopped a bullet in his own State House in Louisiana and departed quickly from the political scene. Now his brother has assumed the toga of the Governor of Louisiana and promises to let in the light on a lot of skulduggery which went on with the blessing and consent of his brother "The Kingfish". The first big bit of scandal to break was the flight of the head of "The Kingfish's" hand made university and his return and incarceration, lacking fifty thousand dollars bail demanded on charges of mishandling the university funds. Incidentally Huey Long provided the university with a first-class football team, regardless of expense, and sent them forth to the gridiron wars in special trains and with brass bands to announce their coming and the glory that was "The Kingfish's". So, from all accounts Louisiana is cracking open, wide open, and the harvest of the great "Share the Wealth" promiser and spender is about to be reaped — and like all corrupt political harvests will be found to consist mostly of noxious weeds.

PAPERS ENDORSE BRITAIN'S STAND

Chamberlain's Address is Warmly Received by All Political Groups

London, July 11—(CP)— Four British newspapers of varying political tendencies today endorsed Prime Minister Chamberlain's warning to Germany that Great Britain will fight at Poland's side if she is victim of aggression.

"The Nazis have been warned once and for all that if they stage a Putsch in Danzig, under whatever guise, they will be throwing out a challenge which the peoples of Britain, France and Poland will take up as one man," the Daily Telegraph (Conservative) said.

The Daily Herald (Labor) gave unqualified approval to the Prime Minister's statement and said editorially:

"Chamberlain spoke clearly yesterday. If Hitler provokes war in Danzig, then he does it with his eyes open."

The Daily Mail (Independent) said:

"It is not Danzig as such that would bring Britain in, but the deadly threat to the existence of Poland which would follow occupation of the city at the mouth of the Vistula."

The diplomatic correspondent of the News Chronicle (Liberal) wrote:

"One certain fact in a very uncertain world is that Hitler will not go to war unless he is able to convince the vast majority of his countrymen that Germany is fighting in self-defence, and the reminder that 'encirclement' is of his own making should weaken that conviction."

Conscription Act in Europe

In view of the adoption of conscription in Great Britain the account which a Paris Correspondent of the "Glasgow Herald" gives of the life of a conscript in France and which every young man has to undergo—a year's service—is of special interest. The writer says:

"The recruits leave their homes in groups and travel free to the garrison towns. On arrival they get the first important severance with home circle. Quite literally they are fitted with uniforms, shirts and boots, and allotted beds in dormitories (chambrees) each holding about twenty men.

"Each is taken away to mix newcomers with men who are half-way through their service. Above all, he has no hooks for towels and toilet-bag and a shelf for the 'paquetage', which consists of a box for the soldier's private possessions, and above the box for his clothing and equipment slacked according to a very rigorous prescription.

"At night a linen curtain can be pulled two or three feet down one side of the bed. This is to protect the sleeper from breathing in unhealthy air which his neighbor has just breathed out.

"The only other furnishing of the 'chambree' is a table and a bench or bench. The walls are decorated according to taste of the local regiment available when the barracks were last repainted.

"Sleeping apart from banal stencilling to ambitious and original designs based on some regimental symbol, or the personal fancy of an artist-recruit who has secured the approval of an officer for his ideas.

"Reveille is at five or six in the morning, according to the season. Washing is mainly done in cold water, since, except for a few modern barracks, hot water has to be begged from the kitchen. Then comes a breakfast of coffee, bread and jam. Work or drill begins some time between 7.30 and 8 a.m. It is interrupted for lunch at 11.30.

Work in the afternoon is over at and broken off at five or five-thirty by the sickman. The soldiers are then free to leave barracks (they cannot do so during the midday meal) and take their seats before the roll-call at 9 p.m. in the 'chambree'—that is to say, they can eat their own army supper or dine on their own in town as they like.

"Saturday afternoon and Sunday are free. Inside barracks they have a canteen and a 'soldiers' club' equipped for ping-pong, billiards, etc., and with a room for reading and writing.

"The state allows a regiment as much a head for each soldier's food, and the result depends on the ability or keeping talent of the officer in charge. Frenchmen usually know more about cooking than Englishmen, and the food is usually reasonably good. The great majority of soldiers put on weight during their service.

"There is a ration of a quarter of a litre of red wine for every soldier with both lunch and dinner. Three packets of cigarettes are supplied free weekly, and others can be bought at the low price of about a penny a package of twenty. The soldier is lodged, fed, laundered, and provided with 'smokes' by the state, but as pay, while a conscript, he receives only about a penny a day. He gets seventeen days leave a year with a free railway ride home.

"The recruits will all be citizens as soon as they return to civil life. Cases of acute unhappiness to be met with naturally occur, but both N.C.O.'s and officers are instructed to do their best to solve them intelligently and 'paternally'."

As to conscription in Great Britain the pay will be is a day although the Labor Party is urging that it should be 2s per day as in the Regular Army.

"All young men alike, between the age of twenty and twenty-one," says the Scotsman, "will be enrolled, under penalty, to make application to be registered at the Military Training Register to be kept by the Minister of Labor.

"If they have conscientious objections to military service they may apply for provisional registration for a special register of conscientious objectors. They will subsequently have to appear before a local tribunal, which may direct their enlistment for non-combatant duties or other performance of work of national importance, or may reject their application for exemption from military service.—From Public Opinion.

Gibraltar the Impregnable

For more than 200 years the Rock has guarded the Straits of Gibraltar but Britain's interest.

Because of its geographical position, it has remained impregnable. The peninsula, running north and south between Spain and Spanish Morocco, is two and three-quarter miles long, three-quarters of a mile wide and 1,400 feet high.

Twelve miles of water lie between it and the African coast, and it is separated from the Spanish mainland by a neutral zone a mile and a half a mile long.

Part of this is known as neutral ground, and the rest serves as a Spanish "Wallachuy," formerly of this city, is spending his vacation here.

The Daily Mail (Independent) said:

"It is not Danzig as such that would bring Britain in, but the deadly threat to the existence of Poland which would follow occupation of the city at the mouth of the Vistula."

The diplomatic correspondent of the News Chronicle (Liberal) wrote:

"One certain fact in a very uncertain world is that Hitler will not go to war unless he is able to convince the vast majority of his countrymen that Germany is fighting in self-defence, and the reminder that 'encirclement' is of his own making should weaken that conviction."

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Sometimes The Heart Doesn't Need Much Rest.

An intelligent, middle-aged man who had been told some years previously that he had heart disease—baking valve—decided to take life much easier and went to bed for an hour each afternoon after returning from his teaching duties. He retired promptly at ten o'clock and remained in bed till 8 o'clock the next morning—ten hours. It became necessary for him to undergo operation for hernia and he felt that with the shock of operation he had better take a six months' rest. And to this rest he settled away, at a health resort, conscientiously believing that his heart needed extra rest following shock of operation. He did not even discuss the matter with his physician. At the health resort he met a friend to whom he told his whole story. The friend pointed out that a heart murmur need not mean a serious condition, and pointed out further his mistake in not consulting his physician before shutting himself up for the life of an invalid. The patient admitted that he did not get out of bed until 8 o'clock and there was no swelling of the feet. The friend advised that he should have his heart examined.

A heart examination revealed the heart murmur but not the slightest enlargement of the heart. He was able to go up and down 20 steps without night, the Ontario Premier said at St. Thomas the provincial government would have nothing to do with the scheme. He accused the Dominion government and particularly Mr. Rogers of trying to induce a wave of spending in the province virtually on the eve of an election.

PREMIER HEPBURN

The special arrangement was offered after the Ontario government had said it was not in a position to proceed with undertakings under the original scheme which provided that the Dominion and the Province would split labor costs on such works as to increase employment, if the municipalities paid for materials and supervision costs.

Eliminate Provision

The statement from the Ministers' office said Mr. Rogers had written the Ontario government offering to eliminate the provision for a contribution from the provincial government and instead, to make provision for the Dominion government to pass on its own contribution through the Provincial government to the municipalities.

Hope that the Provincial government would approve the proposal expressed in the statement which said municipalities could then take advantage of the Dominion government's contribution of 50 per cent of the direct labor cost where these municipalities can meet the cost of materials, supervision and 50 per cent of the direct labor costs out of their own funds."

Further Comment

(In commenting further on the offer, Hepburn said that the municipalities were permitted to accept the Rogers' program, we soon would have them coming to us with tin cups in their hands asking for provincial help." From the good of the province the municipalities and the taxpayers would block the move.

(The Ontario member charged that in the past, in any three-cornered scheme involving public works, the Ontario government had been "ultimately left holding the bag" after the Dominion had withdrawn and the municipalities found themselves incapable of proceeding.)

If you are paying for Electricity or Gas---

THIS GOVERNMENT SEAL ON METERS is for your protection

THE Dominion of Canada was the first country in the world to adopt a complete system of national inspection and control of electricity and gas meters used for establishing a charge.

The division of government that pioneered this service is the Electricity and Gas Inspection Branch of the Department of Trade and Commerce. The act authorizing inspection and control came into effect for gas, in 1875; and for electricity, in 1894.

APPROVED — INSPECTED — SEALED!

The Electricity and Gas Inspection Acts provide that, before being installed for the purpose of establishing a charge, each type of meter must be first approved. Then every meter must be tested for accuracy and upon passing tests shall be sealed by the government so that it cannot be opened or tampered with. After six years in service every meter must be re-inspected and re-sealed.

METER INSPECTION FROM COAST TO COAST

There are 20 offices maintained throughout Canada by the Government for the Electricity and Gas Inspection Service. These offices are supported by a main laboratory at Ottawa and two divisional laboratories in Winnipeg and Vancouver, also by a complete engineering service at Toronto for the design, construction and erection of equipment. Approximately 100 inspectors are necessary to adequately service every part of Canada where meters are used.

Every meter in use must have the government seal. This red wax seal is the guarantee of the Department of Trade and Commerce that the meter was approved as to type; inspected for accuracy, then closed and sealed. No meter can be installed until inspected by a government official and meters must be re-tested every six years to verify their accuracy. You may seldom see this seal on your meter, but it is there as the symbol of a protective and progressive service.

CREVIER—ANDERSON

Queensboro, (Special) — St. Henry's Church, Queensboro, was the scene of a pretty wedding on Saturday morning, July 8th, at nine o'clock, when Annie Mary Anderson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Anderson of Pine-View, became the bride of Theodore Crevier of Ottawa.

The bride, who was prettily attired in a pale blue sheer dress made in floor length, carried a bouquet of mixed flowers. She also wore a pink hat.

Nuptial Mass was celebrated by Rev. T. D. Nyland of Madoc. The Bridal Chorus was played by the organist, Mrs. Frank Barry and the choir sang "On This Day O Beautiful Mother" and "O Salutaris".

The happy couple were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Nell Johnson of Harold.

FRIENDS HONOR MADOC COUPLE

Mr. and Mrs. James Miller Are Recipients of Many Lovely Gifts

Madoc — On Tuesday evening about one hundred and twenty-five friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Miller, Madoc, to celebrate the recent marriage of their son, James, to Miss Marjorie Blakely.

The evening was warm and when not dancing the guests spent their time on the lawn. About eleven o'clock Mr. Arnold Gardiner called for order and Miss Mary McCoy read the following address:

Dear Marjorie and Jim:

On behalf of your friends and neighbors and those who attended the charivari, we feel that some word should be said at this time and we are sure that we only echo the feeling in the hearts of all when we say that we wish you every thing that is fine and for the best. May you long enjoy happiness and prosperity and as a slight token of esteem in which you are both held we ask you to accept this gift from the charivari party as well as those from the friends and neighbors and may you ever remember the donors when you have occasion to use them.

Signed on behalf of the community:

Gordon McCoy,
Charlie Gilchrist,
Arnold Gasbel.

The presents were numerous and beautiful, as well as useful, the charivari party's gift being an inlaid end table.

Mr. and Mrs. Miller thanked everyone for their kindness and after lunch dancing and visiting continued.

On Saturday afternoon Mrs. Orrie Reid entertained about twenty girl friends in honor of Mrs. James Miller, a recent bride. The house was beautifully decorated with roses and canterbury bells and the afternoon was spent in games and contests. Before lunch was served little Gerald Reid presented a carriage decorated in pink and white and was filled with gifts, while Miss Jean Blakely read the accompanying address:

Mrs. James A. Miller,
Madoc,
Dear Marjorie:

We, some of whom have been your girlhood friends, and others who are your new neighbors, have gathered here today to honor you on your recent marriage.

We from your old neighborhood are sorry to lose you, but we are comforted by the fact that you will not be far from us.

You have been a great help among us and we know you will be a real helpmate for Jim. We, your neighbors, who are here, extend to you a hearty welcome and sincerely ask you on your choice of a husband.

Everyone here joins in wishing you and Jim a long and happy married life. Please accept these gifts, not for their value, but for the love with which they are given.

Signed by your girl friends gathered here.

Shortly lunch was then served with the forks and spoons decorated with pink bows. The bride thanked her friends and her hostess.

Once your fruit is ready you can complete a whole batch of jam and jelly in only 15 minutes!

2 IT'S THE EASIEST WAY
With Certo you give only a one-minute to two-minute full rolling boil for jam . . . for jelly only a half-minute to a minute!

3 AND THE MOST ECONOMICAL
You get about half again more jam or jelly from the same amount of fruit! That's because practically none of the juice can boil away in such a very short boil.

4 YOU GET BETTER TASTE— BRIGHTER COLOUR

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

He Doesn't Trust Anyone

Dear Miss Fairfax:

A certain young man of my acquaintance is very cynical and distrusts everyone. He doesn't particularly care about anyone or anything, but is attracted by cheaper things. He really has some fine traits underneath this attitude, which he seldom shows. I sort of feel myself becoming interested in this boy, but as his only concern is to enjoy himself at another one's else expense, I don't get anywhere with him. I would like to get him to change his attitude and see some of the worthwhile things in life. Can you give me any suggestions? Thanks.

Cecile

It looks to me as if this young man is posing, and perhaps he's been either spoiled by other women. It would be all right for you to try to change his attitude and see some of the worthwhile things in life. But don't you think he might misjudge you and think your interest is due to more than plain "friendship" him?

If he's interested in any particular line of work, you might encourage him to take it up more seriously. A genuine interest has been known to work miracles in a self-centered character.

But I wish you had told me more about those "fine traits". He really can't be a man of 40 years of age, and for the first time in love. However, they've married. I love her so much that I would give my life for her.

She tells me she loves me the same way, but insists she must be true to her husband. He knows of our affair, but refuses to give her a divorce. Life isn't worth living for either of us. Is there anything we can do?

R. E. M.

If you were a young man, or she a young girl, I might feel differently about this affair. But when you tell me you're 45, I feel like telling you, if I may, that it is time you seem to be dramatizing your attachment to this woman.

To be candid, isn't it only that you enjoy the romance of the situation? And what would you do if she came to you and said that she's willing to marry you at once, letting you assume all the risks of taking her as your wife? Of course we know there would be risks. Would you still love her as much as you say you do? And would you go on with the romance?

This married woman says she must be true to her husband, although she loves you. The husband won't give her a divorce. It isn't a question of "is there anything we can do?" She has already decided to be loyal; there's nothing for you to do but to quit.

Parents Object to Their Marriage

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've been going with a certain young man who has been working for his father. He wanted to get married, and when his parents found out about it, they asked him to give me up and when he refused, his dad just discharged him, so that now he is out of work. So far as I know they have no objection to me as an individual, but they do not want him to marry now or in the future.

Do you think it is fair for parents to come to a marriage where both young people are so much in love, and so well suited to each other?

Peg

You say his parents have no objection to me as an individual, but they do not want him to marry now or in the future." I'm afraid your fiance, not wishing to hurt your feelings, has not told you the reason for his parents objecting to this marriage.

As the point involves the young man's parents, the utmost delicacy and tact will be required in speaking of them. At the same time, the question is, why do they object to your marrying each other?

If you can't find out anything through him, you might try to find the answer through a mutual friend. After that the choice open to you is to marry a young man out of a job. That's hardly advisable especially when the parents are against the union.

I suggest you wait for about six months, and do not see the young man as often as heretofore. In that way, he might bring his parents around to a favorable decision, and if his dad will give him back his job,

INSTITUTE MEETINGS

KINGSTON ROAD W.A.

At the Cottage called "Maple Inn" July the 5th was a lovely day,
For so it seemed to me,
For the W.A. of the Kingston Road
Were invited out to tea.
Cars were furnished, some gentlemen came,
With members quite a few,
They journeyed over to Consecon To the cottage of Mrs. La Rue.
Everyone sang the theme song
Rev. Farnsworth led in prayer
Last meeting minutes were read and approved
Out in the open air.
Tho' the lake was cool, the day was hot,
And nobody wanted to sing.
So the meeting was sort of a picnic type
At the cottage called "Maple Inn".
After the business discussion was o'er
And tea time had come around,
Surrounding a table laden with eats
Everyone there could be found.
Sandwiches, tarts, cookies and cake,
And then there were pickles thrown in.
And everyone there had an appetite
At the cottage called "Maple Inn".
Then Mrs. La Rue as she so often does,
Had a pleasant surprise in store,
When she started serving straw berries
Strawberries and ice-cream galore
Mr. and Mrs. La Rue received
Thanks from the W.A.
For the privilege of spending the afternoon.
In such a pleasant way.
When the evening was ushered in,
The time of day came all too soon,
At the cottage called "Maple Inn".

SHANNONVILLE W.M.S.

The monthly meeting of the W.M.S. of Shannonville United Church was held at the home of Mrs. Sam Elliott on Thursday afternoon, July 6th, with Mrs. Chas. Liddle, group leader, in charge and Mrs. Harvey Mishler presiding at the piano. After the opening hymn all joined in repeating the Lord's prayer, which was called by the secretary, some of the members responding with a sentence prayer. There were three visitors and four children present. Mrs. (Rev.) Craig took charge of the business in the absence of the president. Minutes of the last meeting were read by the secretary and adopted. Mrs. Craig read a letter regarding a conference to be held in Bridge Street church on Wednesday, September 20th, with afternoon and evening sessions. Secretary for the layette was distributed. Mrs. Frank Dowtaler gave a reading, "Who is my Neighbor?" Mrs. Harry Murphy gave the temperance reading, showing good progress along this line in many places including Indian and Japan. After singing another hymn Mrs. Saul MacFarlane gave a reading entitled "Readers." Papers prepared by Mrs. W. S. Dies on the next chapter of the Study Book were read by Mrs. Craig, Mrs. C. Liddle, Mrs. H. Sheffer, Mrs. Stanley MacDonald and Mrs. Harry Murphy. After the closing hymn all repeated the Mizpah benediction. Attendance 26, collection $3.10 and for flower fund $1.00.

A delightful time was enjoyed, while the hostess and her assistants served refreshments. The thanks of all present are due Mrs. Elliott for her hospitality.

Much regret was expressed that one of the members who was present at the meeting in June was confined to the hospital and the best wishes of the group were extended to Mrs. George Pringle for a very speedy recovery.

IVANHOE WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

The July meeting of the Ivanhoe Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Arthur Wood with an attendance of forty-three members. The meeting was opened with the Institute Ode, followed by the Lord's Prayer. Minutes of the June meeting were read and approved. The short course to be taken in October was changed from "The Use of Commercial Patterns" to "Planning and Preparing Meals." It was decided that another contest be held, the losing side to put on the program for the January meeting. Mrs. Palmer is leader for north, and Mrs. S. Doman for the South. An interesting talk on the month (done in the seat of good government) was given by Mrs. F. Palmer.

Mrs. W. J. Tanner gave a reading, "The House by the Side of the Road." Four little girls, Irene Fleming, Kathryne Duggan, Jean Fleming and Gertrude Williamson very sweetly sang the old favorite hymn, "Long, Long Ago."

Miss Bessie Fleming entertained the members with a reading, "Only the Best Beautiful Will Ever Made" followed by a poem, "Getting Stung by a Bumble Bee" by Mrs. Wickens. Mrs. Will Shaw spoke regarding the new Institute magazine, and received several subscriptions for same. Mrs. Milton Shaw played and sang "Sing me a Song of the Sunny South."

The meeting closed by singing the National Anthem. A dainty lunch was served by the hostess and her assistants.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

DEPORTED FOR "SNUB"

"Hitler has taken my Germany, I didn't want to be his guest," said pretty Ellen Schwennsen, ABOVE, German actress, on being questioned about her refusal to accept an invitation to a party sent to her by Adolf Hitler, and later refusing to accept command from the Reich Film Chamber. Exile was the punishment meted out for these "snubs" and Miss Schwennske, an Aryan, is taking evil pages to become a citizen of United States.

"Won't You Come to Visit Us?" — Won't you come to visit us? is one of the happy theme-songs of these vacation days. Let's consider some of the amenities of the invitation that the hostess—that is, the ideal hostess—sends.

First, and very important, it is the mother of the family (or, if there is no mother, whoever is the hostess of the home) who must send the invitation to a guest to spend a week-end or longer in the house of that family. That is, we must never a direct invitation from the hostess. An indirect invitation from some member of the family is not enough. For instance a girl should never go to visit at a man's home, even if he is the fiance, without an invitation from his mother, or whoever is the hostess of his home. If this direct invitation seems not to be forthcoming, it is simple enough for her to say, graciously, "I would love to go Tom. If your mother would be so kind as to write me that she would like to have me come; that it would be convenient for her."

The invitation written by the hostess, which will, of course, register hospitality, should also be definite. The invitation, besides naming the date, tells the approximate hour when the guests are expected to arrive. Often a time table is enclosed in the letter, with the hostess's train or choice of trains marked. Information is given as to when and where the guests will be met at the depot if coming by car, the best route is explained. "What kind of clothes shall I take?" This is one of the first problems to solve when we receive an invitation to visit, especially when it is the first visit we are making to this particular house. A thoughtful hostess realizes this, and gives us, in her invitation, an idea of what we will be expected to do, and therefore what kind of clothes we will need.

"We're going to the dance at the Country Club . . . It's one of the special dances of the season . . . on Saturday evening, and a dear friend of ours has invited you and Tom to come with us to a dinner party before the dance at their house on Friday evening, and on Saturday morning we are having some friends in a teatime to meet you and Tom". This certainly gives us the cue to take some dress-up clothes! Or, "We live a very simple, back-to-nature life here . . . no bring walking-clothes and walking-shoes. No evening clothes . . . they aren't done here." Such information leads us to pack quite different types of clothes. Your hostess may also tell you about swimming suits, golf clubs, tennis racket, riding clothes.

Some people mistakenly think that it is the duty for a hostess to tell a guest the length of time for which the guest is invited. It is far from rude; it is indeed the essence of politeness. For with this definite information, both hostess and guest make plans accordingly to be time set, and there need be no awkward, or misunderstanding. "I hope that you can plan to come on Thursday, July twentieth, and be with us for a week. There is an excellent express train from here at four o'clock."

When the invitation is for a week-end (and such a short period is a "week-end"!) the hostess might write, "Do if possible, plan to come on the 4:30 train from the city on Friday at four-thirty, and we will meet you at the station here. And do plan, too, to stay with us until Monday morning. There is an early Monday morning train that the men here take to get to their offices at nine-thirty."

Good Manners

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

Is it proper for the hostess wear a hat when she is having a bridge luncheon at one o'clock at a public place such as a road-side inn or a hotel? W.

Yes.

TORSO VICTIM, SCENE OF SLAYING

With the confession of Frank Dolezel, 52, to slaying and dismembering Mrs. Florence Pollik, murder victims, police officials renewed efforts to solve the other 11 cases. He smiled, the deep corners of his mouth falling into square shadows. "You don't wish to accept any favour from me, as I very well know; but this one may sound to you rather like asking one for myself. I want to urge you to withdraw the suit you're bringing against me."

He waited, but Catherine said no word, simply stood watching him gravely, as if the study of his face would show her how best to defend his interests. She was puzzled, and waiting for a clue to guide her, but his clairvoyance had not developed sufficiently for him to guess so much.

"Don't imagine, Mrs. Court, that any inconvenience you can cause me will prevent me from doing in the end anything I wish to do with Court Brandon. Perhaps I should have made it plain at our first interview. At least, I've been thinking since that I may have given you a wrong impression of my intentions, and—shall we say, led you into an unwise optimism? So I think I should tell you here and now, that nothing is going to stop me, nothing and no one—not even you. You can probably make yourself very inconvenient, and cost me a lot of money. Don't imagine that you'll stop me, though. What I planned to do, I will do. I thought it only fair to make that clear to you."

"Thank you," said Catherine, her eyes still intense upon his face. "I understand."

"I wonder if you do? It seems to me we were born to misunderstand each other."

He pondered a moment, watching the level breath ebb and flow. Were dogs'? Or her breast?

"I was very angry, Mrs. Court, when I got the notice of your action. But now I'm simply asking you, for you're own sake, to withdraw. Not because I want my own way made plain; but because I don't want such gallantry as yours to waste itself where it cannot possibly be of any effect. It can't, you know. Won't you reconsider your decision? I'll treat your claim to the last as proved, and pay you for it at your own price, if you'll drop this action. In the end, believe me, the result will be the same."

He met her eyes, and each saw the other smile, not in friendliness, perhaps, but at least in respect. "Yes," he said slowly, and with some wonder. "I think you pay me the compliment of believing that. Well, what do you say?"

Catherine drew a long breath, and said steadily: "I refuse. But you must believe, in return, that I appreciate this warning—"

"This appeal."

"If you like, this appeal—very much; but I am no more to be stopped, Mr. Probert, than you are. I still say that either you will drive me out of Court Brandon, or else I will do as much for you. I think you will understand that attitude, without any apology from me."

"Yes," said Adam gently, "I understand it very well. I'm sorry you won't take my advice; but since you won't—and I don't pretend that I ever had much hope you would—well, I shall treat you, Mrs. Court, as I should like to be treated in your place. That is, as an opponent worthy of respect and steel. I shall use every ounce of influence I possess to move the case forward into the Michaelmas term; and if I can do it, I shall smash your case to pieces under you. There'll be no half measures on either side. We understand each other now."

The amazing man—he would always, she thought, be that to her —held out his hand, and she took it as frankly as it was offered. The bewildering woman—and he was sure she would always find some new way of baffling him—said warmly:

"Thank you, Mr. Probert, for the finest compliment anyone has ever paid me. I can't think of any other man who could offer me such a bouquet.

She could not, of course, know that she was Caterina Sforza, the virago, the equal of a man! But there was gone from the room and from the house, she still pondered in a sort of grateful uneasiness the sudden approach they had made to each other. Not even Perry, coming cautiously to find and question her, could quite erase the memory of Adam Probert's smiling face from Catherine's eyes.

CHAPTER XI

AN INTRUDER IN EDEN

The warning that the case might be pushed forward into the Michaelmas term had moved Catherine to call up Massingham, and pass on the hint to him. He had not much comfort to offer her on that score. He promised to hold back for as long as he could, and with that she had to be content.

The fight was on, and she knew it, and was glad of it. It was flattering to know that she was taken seriously, and by so formidable a man.

Mrs. Dunstan had found for her, by luck rather than judgment, not the letter which had excited her first by its possibilities, but the one which followed it, giving the same explanation of the Holly Lane joke which Mr. Hart had given. Her chances seemed instantly doubled: it was as if Geoffrey's ghost fought beside her.

She took this letter, and the note of agreement on which her claim mainly rested, to Stanchester with her on a day towards the end of September, a day of rain and scudding wind, which rustled the skirts of her plain blue raincoat as she went.

She was unhappy, and did not know why. It was perhaps nothing more than the age-old sorrow that autumn had come to despoil her green altars. But she knew only that the little row, red roofs below, the dim meadows, jetting smoke now from several chimneys, had ceased to be the mainspring of her trouble, and were only the scars of some deeper and more primeval sickness with which her soul was stricken.

She looked at them, and pondered distantly upon the human beings who dwelt under them, who were tending the ravaged soil into small, square gardens, and setting up brave, flaunting curtains at the bay-windows, and building fires in compact kitchen ranges where once half lims trees had grown as proud and lovely as fairy women, filled with an overwhelming fragrance of blossom, and an unceasing song of bees. Without rest or release she hated them, the houses and their creator. There was no power in her great enough to overcome that hate.

The first two houses, the block nearest her own glade, had been occupied for more than a fortnight ,the next two for some ten days; and now more tenants were moving in with almost every day, as the workmen withdrew themselves from house after house; and here and there round the little gardens low fences were springing up, and here and there prams were appearing under the parlour windows, and ambitious attempts were being made to level the soil for the laying of lawns. Here and there, as she passed, she heard the restless wireless for ever playing dance music, monotonous and out of place, having no relationship to the valley, speaking no language she or her trees or rivers could understand.

All of it good and useful, without doubt, but all of it alien in Court Brandon. It was cruelty to ask either of these elements to accept the other, It was demanding the impossible.

At the crossroads she hesitated. She had plenty of time in which to reach the station before her train was due; and she felt a painful curiosity to see closely the true centre of Adam Probert's Eden. She turned to the right, therefore, along the lane, and walked through the centre of the new garden city. The houses, lodged as houses, were not bad-looking; but it was the trade of such contractors to make their houses presentable.

She glanced at the first house as she passed. The curtains at the bay window were green and fresh, and there was a pram upon the gravel beneath the sill, shining in virgin newness. The hood was half raised to keep off the wind, though it was not yet cold; but the drifts of wind were growing erratic now and blowing drops of rain inward under the sheltering jut of the window; and even as Catherine passed, the mother was hurrying out from the front door to take baby and pram into the house. She stood on one foot to kick off the brake, a slim little creature, braced against the rough breeze with straight hair streaming over her face; tossed her head to free her eyes, and was just in time to see Catherine's slender, erect back, in the plain blue waterproof, receding in the direction of the station.

She launched a shout after her, in the high, swift, thin voice which belongs to the very by right:

"Oh, nurse! Just a minute! Nurse Hayes!" In the undulating tones which carry against wind.

Catherine heard, and knew that the call could not be meant for her; but she turned obediently, none the less, for apart from herself the stretch of road ahead was empty. The little woman came up, panting.

"Oh, my word, nurse, you gave me a start! You are early today! I nearly—" She stopped, her smile fading blankly at sight of Catherine's unfamiliar face. She stammered: "Oh, I'm very sorry. I've made a mistake. I took you for Nurse Hayes! I'm that sorry I've bothered you. See, it's the coat —she always wears a coat like yours—and she comes to me every Tuesday, on her way to the station—"

"Yes," said Catherine, smiling, "I know Nurse Hayes quite well She attends a clinic in the town hall at Stanchester on Tuesdays. I don't wonder you made the mistake; we're much of a build."

"You are, too!" agreed the girl, smiling in response. "I never knew you till you turned around. Only, you see, I was looking out for Nurse Hayes, because she said if I wanted any errand done in town —something I wouldn't want to post, you know—she'd do it for me when she goes Tuesdays."

"And there is something?" said Catherine.

The girl flushed; and in sober truth she was no more than a girl, perhaps twenty or twenty-one years old, and small and thin even for that, with thin pale arms like a child's, and a skin whiter than even town life justified.

"Well, I suspect I shall see Nurse come along just now," she said, a shade nervously.

"But could I do it for you? Just in case? I daresay you know of me; my name's Court—Catherine Court. I'm going into town myself, and I'd be glad to get anything you want."

"Oh, but I couldn't let you," said the girl startled. "I'm not asking it of you, Mrs. Court, but after calling you back this way, too—oh, no, I couldn't really."

"But, please, I'd like to help. What is it, Nurse Hayes is to do?"

"Well, if you're sure you don't mind, and the thing's quite simple and ihly brightening, "and it won't be no trouble—"

"Not an atom! I shall have all day."

"Well, it was just some stuff I got for a frock for my little girl, and I was going to send it to my mother to make up. She's a very good with cutting out, my mother is, and she's got the time for it. Would you come inside for a moment, while I fetch the stuff? I shan't be making you miss a train, I shall I?"

Catherine went in, on her light, quick heels. It was the strangest thing that she should be there, in one of Adam's houses, talking to one of Adam's tenants, while the letter and note which were to help to build a dam across his path burned in her handbag. She was brought, with shy pride, into a parlour not so small as she had expected, where a fire burned merrily in a low grate. The furniture was sparse, and cheap, but not to without taste, and there were green loose covers like curtains, perhaps from the hand of the mother in Stanchester, and quite a few books.

"Nice, isn't it?" said the girl, eager and shy at her shoulder. "I mean the place. But there, you've lived in it all your life, I daresay, now you're used to it. I'd never been here till we moved in, and I do that appreciate it, didn't know what to expect, but Harry said I should like it when I got here; and I do, too, I wouldn't go back to the town now, not for anything. Did you ever see anything so lovely as all those trees? All the colours of the rainbow!" And on that note, on that strange echo, she chose to vanish into the back part of the house in search of the material for her baby's frock, leaving Catherine suddenly at bay, as if for the first time she had realised how great was her adversary.

In a minute or two she was back, with a little roll of tissue paper in her hand, which she unrolled to show an edge of cheap silk, a pale blue ground sprigged with deeper blue flowers.

"That's it! Isn't it pretty? I didn't ought to buy silk really, and I don't like babies dressed up too much, but this was a present from Hardy's sale, and I couldn't help buying it, it did look so pretty. Baby's always dressed for best, nearly. She's asleep now, but you can see her." She turned down the corner with a stealthy hand, and Catherine saw a baby, lying upon pillows as white as milk, herself as scrupulously kept, and almost as blanched, a dark-haired little creature, well-formed, but fragile, with her flats doubled under her chin. It struck her that something in this house, something in this household, was strangely tragic.

She said, steadily enough, but in a sudden panic of the soul: "I'm afraid I must hurry off now, or I really shall miss the train. Where am I to take this?"

"Well, I've just written it down for you. I mislaid it's a bit out of the city part, and perhaps not too easy to find. Nurse Hayes worked quite close, you see. Perhaps I didn't ought to let you bother—"

"Oh, of course!" said Catherine, smiling as she took the slip of paper. "I shall find the place all right, Mrs.—"

"Dunning's my name — Nancy Dunning. Thank you ever so much, Mrs. Court."

The door closed upon Catherine slowly, almost reluctantly. She walked on between the peopled houses, between the few which stood finished but still empty, between the many which were still in the hands of the armies of bricklayers, and plasterers, and painters, and carpenters; and continually her eyes went from their raw newness which so deeply agonised her, to the tiny packet she carried in her hand and back again.

What or who were they, these people, Mrs. Dunning and her kin? Catherine had seen the humble parlour before, among pottery workers, the cosiness and glistening whiteness of china and clay. There were potteries on the north side of Stanchester, among the poorer quarters; what people would call the slums. Was that where Mrs. Dunning had got her pallid face? Then perhaps she had married well, for the parlour houses with bay windows were not, as a rule, for kiln labourers.

Lost in her haze, she did not glance at the store—shed as it loomed wet and shining between the houses, nor the compact shape of Kenworth's office tucked under its side, But Wdam and Kenworth, standing within at the window, saw her pass.

HAIG TO FORE

Walter Hagen Up With Winners Played in First Meet in 1916

(By Bill White Associated Press Sports Writer).

New York, July 11 (AP)—Like the man who bought a leaky boat, somebody is liable to wind up this week with a professional golfers' association title recognized only by the P.G.A. President, George Jacobus.

As the 64 survivors of 36 holes of qualifying medal play settle down to the routine business of playing a golf championship today it looked as though only Jacobus would hail the Tournament winner as "the new champion."

Ranged solidly against Jacobus for his election to let Denny Shute, twice winner and late-dues-player enter the match play rounds was a majority of the executive committee. Their spokesman is Secretary Tom Walsh of Chicago, who claims now the title is a mockery.

"It's an illegal championship," he maintains, while making threats of getting a court order to stop play.

Forced to Let Shute Play

Late yesterday the executive committee, forced to let Shute play through the qualifying rounds by threat of a player strike, in which the leading talent of the country was involved, once again insisted he wasn't eligible for match play because dedined to override the committee and take his chances on the "revolution"—as some of his critics called his sensational move—in order to save the tournament.

Hollow or not, the old trudging, cart-wheeling Shuffle Foot was in the shadow of the Tryion and peripheries were grimly intent on winning what amounts to the second most important tournament in the United States.

Denny Shute himself was matched with Ted Longhurst of Pittsburgh. Other featured pairings in this morning's first 18 hole round pitted Walter Hagen against Tony Manero, Billy Burke against Jim Ferrie and defending champion Paul Runyan against veteran Morin Dutra.

Haig Grubs Headlines

It was the Haig, omyi contestant in this year's tournament who also played in the first P.G.A. meet back in 1916, who grabbed what grubbing headlines there were out of the second day's qualifying play. Using a lead-footed putter, he creaked around the Pomonok Country Club course's front nine in 31, best medal score of the day.

Hagen and Gene Sarazen, with 144 and 140, respectively, were well up among the qualifiers. The leaders in a day of terrific sub-par scoring, were Ben Hogan and Dutch Harrison, both playing in the P.G.A. for the first time, and Ky LaFoon and Emerick Kosak. They also posted 138's, six under par for the 36 holes.

Football Game Won by Deloro By 4-1 Count

Marmora, July 10 — Gallantly playing with only ten men, Independents proved good opposition for the first half of their Association football fixture at Deloro on Saturday afternoon though they lost by the score of 4-1. Deloro showed aggressive tactics with Henwood being conspicuous and testing O'Neill with two good shots in quick succession. Hart broke away but stumbled when play looked the materializing into a score. As for the next five minutes the shelters sandwiched in press. Hart and Cousins missed good openings. Play hovered around midfield when Henwood sending in a stiff shot missed the net by inches. Brooks at this other end, kicked high. A brilliant movement executed by Keith and Henwood on the right wing resulted in the former outwitting O'Neill, only to end miserably in which Keith and Henwood took play into Deloro's goal region, and Elliott and Knowles stood out for Deloro in attack was frustrated with Knowles just missing with a good shot and O'Neill saving pressure at the other end as he put out to clear with a good fast drive. The rushes however, lacked force, Chamberlain made good saves as Brooks and other hone forwards threatened. The Independents' goal was assailed later by Knowles and Caskey but the last named and following a short respite Bradley and Knowles tried hard to equalize. At the other end O'Neill is stopping a drive from Henwood conceded a corner. The ball went to Henwood who was in a favorable position but kicked a little high. Half time arrived with Independents leading by one goal to nothing. The positions of four Deloro players were changed as play resumed and Deloro becoming aggressive kept the Peterboro boys on their toes. Brooks shot high. A few minutes later Hart sent in a shot for Brooks to score off the rebound. Three minutes later Deloro got his team one up with a successful low slanting shot which gave the Peterboro goalkeeper no chance. Brooks again scored on receiving from a corner, nicely taken by Henwood. Sproule sent in a fine shot to miss by a few inches. Brooks

Toronto officials of the lodge said for several years there was a steady decline in the number of paraders in Ontario but there has been a comeback and the numbers this year likely will top previous marks.

Orangemen from Wellington, Dufferin, Grey and Perth counties will gather at Arthur, Ont., where an Orange celebration has not been held since 1922. Prizes will be presented to the member with the longest number bf years in the order marching in the parade, to the best-dressed lodge, the lodge coming the furthest and to the best fifer and best drummer.

St. Thomas in Fereground

St. Thomas will welcome Orangemen from Essex, Kent, Oxford, Middlesex and Elgin counties. J. W. Carson, Deputy Grand Master of Ontario West, will be a principal speaker.

Owen Sound Orangemen have completed preparations for the most largest July 12th celebration there in many years. A sports program will be held in the afternoon. Officials expect it will be the largest celebration north of Toronto.

Hamilton lodges will participate in the Norfolk County celebration at Simcoe tomorrow and next Saturday will stage their own parade at Hamilton with nearly 10,000 expected from Brant, Halidmand, Norfolk, Wentworth, Waterloo, Wentworth and York counties and Toronto.

Other big parades will be held at Barrie and Preston while at the other end of the province Grandmen of Fort William and Port Arthur plan a parade at Fort William.

T. J. McCall of Belleville Lodge will lead some 500 paraders here playing the role of King William on a white charger. The Fort William pipe band and the Orange drum and fife band will participate.

Shore to Play Only Home Games With the Bruins

Boston, July 11 (AP)—Having completed a satisfactory arrangement with Manager Art Ross, Eddie Shore, the all-star defenceman, began to clean up today the details which remain before he acquires sole possession of the Springfield Club in the International-American Hockey League.

Current Offerings at Belleville Theatres

Advance Information on Screen Offerings Supplied by Theatre Managers.

AT THE BELLE
"JUAREZ"

The local premiere of Warner Bros. magnificent historical drama, the long awaited "Juarez," starring Paul Muni and Bette Davis, is now being held at the Belle Theatre. The spectacular production, which recently made its world debut in New York at the Strand Theatre, has already been hailed by the critics as the greatest picture of all time.

In addition to being headed by the actor and actress who are generally acknowledged to be the foremost screen artists of their time the cast includes a host of other film notables, such as Brian Aherne, Claude Rains, John Garfield, Donald Crisp, Joseph Calleia, Gale Sondergaard, Gilbert Roland, Henry O'Neill, Harry Davenport, Montague Love and Monte Blue.

Conceived and executed on a scope never before attempted by Warner Bros., the picture tells a story that is at once powerful drama and authentic history, playing against a rich panorama of backgrounds, ranging from imperial palaces to poor peon huts.

While it concerns events that were on the surface, only of importance to the fighting Mexican republic, the significance of these happenings was also important in the history of the United States, for they constitute the story of the only large-scale attempt of a European power to dispand the Monroe Doctrine. In the light of what is going on in the world today, this story has also a distinct topical interest.

The screen play, which was written by John Huston, Wolfgang Reinhardt, Aeneie, and Wolf-gang Reinhardt, is based largely on original historical research as well as a stage play by Franz Werfel and a historical novel by Bertita Harding.

It relates the attempt of Napoleon III of France to end the life of the Mexican republic by placing a puppet emperor on its throne, in spite of the tragic fate of Napoleon's hapless tool, Maximilian von Habsburg, and his beautiful consort, Carlota, who has passed into history as "the spirinaly, of the brave and successful fight of the Mexican president, Benito Pablo Juarez, born a humble Zapotecan Indian, to rescue his country from the hands of the imperialistic despoilers.

Muni portrays Juarez, Miss Davis is Carlota and Aherne is Maximilian.

The production was directed by William Dieterle, who directed the screen's most previous starring vehicles, "The Story of Louis Pasteur" and "The Life of Emile Zola," and a further guarantee of quality is the fact that the associate producer was Henry Blanke, who formed, in that capacity, an unbeatable triumvirate with Muni and Dieterle on the same two pictures.

AT THE McCARTHY
"MADE FOR EACH OTHER"

A new Carole Lombard, co-starred with popular James Stewart, is the cast of David O. Selznick's "Made For Each Other", which is now playing at the McCarthy Theatre.

Miss Lombard has forsaken the comedy vocabulary that has made her famous to give a heart-rending dramatic performance in this comedy-drama of young married folks, and when Jimmy Stewart as co-star makes this picture an occasion that is not to be missed by the discriminating film-goer.

The story, adapted by Jo Swerling, tells of the trials and tribulations that beset the married life of Johnny and Jane Mason, played by Miss Lombard and James Stewart, John is a promising junior executive in a New York law firm, but is obliged to struggle along on a meager salary. His mother (Lucile Watson) comes to live with them, and further complicates his life with Jane by her continual harping and complaining.

When, however, a son is born to Jane and Johnny, they forget their troubles in the joy of their baby's coming. Even this joy is destined not to last long. On New Year's Eve the child comes down with pneumonia, and to save its life a serum must be flown from Salt Lake City. This thrilling race against death forms the climax of the picture, and by the time the child recovers the differences in the Mason household have been sufficiently ironed out to allow Jane and Johnny to start off on their long delayed honeymoon.

Charles Coburn, as Johnny's crotchety employer, and Ruth Weston, as the scheming Eunice Douglittle, add their fine characterizations to the work of the principals. John Cromwell has directed the picture in such a way as to combine all the elements to their best advantage, and has turned out a picture that moves smoothly and convincingly throughout.

"Made For Each Other," which is released through United Artists, is something new and excellent in screen entertainment.

Also on the screen Vaudeville

In addition to the feature presentation, a clever and very pleasing screen vaudeville subject and an all-star musical comedy featurette entitled "Wardrobe Girl" complete an excellent two-hour picture.

SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK

JIM'S LESSON

By JOE SIMON

Mariana's heart was heavy. A shadow lay over the little cottage where she and Jim and their brood lived. Jim one was used to this strange Mariana with a heavy heart, least of all the four chubby little ones who followed her about all day.

Mariana usually bubbled over with good cheer and health and delectable pastries.

She knew the good, old-fashioned stomach route to a man's heart and her table was always loaded with good things.

It followed naturally that Mariana was fat, but she spent no time lamenting, nor any short dieting.

The loss of her figure to her was simply the relatively small cost of wifehood and motherhood, and she never even thought of dieting.

She had known too many irritable women who lived on lettuce and unsweetened coffee.

"As long as Jim likes me I should worry," said Mariana, "I have to cook good things for him and the babies and naturally I eat them, too."

Folks always said Mariana was just a "born mother."

Then Jim took to swimming in the lake.

He hadn't been feeling well and a friend felt of his flabby muscles and advised him:

"You need exercise, old boy. Just feel these muscles of mine! If you want muscles like that try swimming one hour every afternoon."

Jim's heart contracted with the envy that every strong man inspires in a weaker and next day he brought home a bathing suit.

At first the exercise wearied him terribly and the hour was one of boredom, then one day a girl in bright, red bathing suit called out to him:

"Race you to the pier!" and Jim accepted the challenge with spirit.

The girl won, but the race engendered a sort of comradeship and opened up the way to new and interesting contacts for Jim.

The girl drew him into her own little group and he entered readily into their playful pastimes.

He looked forward to joining them when he went to the beach and learned to call them by their first names. Tom, Bill, John and Margaret, while to them he was Jim.

It made him feel strangely youthful and exhilarated.

Then because of heart Jim was loyal and true, it occurred to him that he ought to bring Mariana along, that she, too, might enjoy the fun, and the damage was done when he saw her in a one-piece bathing suit.

It was the first time in years he had given a second thought to Mariana's figure, but he couldn't help comparing it to Yvonne's.

In that moment of unhappy comparison Mariana's bulbs and pastries were no asset to her.

Jim only realized that she was fat and not so young any more.

Her flesh rolled about her knees and her body was frankly lumpy.

That was the last time Mariana accompanied him to the beach. She made excuses and Jim did not urge her.

It may have been that she noticed the furtive glances Jim's friends cast at her figure, but if she did she said nothing.

As Jim far'ed later and later at the beach each evening she still said nothing, but with sore misgivings she came to notice a disturbing new vanity that blossomed out in Jim's gay new ties and smart socks.

Being a woman, with that peculiar insight that men seldom, if ever acquire, Mariana knew.

Then she reproached herself that silly pride had kept her from defining a bathing suit again.

A wife should be a pal to her husband!

So that afternoon she said:

"I'm going to the beach with you, Jim," and Jim answered after the briefest hesitation:

"Sure. Get your hat on."

"But I won't wear a hat," laughed Mariana. "Wouldn't I be a scream in a hat and a bathing suit?"

Then her laughter died away as Jim answered:

"I don't believe I'd go in, Mariana, unless you really care to. You know a fat woman does look funny in a bathing suit."

Had Jim been a woman he never would have forgotten the look of startled pain that flashed momentarily across Mariana's face. Being a man, he only half sensed the cause of it.

The truth was that Mariana only just that moment realized that Jim's love was not big enough to see through the burden of her flesh to her lithe spirit and to her loving soul, as fair or fairer than ever.

So Jim went alone again, and that was the evening when Margaret suggested he join them for an evening at the cabaret.

That evening seemed to turn back the pages of time for Jim. He felt ten years younger as he danced to the lilting music, and he felt a real regret that Mariana had lost her taste for such amusements and had let herself go fat and uninteresting.

After all, he assured himself, he was still a young man.

Did not these gay young folks enjoy his company?

That evening was followed by several others, often inspired by Jim's suggestion.

No harm done at all, but some of the money he and Mariana had formerly put to their savings account was now diverted to foot the bills for Jim's good times, and Mariana spent a good many lonely evenings at home with the children.

Jim was sorry for Mariana, but, confound it, could a man sacrifice his youth just to please a woman who hadn't kept up with him?

Mariana didn't appreciate him, anyway!

She should see him with all his gay young friends and maybe she would realize he wasn't yet on the fireside list!

Eventually, he supposed, there'd have to be some sort of adjustment.

Things just couldn't go on this way!

It was about this time that Mariana's guardian angel—or maybe it was Jim's —stepped in and took a hand.

That very evening he came softly upon a group of his new friends at the beach, standing with their backs to him, and it was Yvonne herself speaking in her cruelly clear, distinct voice.

"Well, it's worth all you get out of some of these old-timers to have to dance one time with them. If Jim would only try to get over the way they dance! It'll end learn a new step or two he wouldn't be such a boor. And then I'll show everybody with him off on me for the whole evening. Give me a break, won't you!"

They never heard Jim's softly retreating footsteps, and in the three blocks that lay between him and home Jim did a lot of painful thinking.

So shaken was he in fact that he walked an extra block or two before he approached his own little cottage, where Mariana's plump figure could be dimly described on the porch.

Suddenly that little porch looked like a haven of rest to Jim.

And Mariana! Through his throbbing resentment it was borne in upon him that Mariana was worth a hundred of those little good-for-nothing flirts!

Prettier, too even if she was a little heavy. Restful, sort of—and motherly!

"Hello," said Jim. "I'm tired of all this exercising and monkeying around. Keeps me away from home too much, Mariana. I'm just going to light up the old cigar and sit here on the porch with you this evening. Want you to tell me all about you and the kiddies, what you did today."

Suddenly, like a guilty boy seeking forgiveness, he bent and kissed Mariana's warm, flushed face ardently. And in the semi-darkness she smiled a slow, understanding smile.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop and ma were looking at their mail at breakfast and ma said, Well here's a nice one. I must say, Mr. and Mrs. Perry D. Bristol announce the marriage of their daughter Cecelia Anne to Mr. Barker Wentworth August the 8th, 1938. Well of all the nerve, ma said.

Why, is this Wentworth fellow already married or something? pop said and ma said, I haven't heard a word. Keeps me away from home too much. Mariana. I'm just going to light up the old cigar and sit here on the porch with you this evening. Want you to tell me all about you and the kiddies, what you did today?

Suddenly, like a guilty boy seeking forgiveness, he bent and kissed Mariana's warm, flushed face ardently. And in the semi-darkness she smiled a slow, understanding smile.

What is for Peet sake? pop said, and ma said, Why, they're just fishing for a wedding present.

Then they're using the wrong bait. I never did like at engraved stationary, pop said. I dont even remember any Carrie Bristol, he said, and ma said, I used to see quite a lot of her, in fact we were more or less friendly in a strained sort of way, but that's no reason for her to think she can impose on the passed for the benefit of the present. Really, Willyum, I mean really, it's just too ridiculous. Still I dont see how I can totally ignore it, she said.

Then after a few words of condolance on a greeting card, pop said, and ma said, If she doesn't receive some little gift from me what will she think?

She'll think she didn't get away with it for Peet sake, and she'll think correctly, pop said, and ma said, You men dont understand these things. I'll pick something up in Hookbinders gift department.

Yes goda, I'm going to have some cards printed announcing our own wedding, we know a lot of people now that we hadn't even heard of when we got married, we ought to make quite a haul, pop said.

Being sourcastic.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, July 11—(CP) — Toronto market was in improved fettle from the opening today and gains were general by noon, with volume somewhat expanded from that of recent seasons. Trade in the first three hours totalled 226,000 shares.

Action was heaviest in the gold group and gains were posted for Aunor, Conlaurum, Hard Rock, Powell, Roupn, Sylvanite, Preston, Pamour and several others while Nickel were leaders in the advance of the base metal issues.

Industrials were helped by the stronger tone of the London and New York markets and the steels, utilities and miscellaneous groups ruled higher. The western oil market continued a bit dull with Home and Anglo-Canadian slightly firmer.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, July 11—(AP)— The stock market donned its buying shoes today and leaders put on a recovery trot for fractions to more than a point.

While the trading pace was about twice as fast as in the previous session, the ticker tape frequently rested. Prices were around the best near the fourth hour.

Securities at London edged forward and were fairly steady at Amsterdam and Paris. Bonds exhibited quiet and selective strength. Commodities were mixed.

New highs for the year were posted for Baruh Cigar, Kroger Grocery and Commonwealth, and Southern Preferred.

Others on the advancing side the greater part of the time were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, Chrysler, American Telephone, Santa Fe, Phelps Dodge, Westinghouse, General Electric, U. S. Rubber, Montgomery Ward, Chuest Peabody, Lowe's and Zenith Radio.

Hiram Walker, Dome, and C.P.R. worked higher in the Canadian group while most others crawled along quietly. Some pressure developed against Dominion 4s in the bond market.

Prints moved through retail channels at the previous prices of 22c to 23½c for top grades and 23¼c to 23¾c for 38 score.

No Verification

No verification of any of these reports, however, reached France across the closely-controlled border. Informed sources doubted the border, moreover, could be closed if there were no indications of trouble at Barcelona or Madrid.

At Bahonne, France, near the western end of the French-Spanish border, it was reported that jails at Irun and San Sebastian were jammed with hundreds of persons held in "preventive arrest." This was said to be the result of preparations of the Spanish interior police for a visit to the border zone tonight by General Franco and the scheduled arrival of Foreign Minister Galeazzo Ciano of Italy at San Sebastian tomorrow.

Last week reports reaching Hendaye from across the border told of Falangist-Carlist clashes, with at least one man killed, in the northwestern provinces of Guipuzcao and Navarre.

WOULD WIDEN

With the opposition in mind which Quebec is expected to offer to any widening of present divorce laws, the conventions adopted a further resolution "that the objections of any individual province be met by a section similar to that of the Matrimonial Causes Act which provides that such act shall not apply to Scotland or Northern Ireland, or alternatively, by a clause making any sections of the act inoperative in any province whose legislature so enacts within a year."

McNeil Nominated

Washington, July 11—(AP)— President Roosevelt nominated Paul V. McNutt today to be Federal Security Administrator.

NEW MOVEMENTS ARE CRITICIZED

Hon. J. G. Gardiner Speaks to Young Liberals at Saskatoon

Saskatoon, July 11—(CP)—Hon. J. G. Gardiner, Provincial Minister of Agriculture, in an address here last night criticized the Social Leadership League initiated by George C. McCullagh, publisher of the Toronto Globe and Mail, and the new democracy movement sponsored by Hon. W. D. Herridge of Ottawa.

These new opposition groups were protagonists of railway amalgamation and the centralization of more power to the industrial "barons" of Canada, Mr. Gardiner said in an address at the fifth annual convention of the Saskatchewan Young Liberals Association.

He admired the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, the Minister said, because that group adhered to the principles of democratic socialism and would stand or fall on those principles. But he warned against men like Mr. Herridge who, he said, claimed he was prepared to act for all opposition elements.

Supports Free Trade

Of Mr. McCullagh, the Agriculture Minister said: "If he used the revenues of Canada in the manner he has used his own millions we are this country would go broke fast."

Mr. Gardiner supported the principle of free trade, the application of co-operative principles to the marketing of Canada's agricultural products.

"The only way in which conditions in Western Canada can ever be improved is by extension of the principles of free trade for which the Liberal party stands."

The Dominion government realized importance of the marketing agreement problem and was bringing about conditions favorable to increase of employment through Canadian industry at home and trade abroad, he said. "Figures will show that trade and unemployment were in reverse ratio.

TRIPARTITE PACT

It has been claimed the Russian definition would make it impossible for the three Baltic states to take any economic or political step to improve their relations with Germany without clashing with the triple alliance.

Terms Not Nearly as Binding

The Anglo-French definition was drafted with the German demolition of Czech stockpiles in mind and was designed to protect a "state from indirect aggression which would be calculated to destroy its neutrality or sovereignty. It terms did not go much further than the Russian definition.

Meanwhile, the negotiations in Moscow will continue in the hope of reaching an agreement on the principle originally envisaged. It is understood that Great Britain and France have advised Holland and Switzerland should not be included in the list of guaranteed countries, giving in to the Soviets on that score.

The definition of indirect aggression, however, is a tougher nut to crack and may lead to the negotiations being limited to aggression directed against the three countries involved.

While the British press emphasized the Prime Minister's avowal that any unilateral attempt to change the status of the Baltic Ports would be a threat to Polish independence, the Soviet government has been guaranteed by both Britain and France—there also was emphasis on the point that he left the door ajar for adjustments of Danzig's status.

In his statement to the House of Commons yesterday, Mr. Chamberlain defended the action of Poland's sig-a free city under protection of the League of Nations and within the Polish customs organization as—"neither basically unjust nor illogical" but by no means as settled, "that, in a clearer atmosphere, possible improvements could be discussed."

French Suggestion

Semi-official French sources advanced a suggestion, which they indicated had Polish approval. It was that Germany be permitted to incorporate Danzig territorially into the Reich, provided guaranteeing that the Free City would continue as a demilitarized zone, and that Poland could continue to navigate the Vistula River and to use the port as at present.

They added that Poland, recognizing the Germanic character of Danzig, always had been ready to negotiate a solution which would depend on German willingness to cooperate rather than to seek a forceful settlement.

Poland welcomed Mr. Chamberlain's pronouncement in making clear she had the support of the "western powers" and has considered it necessary to convince Berlin that there was a limit to the degree of Nazi activities in Danzig would not be tolerated.

Danzig Reaction

Danzig Nazis received the British statement with silence and after an important or leaving the situation unaltered but announced that they professed to view it as a challenge. Some Nazi circles commented that a "reasonable solution" might be found but the German community, Danzig Diemat, asserted the possibility of creating a "clearer atmosphere" had been undermined by the English" through their readiness to guarantee Poland before March 26 when Poland rejected German Danzig demands.

Chancellor Hitler's newspaper Voelkischer Beobachter commented that Mr. Chamberlain "completely ignores one decisive angle — the right of self-determination of German Danzigers."

The Rome Morning Press however interpreted the Prime Minister's statement as "prudent."

"It is to be considered," said Il Popolo Di Roma, "that Mr. Chamberlain avoids uttering literally the phrase which so often has been uttered and brought by some journalistic circles into English . . . will fight for Danzig."

L'Osservatore Romano, Vatican newspaper, suggested that all causes of conflict between Poland and Germany were capable of settlement by negotiation.

Council Adopts Resolution Dismissing the City Clerk

Charlottetown, July 11—(CP)—A shortage in the Charlottetown city funds amounting to $69,454.42 was reported at a meeting of the city council last night by D. P. Archibald and W. A. Morrell, chartered accountants who audited the city books at instructions from city council.

The council adopted resolutions dismissing City Clerk George P. Nicholson, referring the auditors' report to Attorney-General Thane A. Campbell for "this information and action" and demanding indemnity to the amount of the city clerk's surety bond.

The shortage as at Jan. 15, 1939 was due, the auditors said, to "misappropriation of city funds, deliberate juggling of accounts, issue of unrecorded debentures from which the city received no money, falsification of accounts in printed reports, forged signatures of members of finance Committee" on vouchers and irregular endorsements of cheques which would appear to be forgery."

Frankfordites Have Definitely, Positively Gone Shoe-Minded

Placing of Bata Shoe Factory in Village of Frankford Praised by All

A LARGE CONCERN

Trenton, July 11 (Special)—The number one tune of the hit parade in Frankford this week is "O Dem Golden Slippers" and everybody is singing it. It isn't a new tune or a modern tune or a swing tune, but it is on everybody's lips; and they're singing it in the approved Benny Goodman manner. When the old darky melody was conceived a century ago it is doubtful if even the author knew that he was paying tribute to the arrival of the Bata Import and Export Co. at Frankford during the year of 1939, but the fact remains that the Frankfordites have definitely and positively gone shoe-minded, and they're going to refrain from singing the praises of the group of men who have been responsible for bringing to their community a branch of the largest shoe manufacturing concern that the world has known.

Many Watch Unloading.

On Sunday literally hundreds of interested and curious spectators came from Frankford and Trenton and even Belleville to see the unloading in Trenton from the freighter Chibougamau of Montreal of dozens of cases of valuable and highly-prized Czecho-Slovakian shoe manufacturing machinery, and the storage of this same machinery in the former paper mill in Frankford. In Trenton the space near the dock was lined with as many cars as could find parking space, and along the bridge spectators lined the rail to hundreds of feet. Even the wharf and on piers and in vantage points men were perched, surveying the scene, commenting on the activities, and expressing a hundred different viewpoints and predictions.

In Frankford there was only one street and that north of the village to the former paper mill. Within the mill yard cars were parked in serried rows, and visitors wandered about the grounds and through the plant buildings and by the river. They watched the arrival of the trucks and saw the portable crane brought here from Montreal on a truck which hooked fast to crated machines, weighing tons and lifted them from the trucks to the ground. They walked through the interior of a plant which from the outside is not so large and not so imposing but which, when once inside, surprises and impresses the visitor with its vast extent and excellent condition. They noted the recently whitewashed walls, and the buckets of paint and piles of brushes left at various spots, evidence of renovations recently effected. They noted the powerhouse which abuts the plant, and the excellent facilities for shipping either by road or rail, and told each other just how much they thought the new plant would be of advantage or disadvantage to the community. And the unemployed men of the district walked all about the scene, and mentally licked their lips and rolled up their sleeves, and face crinkled in grins that have not been equalled in a long time.

Boat Docks At Belleville.

The Chibougamau spent Saturday night in Belleville and arrived at the Trenton dock in the early morning. Shortly after, decks and the waterfront echoed with the puffing of the 400-ton freighter's arrival, and within a short time the first contingent of spectators had arrived on the scene. Others began to come, too, trucks supplied by a local trucker, C. R. Roberts, who in turn hired trucks from other owners of the locality, and things began to happen. A motor winch was unlimbered, on the foredeck of the Chibougamau, and deck hands began to run about preparing ropes and cables and tackle for the unloading. Both from the deck, which was piled to capacity, and from the hold large crates were low by one lifted from their places and lowered to trucks which backed up alongside until they fairly scraped paint from the boat. Spectators got quite a kick from the shouts and gesticulations of the French-speaking sailors of the Chibougamau, and nudged each other and smiled as they heard the unfamiliar expressions of "Prenez garde!" they would call as the lowering began, and children mocked the cries from a discreet distance. Curiously enough there seems to be no French subtitle that will quite take the place of "Whoa", and during the forenoon there were plenty of "whoas" as the work progressed.

The Chibougamau carried a full load of machinery, most of it very bulky, piled high on her decks. Smaller crates had to be hold and were hoisted from open hatchways. In all some two thousand tons of machinery will arrive from Montreal and a second load of it comes by another steamer, expected in Trenton late Tuesday or on Wednesday.

Crates Weigh Tons.

Many of the crates must have weighed tons, for they were far from easy to handle. Yet they were picked up like toys by the hoist and deposited gently and almost without mishap on the trucks which carried them the nine miles to Frankford and the plant there. One large crate, quite evidently heavily loaded, just barely got clear of the deck when the steel cable around it cut right through the crating at the top, and for a moment the whole mass threatened to topple a few feet above the deck. But it was lowered again, the cable was slackened, and after the wood had been reinforced with some heavier timber the move was completed. For a moment it was a ticklish situation, for all of the machinery was marked to be handled right side up and it might very easily have toppled over. Splinters flew, and there were ripe oaths repeated through just like paper as the tremendous weight drew the cables taut; but no one was hear enough to be injured and the delay was less than ten minutes as new timbers were used and a new grip on the load was taken.

At Frankford the plant has been subjected to the stars of a thorough cleanup. After lying idle for a number of years the walls naturally have become grimy, and workmen have recently sprayed them with white-wash. A bit of painting has been done, too, and much more will be done as the clean-up progresses. For a plant which has been idle for so long a time it is in excellent condition. A certain amount of the machinery originally used there in the manufacture of paper remains, notably the long rolling machine which stretches forty or fifty feet from one end of the larger parts of the building, but there is plenty of room besides that for on the south is a large warehouse equipped with a sprinkler system. Beyond that will be more than room for storage of all the machinery of the Bata group which is coming to Frankford, and is a higher, more substantial room than the one which is now in use, with a small suite of offices running off it.

Power Is Cheap.

Further still to the north is the roller-room with a basement room below it, and a shoe-store, leather, and other buildings which may be used as expansion requires. In the factory yard is a splendid stucco building which makes an ideal general office, and which lies just at the entire entrance to the plant proper. All things considered it would appear that the Bata officials have chosen wisely in their selection of a temporary plant to be used until they can build a more permanent structure, and Frankford is a favorable site in having had just such a plant to offer as pioneer in the interim.

It was a most interesting drive to Frankford and return on Sunday morning. Moving along slowly, it was rather easy to see a dozen or more salaries why the location is very nearly ideal. Between Glen Miller and Frankford, which is the ultimate site of the Bata development and model town, lie hundreds of acres of land most of which is almost as flat as a floor. On some of it are acres of young trees, and since it is the plan to develop here in time a huge community park and playground there is little doubt but that many of these trees will be allowed to remain. Beside the highway, which itself is in excellent condition, is the river Trent which furnishes waterpower that in turn creates a splendid supply of power from four power houses between Trenton and the north of Frankford. Power lines intersect the country at intervals and since the Bata plant will be electrically operated this is undoubtedly of great importance. Through Frankford runs a spur line of the Canadian National Railway which ties in with the main line seven miles south at Trenton Junction, and particularly for the export trade this will be invaluable.

Rail Service Essential.

Speaking with Oldrich Sichanek, young Bata official, expansion engineer, college graduate, ex-Czech army officer, and the man who first introduced this idea to the Bay of Quinte area, the writer learned some time ago that rail service is of the utmost importance in the matter of shoe exporting. So rapidly do shoe styles change that every where fast rail service is available it is often difficult to keep ahead of the times in the matter of patterns. A consignment of shoes from Frankford to Brazil, for example, would require some days in transit, and every available speed is needed. Shipping by water will be of some importance, but not to any great extent in the export trade. Where speed is required boat service will be of little importance, and there will be a different matter. It is probable that many of the raw materials may come to Trenton from different ports on the Great Lakes and the St. Lawrence, and will be trucked to the Frankford plant.

When once the plant gets to operating developments will follow rapidly enough. Every day will see some new addition, and residents of the area will be hard put to it to follow the Bata construction as it goes at hand. For example it is said that within a year or two there will be a fleet of Bata trucks and plans are being more than one hundred. Naturally a small army of truck drivers will be required, and already dozens of applications have been filed by men seeking posts like this.

Chief a Busy Man.

One of the leading men of Trenton since the first word of the possible coming to Frankford of the Bata plant has been Chief Constable William Bain. Literally thousands of inquiries of one sort and another have been handled by him, and recently, that is within the last three weeks, he has had charge to a large extent of the filing of applications for employment. The Trenton police station is a busy enough place most of the time, but for the past few days it has been besieged by applicants for any and all jobs that the Bata officials have asked each applicant to submit a written application, giving date of birth, religion, education, experience, life history, references, and a photograph. Fortunately so many of these have poured in that for a time at least a halt has been called, and present applicants are being told to wait for a little until further help may be required as construction begins.

Mr. Sichanek has had a similar host of applications to deal with, and both at Frankford and place and on the street has been besieged by interested men and women.

Many Officials Present.

At the present time four of the Bata officials are in Trenton and have been within the last few hours. So rapidly are events forced on them of fact that it is a rash statement always to say that they are within reach if there has been a new deal of travel involved. Thomas Bata, head of the firm, has been a visitor; Jan Bata, his son, has had much do with the Bata development locally. Oldrich Sachanek has been in Trenton intermittently for a number of weeks, and Frantisek Dr. Hertz and Mr. Neuhauer who superintend the plant in matters of erry and development.

So Mr. Thorpe does are here again" in Frankford, and no wonder. The village is in the throes of a peace-time boom, and it enjoys to the very excellent flavour of coming prosperity. Every one is very eager to be told regarding development here, and the attitude of the people toward their almost incredible good luck, that a second article will be prepared and will be published with that information. Suffice to say that Frankford is facing many headlines about itself in the past few days than in the previous twenty years, and when it's finally publicity coupled with the more pleasant ones inferred above, there's no sweeter music. Frankford, it is safe to say, likes it.

Protest Shoe Factory.

Jonquiere, Que. July 11 (CP)—Establishment in Canada of the Bata Shoe Factory, Czech firm of Zlin, Slovakia, was under protest today in an unanimous resolution of delegates to directors of the Federation of Chamber of Commerce of the Province of Quebec.

Contending its establishment in the guise of a shoe-store, lending, and other buildings which may be used as expansion requires. In the factory yard is a splendid stucco building which makes an ideal general office, and which lies just at tile, entrance to the plant proper. All things considered it would appear that the Bata officials have chosen wisely in their selection of a temporary plant to be used until they can build a more permanent structure, and Frankford is favorable site in having had just such a plant to offer as pioneer in the interim.

It was a most interesting drive to Frankford and return on Sunday morning. Moving along slowly, it was rather easy to see a dozen or more salaries why the location is very nearly ideal. JAPAN PLAYING

Reasons For Japan's Action

The red banner of Vladivostok, site of Russia's far eastern military base, listed five reasons why Japanese were "attacking" now:

1. To safeguard the Left Wing and rear of Japanese armed forces in the Far East while preparing for war against the Soviet Union.

2. To isolate Outer Mongolia and the Soviet Union from China.

3. To prevent union of the Chinese army with the Outer-Mongolian and Soviet armies.

4. To secure control of Outer Mongolia's rich material and livestock for use in a big war; and

5. To create a central base of operations on the Asiatic continent.

Soviet Troops Hold Position

By Russell Brines

Associated Press Foreign Staff

At Japanese army headquarters near the Manchukuo frontier, July 10—(Delayed) — (AP) — Remnants of Soviet-Mongolian forces apparently still held positions on the Manchoukuoan side of the Khalka River last night after a second day of heavy artillery and aerial activity.

In this border engagement which started May 11, Soviet troops apparently were resigned to range fighting for an indefinite period.

Bombardment by Soviet planes east of here along the Kholsten River was followed by a Japanese army spokesman's statement that the Russian airmen were dropping small bombs here to contaminate the Japanese water supply.

He declared that such bombing had begun Saturday and said dysentery germs were released in the water.

Shelling and Bombing

Shelling and bombing of war was virtually without interruption. The Lamsa front also was active. In which I have been living was bombed three times within 24 hours but damage was slight and there were no casualties.

I watched one aerial battle above the Khalka River, due west of Nomonhan, a height above the surrounding prairie which Soviet-Mongol troops have occupied and held.

I saw several planes fall in flames and watched the forced landing of another in Manchoukuoan territory.

The Kwantung (Japanese) army spokesman told me the Japanese pilot who landed it had to have both legs amputated.

Japanese Claims

In the dogfight over the Khalka, the Japanese planes apparently had greater manoeuvrability than the Soviet craft. The army spokesman said that in the fight I watched, 16 to 20 Soviet planes were shot down and that later in the day 40 Soviet planes were downed in another fight.

Three flights of Soviet planes flew directly above us, drawing Japanese anti-aircraft fire. None of the planes was hit.

HON. DR. MANION

Speaks Partly in French

He made his first full-length speech of his four here last night, partly in French and for the first time discussed political problems in that language. Before that, in addressing the provincial executive groups, he confined himself to personal references and thanks for receptions arranged in his honor.

About 2,000 persons turned out last night to hear Dr. Manion and Mrs. Manion, who also spoke briefly in French.

Dr. Manion's speech was a challenge to the Mackenzie King government to declare an election and an appeal to the people of Quebec to treat the Quebec Liberal government in the last provincial election.

Says Harmony Desirable

Canadian problems could not be solved if the government and the provinces were quarrelling continually with the federal government, he said. They had to work in harmony. Co-operation between Dominion and provincial governments would be the order of the day if a Conservative government was in office.

Dr. Manion said that one reason for the lack of harmony at present was the lack of confidence on the part of the people in the federal government. He accused the Mackenzie King government of being asleep and said Prime Minister Mackenzie King had carried on needless quarrels with Premier Hepburn of Ontario and Premier Duplessis of Quebec.

Challenge For Election

"I challenge Mr. King to have an election so that the people will obtain a government in which they have confidence," he said. "Whenever the verdict of the people I will accept it for in this democratic country we are governed by majority rule."

Dr. Manion said that a Toronto Communist paper had honored him by naming him "enemy number one" of the Communist party. This was because he supported a bill to prohibit the use of mails for Communist propaganda.

The bill was introduced in the House of Commons by Wilfrid Lacroix, Liberal member for Quebec-Montmorency. Justice Minister Lapointe and several Quebec Liberal members had opposed this bill, but Dr. Manion said he had supported it because the Communist party was revolutionary and in Russia, the only country where it was in power, it had attempted to destroy religion and family life.

BRITISH-FRENCH PLAN

Demonstration of Anglo-French Solidarity Stressed by Parisian Newspaper Accounts of R.A.F. Flight Over France

London, July 12 (CP)—Great Britain and France, having entered cross-channel relations as part of a consolidated force, were reported today considering flights to Poland and other allies.

The French press delightedly described yesterday's initial round-trip excursion of 11 Royal Air Force bombers to French territory as a "flawless performance" and a "demonstration to the world of solidarity."

The flight will be followed by a return visit from French warplanes with more or less regular shuttle trips to follow.

The Daily Mail (Independent) said that other British allies, chiefly Poland, would be taken into the scheme after details had been worked out.

French and British anti-aircraft forces were brought into the exercises, with reports to be exchanged on the "theoretical number of kills" fire" on each other's aircraft.

'Like All Flares I Saw In France Rolled Into One' Says Veteran

London, Ont., July 12—(CP) — Observers expressed doubt today that the largest meteor to pass over southwestern Ontario within memory could have fallen to the earth somewhere in the district.

The general belief was that the ball of fire consumed itself as it hurtled through the sky last night. Some persons thought it might have fallen into Lake Erie or Lake Huron.

For many moments, as it blazed across the country and left clouds of smoke in its wake, the meteor created a weird glow in the inky-pale. Motorists stopped their cars on the highways as the sky lit up, Dogs began baying ball and housedwellers rushed to telephones to find police offices for information.

Through an area extending from Ohio in the south to Kincardine, Ont., in the north, and from Windsor on the west to Toronto on the east, the meteor or its reflection was visible.

Scores thought an airplane was falling in flames and others believed a big building or woods was ablaze.

Direction a mystery

Even the direction taken by the meteor was a mystery. Some persons said it went north and others southwest. In the Dresden district, unconfirmed observations of the University of Western Ontario astronomy department showed a northeasterly course.

Perhaps the most unique observation of all was Rev. W. G. Colgrove of London, who was making astronomical observations at the University of Western Ontario observatory when the meteor sped through the night.

Mr. Colgrove said the meteor seemed to burst directly overhead, coming from the east and lighting up the entire campus. It broke first in a long streamer of green with brilliant white head. The clergyman said. The streamer changed color to blue and gradually died out, leaving behind two great white clouds.

Although the Great War veteran said the meteor was "like all the flares I saw in France rolled into one."

At Ridgetown Chief Constable Charles Tate said the meteor "looked like a ball of lightning."

"The sky was absolutely clear and suddenly this object came flashing across the sky and seemed to explode north of here towards Chatham," he said.

"We hope to make it unobjectionable and Premier said after his private conference with cabinet ministers and officials of the treasury and Attorney - General's departments.

Drew Opposes Session

Immediate reaction of Lieut.-Col. George A. Drew, Conservative Leader, to Premier Hepburn's announcement was that a special session of the Legislature should not be called unless for a State or "real emergency".

Col. Drew said he had received no official word yet to indicate that such an emergency exists" and ad-

BOMBING PLANE LEAVES BUFFALO

Will Take Nine Hours to Reach Botwood, Newfoundland

Buffalo, N. Y., July 12—(AP)—A 15-ton patrol bombing plane, built for the British Air Ministry, took off from the Buffalo Harbor at 7:34 a.m. EDT today en route to Botwood, Newfoundland on the first leg of a nonstop flight to England.

Pilot Russell Rogers pointed the nose of the huge boat-motored flying boat northward after an unusually long approximately 400 feet in the water.

The ship landed here early yesterday after it had been delayed its flight 34 hours and spoiled the hopes of Rogers and his crew members for a one-stop flight from San Diego, Calif., to Felixstowe, England.

The pilot estimated the ship would reach the base miles in Botwood in "eight or nine hours."

Pleasure-Seeking Couple Dangle 125 Feet in the Air When Parachute Fails

New York, July 12 (AP)—A pleasure-seeking couple who dangled for five hours on a board 125 feet above ground at the World's Fair parachute jump were rescued at dawn today after two daring mechanics cut the jammed guide wire which held the captive.

The serial prisoners were Mr. and Mrs. J. Cornelius Rathborne, society prominent couple of Old Westbury, Long Island.

Their parachute, one of 11 in operation from the 350-foot tower, stuck at 11.35 p.m. E.D.T. last night. They were rescued at 4.39 a.m. E.D.T. after mechanics attached a rope to the parachute, cut the jammed cable and lowered the 'chute a few feet at a time, on the three remaining cables into a spread police net.

A crowd numbering in the thousands, including Mrs. Rathborne's mother, Mrs. Rose a reverberating cheer as the man and woman were lowered to an ambulance. They were taken to an emergency hospital on the fair grounds but refused medical aid.

The woman, who in the early hours of her plight shouted jests to the throng, wanted to walk away, Rathborne, who said he was a polo player, buckled at the knees when he reached ground. He is 32, Mrs. Rathborne 25.

Cheers For Mechanics

Prolonged cheers also were the reward of the two daring mechanics, Harry Mitchell and William Gertis, who performed impromptu human-fly stunts in attempting to free the corner of the parachute. Gertis, a Chicagoan, rode the 'chute to earth when it finally was freed.

"The parachute jump is one of the most popular amusement features at the World's Fair

An electric motor is used to hoist the captive parachute to the top of a 350-foot tower which has a bell-shaped crown, so the 'chute can fall free.

Passengers sit on a broad board to which they are strapped. Guy wires are designed to keep the 'chute spread at all times to prevent side-slipping. Except for those times the 'chute falls freely to the earth in 15 seconds after the 58-second ascent.

Chute Throwped

The amusement area was thronged when the parachute stopped suddenly halfway in its swift descent. It's apparently jammed against one of the four cables which keep it spread.

Rathborne and his wife at first took their predicament cheerfully. Mrs. Rathborne kissed her husband and shouted down to the laughing crowd:

"I heard that story about if the parachute doesn't open you can bring it back. But what do you do when it does open and you can't bring it back?"

Later, when police moved the life net below them away for a moment, the couple thought it was a ruse to put that net back."

Ross Stiver a member of the committee introduced Harry Everett, Harvey Theobald, Wade Tripp, Tommy Carruthers and Bert Stiver of the Collegiate group, while Jack McVeigh, chairman of the committee introduced Donald Dell, Douglas Johnson, Dick Barrett and Robert Blackmore of the St. Michael's group. Don Barclay introduced Dr. G. S. Cronk to the club, who told the students of the importance of time and that time would give them more out of life. He stated that no two had the same amount of ability and that it was necessary to decide early what ability they were going to take up and then stick to it. "You will find the work interesting" said Cronk. The next speaker also stated that the child had to be educated at home as well as in school. He admonished the pupils to be honest in all their dealings for he said "it will pay big dividends."

Speaks on Canada

Bruce Lattimer introduced the member for West Hastings in the Provincial Legislature and Mr. Arnott told his listeners that they were graduating at the toughest times in the history of the Dominion. "Times who have gone ahead of us have fallen down on the job", said Mr. Arnott and "it will be your duty to take up the torch and bring Canada back to the prosperity that was enjoyed at the Fathers of Confederation. We have a country here big enough for 40 million people and there are only eleven millions here and one tenth of them are in poverty. It is up to you to discuss the causes but I would ask you to take some part in public life and to be desirous of advancement. Share your part of the responsibilities and you will live a life of enjoyment." Mr. Arnott stated that 30 years ago Canada was experiencing progress but "we are not as far ahead today as we were then" and he pressed a shame on it this as we have not the foresight of our founders. The speaker said the people of today were spoon fed and that more "buckling down" to the job was needed. He criticized the high admonition of the former speaker to be honest in all dealings. Dr. Jim Ferguson expressed the appreciation of the club for the fine addresses.

Arthur L. Young, who spoke briefly said not only was the club not offer as much today as a few years ago. "The advancement is going ahead rapidly and it was outstanding and there was a large field for those boilers" the speaker declared. Mr. O. W. Duff expressed his appreciation of the fine addresses and Belleville and deplored the fact the railway was not able to handle more young men.

Kinsmen Club Says "Thank You"

Members of the Belleville Kinsmen Club today said "Thank You."

Thank you for the co-operation given by Belleville residents and the visitors who gathered in their hundreds on North Front Street last evening to make the fourth annual running of the Kinsmen Soap Box Derby the shining success of past annual events.

They realize to the full that such annual events would be impossible without this whole-hearted support and co-operation that has been given their endeavours since the inception of this annual boyhood classic.

Interest has been maintained unceasingly by the many thousands in this great work of the Kinsmen Club in ensuring that those underprivileged children of the city who are threatened with partial or complete blindness may have the way to better sight. In their annual appeal to the citizens of Belleville they have been nobly supported.

Through the holding of the yearly Soap Box Derby some part of the funds needed for this important work are thus realized and for the generous support that has been given this year, and in past years, the members of the Belleville Kinsmen Club under President W. J. Hurst again say—"Thank You."

Says Britain Not Dependent On U.S. Supplies

London, July 12 (CP)—The United States Senate Foreign Affairs Committee's shelving of administration proposals to raise the arms embargo should act as a timely jolt to Great Britain not to rely excessively on American resources, but to build her own strength, the Daily Express (Independent) said editorially today.

The committee has decided against President Roosevelt's amendment to neutrality. This is not the end of the matter, but of course, it is a question which the American people have to decide for themselves.

"We are not dependent upon American supplies. We have immense resources in our country, and we can increase opportunities for development in our empire. . . . The decision forms a test of security in building up our own strength, and not only too much on European allies or American resources."

DRIVER OF CAR IS EXONERATED BY BLAME

At the inquest held at Brighton last evening into the death of four-year-old Floyd Cline, who was fatally injured in an accident when she ran on the street in front of a car driven by John Bradley of Belleville, the jury brought in a verdict exonerating Bradley of any blame in connection with the fatality.

'IRON HIGHWAYS'

An "iron highway" has been tested out on the campus of the University of Minnesota, says the Port Arthur News-Chronicle. It is said the campus "iron road" has given satisfaction and service.

The latest news is that a 2,000-foot stretch of "iron highway" is to be constructed on a state road near Eveleth, Minn.

The claims made for iron paving are, that it is skid-proof, pleasant to drive upon, self-illuminating under auto headlights, but not reflecting their glare; easily cleaned, inexpensive to maintain and causing no undue wear on tires.

Minnesota of course has plenty of iron ore. Nothing as to the cost of such a paving has been mentioned.

ON ASTROLOGY

The story published yesterday on the word of Dr. Nicholas Butler that Chancellor Adolf Hitler has a staff of five astrologers to read the stars for him and advise him on world events was startling news, and yet even today many persons have in various ways of reading the future. Some of course do it in fun but there are many for whom such has a real attraction. Not so many would trust to astrology as they know too little about the doctrine of the stars.

Astrology is literally the science of the stars and was the starting point of astronomy, as alchemy was of chemistry.

The word astrology was used as equivalent to astronomy and is now restricted in meaning to the practice of judging of the effects and influences of the heavenly bodies on human affairs and to the foretelling of human events by the stars. The whole heavens, visible and invisible, were divided by the astrologers of old by great circles into twelve parts called houses. As the circles were supposed to remain immovable, every heavenly body passed through each of the twelve houses every 24 hours. The position of any planet was settled by its distance from the boundary circles of the house, measured on the ecliptic. The houses had different names and different powers, the first being called the house of life, the second the house of riches, the third of brethren, the sixth of marriage, the eighth of death, and so on.

The "face" of the heavens about to rise was called the ascendant, the planet in the house of the ascendant being the lord of the ascendant. To cast a person's nativity, or draw his horoscope, was to find the position of the houses at the instant of his birth. The positions of the planets determined, the astrologer, who knew the various powers and influences possessed by the signs, houses, and planets, claimed to be able to predict what the course of that person's life would be. The temperament of the individual was ascribed to the planet which was lord of the ascendant at that time. If Saturn was ascendant, the person would be saturnine in disposition, if Jupiter, jovial; if Mercury, mercurial. The virtues of herbs, gems and medicines were supposed to be due to their ruling planets.

History and fiction tell of astrologers who were very astute. In ancient days an astrologer who misled his king was the condemned man. One prognosticator who had fallen into disgrace with a French monarch, was called to predict the future of that ruler and wisely he said that he saw danger to the king but that the king would be immune as long as he, the astrologer, remained in unison.

One can understand how dangerous astrology could be to some persons and how much rested with the astrologer. To the average man and to the evenly balanced and well-educated man there seems to be nothing in astrology, that is, in the influence on individual human life of the stars and forecasting of the future by this means. It is fortunately so, for man has human laws, civilization, laws of nature and mind by which to guide himself without placing himself under the influence of astrologers.

Hitler is a man of unique parts, he is practical and idealist. It is not the practical Hitler the world so much dreads as the idealist. His achievements with the material he has to work in Germany are extensive but he is also a lonely figure.

It is said that Hitler has had a feeling that he will not live long, but that story has been told many times.

If he is in astrology probably only a few know. Yet Dr. Murray Butler says Hitler has an advisory staff of astrologers who advise "that the climax of his career will come in September and that whatever he is to do to add to his fame must be done before that date."

If he has astrologers it is to be hoped that they are wise and canny men and advise carefully and sensibly.

WHEN THE RINGMASTER CRACKS HIS WHIP

THERE seems to be a powerful all-inclusive reason why we should object to the adopting or the adapting of any part of that three-ring political circus of continental Europe. Political circus it is, for when the high and mighty ring master cracks his whip all and sundry, from the star performers down to and including the working men on the job, jump through his unholy hoop or else—

An editorial observer reviews the question as follows:

To say it could never happen on this side of the Atlantic is the major mistake of the age, for in certain quarters it has already begun to happen. The ambitious agitator together with the would-be-politician, master mind and propagandist, whose sole mission is to collect votes, started sometime back to import the "red lemonade" from this same circus. True, at the beginning they diluted it to a pale pink, the color scarcely noticeable, but, as time went on, it began to take on more and more color. How red do they make it? One may think as he will and may think he likes (at present) but all or any part of that circus may be rehashed, rewritten, redressed, restaged and renamed but it will still be the same old European circus. You may spray it to your heart's content with the healthy odor of the pines of the North or the magnolias of the South but you cannot eliminate the smell of the goats. But what a sales talk the political propagandists are putting up —— every word allegedly in behalf of the man who works. It is almost invariably a case of transplanting foreign-born ideas, and if they are all that is claimed for them it must be, that every worker "over there" owns a palatial home with seven bathrooms and six radios, that he draws a princely salary, rides home every afternoon in one of his high-powered cars with a liveried chauffeur, and that his greatest worry is in deciding on which one of his three yachts he should spend the week-end. But the best part of the "sales" talk is that not much more than one in a million of them seldom ever dreamed of owning much of anything at all, and those who did thought first of coming over here where it would be possible.

But propagandists keep up their howling — they damn the only system that ever worked and hang halos over that which has been tried for years and found miserably wanting.

Now isn't it worth while to look the bare facts in the face before taking on any part of this European three-ring circus any part at all? Just compare the best European city of any given size with the poorest city of the same size on the American Continent. Count the automobiles, telephones, radios, size up the average civilized home, the clothing and everything else you can think of and you will probably find that the workers in North America can, man for man, buy and sell the highest paid executives over there, except the ring masters themselves and the high ups directly or indirectly within their organization. Can we afford to listen to all that ballyhoo that is being placed with an ear to trading the best conditions on earth for the sole privilege of saluting a political ring master wherever and whenever he cracks the whip? Not if we place any value on ourselves, which means on our liberty—and the one thing which should be dearest to us all, our individuality . . . without which we haven't much left. And it stands to reason that the man who works will eventually pay the same price here which is paid in continental Europe in true proportion to the amount of their system which may be adopted.

Let the bankers do it anything they choose, or make all the claims at their command but if they succeed the ultimate result will be: Labour sold down the river for a mere mess of potage, seasoned with garlic.

His wife brought him a cup of tea as he lay, half asleep, in bed.

"Here," she said, "drink this. And it'll be the last cup of tea I'll bring you for a long time."

"Oh, an' who says so-" he asked belligerently.

"Couple o' coppers waiting in the passage," she answered bitterly.

Bumblebee and Lady's Slipper

Sudbury citizens chose orchids for their banquet-table decorations in honor of the Duke and Duchess of Kent. Not the exotic blooms, originating from tropical jungles, but the flora of the province, the fragrant flowered Showy Lady's Slipper of the Northern Ontario forest, lovely as a fairy balloon with flowing white streamers, splashed with crimson and mauve, regal enough for any Queen, now and then.

Not a bluff, Her Majesty had the opportunity of seeing another of our Canadian orchids, the delicate Moccasin Flower of our mountain pineland, when children gathered on the slopes of Tunnel Mountain tossed bunches of the fragile pink blooms to the smiling Queen as she drove about the Park.

There is something more than the frail loveliness of these Pink Lady Slipper Orchids that thrill the nature lover. They illustrate the perfect plan of inter-relationship between bee and blossom, between the latter and barters its nectar for a service only the insect can render. For when the bumble bee, the Moccasin Flower must expect no fertilization.

To reach the rich store of nectar the bee must enter through a slight opening in the lip of the flower. Considerable effort on the insect's part is required to squeeze its bulky body through so small a slot. At length the bee succeeds. With characteristic agility, the entrance closes behind it.

Gorged with nectar the bee begins to seek an exit from its unexpected prison. The entrance through which it squeezed, now tightly closed, gives no clue of escape. But towards the back of the cell appear two faint glimmers of light. Towards these the bee makes its way.

Crawling through this narrow passage which is studded with minute forcurving bristles, the bumble which the bumble bee has brought in from a previous visit to a neighbouring flower is brushed from the bee's back to fall upon and adhere to the sticky stigma.

Nor is this all in the scheme which nature has planned for the perpetuation of Moccasin Flowers. Relieved of the load of pollen which has now served its purpose in fertilizing the flower, the bumble bee, just before it emerges into the sunlight, struggles past another device in this wonderful mechanism. Here, in the form of a sticky pad, and giving dust, deposits another load of golden pollen upon the bee's velvety back.

It is only in the acid-rich humus of soil composed of decaying pine and spruce needles that the Moccasin Flowers readily grow. Timber far than the two-inch blooms of the Snowy Lady's Slipper which compared in value, are frequently bought for the Queen on her Northern Ontario tour, they are among the most beautiful of the province's blooms which stud the forest floor in late June and early July with clumps of conifers where the mountains and the foothills merge.—Calgary Herald.

POLICE PROBING

in the lock.

The only possible clues to Flude's movements on Monday came from two persons who reported that a man who might have been Flude was sitting in a ditch on the Kingston-Belleville highway in the afternoon. Neither his family nor his employers could offer any explanation for his disappearance.

In neither case did the abandoned trucks offer any help to police. Flude's vehicle was found in a ditch between Belleville and Trenton with a rear tire missing, showing evidence of a blowout. The other truck was found abandoned on a gas when found but otherwise it was in running order.

Cheesemakers I Have Known

By Ed Reed

A good many years ago I read a book called "Wild Animals I Have Known". It was written by a man who had a life-time of experience as a hunter and naturalist, and was a very likely knew what he was talking about. I am thinking of that book today because I feel I have got to write about my experiences, after a brief half a lifetime in the business of manufacturing cheese, I would be the very last to call it "Cheesemakers I Have Known"! I've hired a lot of them, and had a lot of them hired on me, there's more fun in thinking about some of them at a little distance than there was in trying to keep them straight at the time. It was good practice for me, I suppose, and made me canny in the choosing and handling of my men, but, since every one I hired was different to all those who had gone before, it took me a long time to learn.

My first cheesemaker was a good-natured youngster, and came highly recommended. I didn't know, at the time, that these written testimonials could always be got for the asking, and I thought I was getting a real experienced hand at the business. But it turned out that he had still a lot to learn about the making of cheese, and both had our share of worry and trouble before that first summer was over.

The next man I hired also came to answer to an advertisement I had put an ad. in the newspaper seemed to be the only way to get help in those days. But it sure was in the same class as "buying a pig in a poke". He looked a good luck if you got the kind of a man you wanted, but he was a sad disappointment. He only had a little caution in his system, and the effect of the drink was terrible. Anyway, I was getting a cheesemaker of several years' experience, and I thought I had him. But he'd also had a fairly long acquaintance with Scotch whiskey, and the latter had begun to interfere with his regular business of making cheese. Furthermore, he also had a large proportion of Scotch caution in his system, and the effect of the drink seemed to be to increase that caution. The effect of the drink. He would work off his worst spells in the night, and I'd be scared scaring her half to death. This outfit was going for me many a time before I got rid of him, and I'm glad I did. Between us all however my factory did turn out cheese, and he left me, and I heard, afterwards, that he got a job in a factory where he had a happy family life.

My third experiment in picking on a man to run my cheese-factory was the result of a well-written letter that I got in answer to an ad. It's a fine thing to be able to write a good letter, and the cheesemaker's letters I ever read were written by a number one cheesemaker! Anyway, I thought he had a very good conceit of himself, and what he told me about his abilities and experience made me think he would have made our present-day local instructors look like a bunch of boobs. I remember him telling me that the best "starter" for the milk was a piece of sour apple, and a milk was a gallon of rain-water! On another occasion he made me suspicious when he could get up steam in the boiler when we first started operations, but he could with dry! He should have been as dry as a bone, for he was always experimenting. He worried himself to a shadow over the cheese, however, as there was no strict grading system in those days, such as worries our modern cheesemakers.

The following spring I hired a man who failed to show up at the appointed time. He subsequently told me that he had changed his mind when he met with the telephone and try to find someone to take his place. Anyway, I got a young fellow about 18, who later on showed me that "appearances" could indeed only by his high opinion of his own abilities. On the whole, that family gave me a pretty exciting time, but I'll be darned if I'll tell about anything else. The experiences I've mentioned were the result of cutting him three cents a pound on all his shipments, and on the strength of that I'll find him a job on a nearby farm and get another man in his place. Then I'll have to cut him down on the score of poor quality, texture, flavor, etc., and the whole family may have had other faults, but these were the outstanding ones I remember. I married a wife after he had been with me about three months, by marrying one of the young girls of the community, so it's to be hoped that technicalness in hiring as a qualified cheesemaker may have left me without any serious features, after all.

It was about time, now, to get a good man for a change, and the next spring I managed to do it. Before he had answered my advertisement in order to get away from the crowd he had been going for a week with. All that summer he hardly left the factory, living on milk and cornflakes, mostly, and seeing up his money. Later in the year he got married and moved out, and I think I should get credit for giving at least one man his chance.

After that man came a Frenchman, and he was as happy and good-natured as all Frenchmen are supposed to be. We had a very wet spell in harvesting that summer, and whenever anyone mentioned the latest downpour of rain he would say: "Well, it was needed". I guess he had been brought up in one of our Scotch communities, for his body ever dared to find fault with the doings of Providence! I was sorry when he left me, but the war called him, and that was the end of that.

The next year I had some good men, but the war took them almost as fast as I could hire them. I think I had five that year, including my "man" from the farm, who filled in the gaps when the regulars left for overseas and going. I finally solved the problem by hiring a cheesemaker who was the victim of a cripple and in no danger of conscription. He only had to look at me when he left me, but the war called him, and that was the end of him.

DERBY WON IN RECORD BREAKING TIME

Ernest Young of Belleville Realizes Youthful Ambition Winning Soap Box Derby

Jack Shaddock Finishes Second and Douglas Rosebush Third

5,000 PRESENT

Winner Presented With M. E. Coyle Trophy at Conclusion of Race

Driving his sleek, blue, streamlined car down "Derby Hill" to set a new Canadian record of over 30 miles per hour, 13-year-old Ernest Young, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Young, 4 Pine St., drove to the championship of the Belleville Kinsmen - Ontario - Intelligencer "Soap Box Derby" championship before 5,000 fans on Front St. last evening to flash under the finishing wire in the final heat in front of the judges' box at M. E. Coyle trophy, emblematic of the Belleville District "Soap Box Derby" championship. In winning the title, Ernest eliminated Jack Shaddock, 15 Ontario St., in the semi-finals by his streamlined blue-colored racer to a stop that he was literally mobbed by the enthusiastic spectators who "shoulder-ed" the new champion and carried him above the judges' stand where President Bill Hurst, of the Belleville Kinsmen Club, presented the 1939 Soap Box Derby champion with the M. E. Coyle trophy, emblematic of the Canadian championship.

"How" does it feel to be champion?" asked Announcer Tommy Mason of Radio Station CHOV.

"Great and I'm going to try hard to bring the world's championship to Belleville," was the promised the smiling Ernie Young. Jack Shaddock and Doug Rosebush, who finished second and third in the major event, also received a thunderous applause when they were presented. Flashing a smile as broad as the speed at which he drove his car, Ernie Young also accepted additional prize awarded the champion and presented by the Kinsmen Club.

Flashed Off Ramp

Colorful as the former years the Derby added more tenseness last night as the drivers flashed off a modern electrically equipped ramp at phenomenal speed and continued down the 1,200 foot race course with the first trip down in 25 mes-per hour his first trip down in course se to make Nos. 1 of the senior race. Young's sleek car traversed the distance of the race course in 23 seconds to establish a new record. Only one mishap occurred in the entire 20 heats of both classes raced yesterday afternoon when one car slipped off the bottom of the ramp in the seventh heat of the major class. No injuries or damage resulted and the heat was repeated without further incident.

Prior to the big race the drivers paraded down "Derby Hill" in full view of the 1,500 patrons present. Headed by three motorcycle patrolmen with George and Bobby Wilson, of this city and previous Canadian "Soap Box Derby" winners, carrying large Soap Box Derby banners. Then came the Belleville Municipal Band and following the drivers wearing their shining white, all-steel crash helmets and racing jerseys. The parade made a stirring spectacle and was received with applause by the throng. Upon their return to the starting ramp, Official Starter Cleo B. Colling sent the first three races down the speedway and the race was officially under way.

Transported Back

Lining the course inside of snow fences were uniformed city policemen and firemen augmented by Provincial Police and traffic officers, who escorted the heat winners back to the starting ramp at the conclusion of each heat. The winning cars were transported back to the start by two speed boats. Belleville ambulance was also on the course in case of accident, but fortunately no misfortune marred the 5,000 fun event.

Loud speaking equipment was installed to keep the spectators acquainted with the proceedings, with the genial Tommy Mason acting in his usual capacity as announcer as chief announcer. The loud speaking equipment was also on the electric starting ramp were provided by Harold Hudson, of the Stewart - Warner - Alemite Company of this city.

Last night's races climaxed many weeks of preparation for the annual Kinsmen - Ontario - Intelligencer Soap Box Derby, with young Belleville laboring feverishly at the construction of their cars and dreaming of that coveted trip Akron, Ohio, and the world's championship Soap Box races, sponsored by the Chevrolet Motor Car Company and General Motors. Thirty-eight cars in all raced in the two events last night, 21 in the senior or major class from which Ernest was emerged winner, and 17 in the junior or "B" class, which was won by Allan Wright of this city.

A Close Finish

The closest finish of the entire night's racing came in the second heat of the "A" class race, when Bernard Meagher flashed by Kendall McCaffery at the finishing line to win by a mere inch. The fastest time recorded was made by the new champion, Ernie Young, who drove his sleek racer across the finishing line in 23 seconds in the seventh heat of the major class, being clocked by officials as travelling at a speed of 33 1-2 miles per hour at one time. Prior to the race Ernie Young's car was presented with a pen and pencil set by Doug Crewes, past president of National Kinsmen Clubs and an official of the Chevrolet Motors. This prize was awarded to young Turner for having the best upholstered car in the race.

Each race proved a test to the contestants as well as the machines, while so fast did several of the cars flash over the finishing line, that the speed of rubber was called in evidence as the drivers were forced to apply the brakes of their cars with added strength in order to avoid a crack-up with unfortunate results. Cars were parked below the finishing line.

Although the crowd was somewhat in the dark as to the outcome of the races, the sponsors were eminently satisfied with the success enjoyed by the third annual Kinsmen-Ontario - Intelligencer Soap Box Derby. We wish to thank Belleville and environs for this splendid support," stated President Bill Hurst after the race and this seemed to be the consensus of opinion of all connected with the Kinsmen Club and all others connected with the race.

Marking the end of the second year of the undeclared war between China and Japan, memorial services were held in New York's Chinatown, services at which the Chinese dead were honored and only the dominant theme of the ceremonies.

"O.K. Thanks" Says Winner To Large Throng

Ernest Young, 13, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Young, 4 Pine Street is one of the happiest boys in Belleville today for last night on Derby Hill, in a car constructed by Walker Hardware Company and which will be sponsored this year by Ontario Intelligencer at Akron, Ohio, he won the Soap Box Derby sponsored by the Kinsmen Club in conjunction with the local paper. Ernest drove a masterful, well timed race in each heat and in the final crossed the finish line with plenty to spare.

Although quite excited about the whole thing racing Kid-Kars is not a new game to Ernest who last year brought honor and fame to his native city by winding at Cobourg and on the Danforth in Toronto, the Belleville district title in line last night. his buddies, which were legion, for they seemed to come from all parts of the town, shouldered him high and he was taken to the Judges' box where he was presented with the Coyle Trophy by Kinsmen Club, Bill Hurst. He was then presented with a special prize sponsored by the General Motors, other members of the final heat.

How does he feel to win first and a trip to Akron, Ohio, Ernest said, "Tommy Mason special announcer for the event.

"Great," replied Ernest warmly.

Did you think you had it won long enough to win before the starting of the race?

"Yes, I did as I put a lot of work on it."

Here's hoping you win the International event at Akron.

"O.K. thanks," Ernest and then a kind mother gathered her boy in her arms for congratulations.

The Ontario Intelligencer reporter was given a few minutes to offer his congratulations and Ernest said he was grateful for the opportunity he appreciated it and that he would be in Akron to do his best all the way.

Asked if he was scared at the fast speed the car obtained coming off the ramp, Ernest replied, "no but in places on the course I thought I had no trouble in steering a straight course."

Did you think you could beat Shaddock in the first heat?

"I knew it was going to be tough but I figured I had a little more speed than he did and was in good fussle and is a good sport."

Ernest was all good to the audience was anxious about his car but it was well taken care of by his father and will be in ship shape when the party leaves for Akron, Ohio.

Allan Wright, winner of the Class B race told the reporter that he was going to do all he could to be in the race for the trip to Akron next year. It's fun to spend building a car and I wish to thank Mr. Kinsmen Club for all their favors. Harold Ristow, who finished second by a close margin was not downhearted taking his defeat in a sportsmanlike manner and said, "I will be in there next year with a better car."

The mother was also in the barn at the time but they were brought out to safety. Luckily the crop of hay was in the fields yet, but five tons of old hay was burned. Judges' stand from the scene the Mr. Sexsmith in their heavy loss.

"SALADA" ICED TEA

TRY IT THE "SALADA" WAY

Infuse 6 heaping teaspoons of Salada Black Tea in a pint of fresh, boiling water. After 6 minutes strain liquor into 2-quart container; add 1 to 1½ cups of sugar and juice of 2 lemons, strained; stir until sugar is dissolved; fill container with cold water. Do not add ice as tea to cool before adding cold water or liquid will become cloudy. Serve with chipped ice. The above makes 7 tall glasses.

Derby Sidelights

All-steel crash helmets and racing sweaters were presented to the Soap Box Derby drivers prior to the race by the Kinsmen Club at the Y.M.C.A. The boys were also treated to cream and soft drinks by the sponsors and a delightful hour before the parade was enjoyed.

Kinsmen Club President Bill Hurst reviewed the rules and regulations while Tracey Shaw, on behalf of the sponsors, presented General Motors Ltd., spoke to the contestants at the "T" stressing sportsmanship as their greatest goal.

Present on Derby Hill to witness the race last night was a contingent of Toronto Danforth business men who sponsor a similar event in Toronto later in the season. The Toronto delegation was somewhat surprised, not only at the speed but the splendid manner in which the Belleville race was conducted.

Those red trimmed white jerseys worn by each heat winner were presented by the Stewart-Warner-Alemite Company and were the kids proud of them! Harold Hudson was permitted to keep their racing sweaters, while jerseys and the crash helmets, which were presented by General Motors Company.

Doug Turner, brother of Walter Turner, the 1937 city kid car derby champion, won the pen and pencil set presented by the Kinsmen for the best upholstered car in the race.

The Belleville Municipal Band under the baton of Lieut. Fred Johnson deserves a word of praise for their splendid efforts in entertaining the crowd and supplying the marching music for the gala parade, the preceded the great event.

The newly-constructed electric ramp governed by Arthur L. Young, general manager of the Stewart-Warner-Alemite Corporation, was the last word in such mechanical equipment and sent the eager contestants into the three-second course with precision and accuracy. It was undoubtedly a decided improvement over the old hand-lever type and was safe in every detail.

Over two miles of snow fences were erected to protect the drivers and keep the patrons off the race course.

Members of the Kinsmen Club who in conjunction with the Ontario Intelligencer staged this popular youthful sporting event wish to say "we thank you", for the splendid co-operation of the patrons and their loyalty to this increasingly popular Kinsmen Soap Box Derby.

The look of disappointment that fell over the faces of the unsuccessful heat winners was most pathetic at times. All of their hopes for the future seemed dashed upon the rocks of despair. "Forget it kids, there'll be another race next year and you may win then."

Youthful admirers of the newly-crowned soap box champ "shouldered" Ernie Young and the enthusiastic ovation he was carried to the judges' stand that followed the win of E. Coyle trophy, which is emblematic of the district title and secures Ernie a trip to Akron and the world's championship.

Jack Shaddock, who finished second, and Doug Rosebush, third, also received a splendid ovation for their efforts. All in all it was a great night for the youth of Belleville and the Kay Servis, who won the lucky draw number and a trip to the World's Fair, donated by the Kinsmen-Ontario Intelligencer Soap Box Derby.

With a special telephone system installed on Derby Hill last night, Announcer Tommy Mason was able to ably accumulated with the facts at both the pits, behind the starting ramp and from Starter Cleo Colling at the starting line, and he rapidly acquainted the patrons with these interesting facts over the broadcasting system.

Douglas Crewes, past national president of the Kinsmen Club, was an interested spectator last evening and congratulated the local club members on the successful achievements for a very fine derby. "You boys certainly know how to put on a derby. The one thing I like about it is the speed in which the heats were run off and the excellent manner in which the course was kept clear of all interference."

Some of the drivers had trouble steering their cars during the early part of the race but good sportsmanship was shown for the boys steered away from another car rather than strike it and put it out of competition. Sportsmanship of the highest calibre was shown all evening and if the derby does nothing else but instill in the boys the splendid sportsmanship of life, it has fulfilled its purpose.

"Pie" Wilson who has attended the last two International Soap Box Derbies at Akron says that Ernie of Belleville will stand a least the 60-mile an hour clip off the fast Akron speedway.

Traffic officers clocked Ernie Young at 33½ miles per hour on the Derby Hill grade, but it must be remembered that the take off in Akron is of a much greater one.

Coming all the way from Oshawa and from the General Motors of Canada, Tracey Shaw, the well-known hockey player was the official representative of the General Motors and acted as the course director. Following the completion of the races Belleville Mr. Shaw remarked: "This is one of the greatest amateur sporting events I have ever had the privilege of watching and should be an example to all those who love true amateur competition," stated Mr. Shaw after witnessing last night's races.
